

The Pen and the Purse. There is an idea that is simply erratic. That the pen and the purse must together keep time.

That never a mortal mid life's earnest labours Can find any poetry nearer the earth— On actors, or heroes, in friends or in neighbour.

Write only for lure? Now where were the glory That lights up the epic of Paradise Lost.

A wise little linnet indulged in a fable, And said, "My dear nestlings, the wild woods below Have birds of all feathers, to sing, some are able.

But the noisiest critic you'll find is the crow. "His tireless 'caw, caw,' will distract and annoy you.

He's an envious bird and forever on wing. Heed not the confusion, he cannot destroy you.

But lift up your hearts to your Maker and sing. Like ripples that ride on the broad rolling billow.

And only find rest when they break on the beach. So let Life's even tide find you a pillow.

But sing out your praises while envy can preach. Western Rural.

Fish Lines Six Miles Long. EACH WITH 20,000 HOOKS, BAITED TO LURE THE STURGEON.

"They fish with lines six miles long in Winnebago Lake, Wisconsin, and use 20,000 hooks on every line," said a New York fisherman who has been there.

"One of these lines will reach half way across the lake. It is a rope an inch in diameter. It is carried out in the lake, large buoys attached to it at intervals to keep it on the surface.

The 20,000 hooks, baited with pieces of meat or fish, are lowered to the bottom of the lake by "snoods" of the proper length, attached to the line. It takes twenty boats, with two men in each, to look after this big fish line.

Each boat has 1,000 hooks in its charge. The hooks are placed eighteen inches apart, and to bait all the hooks once requires not less than 1,000 pounds of meat. It takes the forty men and twenty boats ten hours to set the line for the first time.

After that the fishermen are constantly employed in going to and fro over the line, hauling in the sturgeon that have been caught on the hooks, and rebaiting where it is necessary.

"To haul in a seventy-pound sturgeon from the bottom of the lake is an exciting piece of work, but requires more strength than skill, as the fish always has the hook several inches down his throat, having sucked bait and all down without any regard to consequences.

There is no danger of losing the fish unless the snood of the hook breaks. When the fish is hauled to the surface a gaff, like a meat hook, is thrust into the side of its head, and the sturgeon is drawn into the boat and knocked on the head with a mallet. The hook is cut out of its throat, rebaited, and thrown back into the lake.

"The average catch of sturgeons is one to every ten hooks. When a boat is loaded with all it will carry of sturgeon, the fishermen row back to the shore, where others take the fish and dispose of them. The fisherman knows the particular section of the line on which they work by the arrangement of the buoys. These are placed ten feet apart and every 150th one is red. The space between the red buoys contain 1,000 hooks. The sections are numbered, and each boat has its number corresponding with the section it fishes.

While the average catch is one sturgeon to ten hooks, it is no uncommon thing for the fishermen to find but one or two on an entire section of 1,000 hooks.

"The Lake Winnebago sturgeon is highly prized among the lumbermen and others in the region. Its flesh is finer, and of better flavor than the salt water sturgeon's. The fish sells at six cents a pound at retail. Large quantities are salted and smoked, for use in the lumber camps."

Household Hints. A laundry hint.—To wash successfully the striped cotton undershirts so universally worn, put salt in the water in which they are washed, salt in the rising water, and salt in the starch; do not have the starch boiling when they are put into it.

ly nothing could be more refreshing after eating heartily of meats and salads.

A fine sauce.—An appetizing sauce for meat of any kind, or for fish, is made of two tablespoonfuls of grated horse-radish, one of made mustard, half a teaspoonful of salt, the same of sugar, with vinegar enough to cover it.

Fresh herrings.—Fresh herrings are a popular dish at this time of the year with many cooks, but no one has eaten them at their best if they are fried. They should be boiled, and be served with nice sauce, made of melted butter with a little thickening of flour, and with parsley or olives chopped and put in.

An Easily made Child's Suit.—Some pretty little dresses can be made of the fine qualities of gingham or of seersucker that the children who do not look at least respectably dressed must be pitted, for they are without doubt neglected in other directions than clothing. A very simple way to make these for small children, from one and a half to five years, is to lay three broad pleats, sew them, and spread them out, then lay the pattern on for the back of the dress; a sack pattern or a plain apron pattern will do for this. Cut it out and after securing the pleats firmly down as far as the bottom of the waist, rip out the stitches holding them below that, and let them fall loosely, in order to have the necessary fullness to the skirt. The fronts may be plaited or may be perfectly plain with the exception of a strip down the front, upon which the buttons are sewed. It is very becoming if made double-breasted, with two rows of buttons; put a strap across the back and a round collar on, and you have a very pretty suit.—N. Y. Post.

MRS. SOPHIA POTTER'S Bone Rheumatic Liniment

IT is a fact worth knowing that Mrs. Sophia Potter's Bone Rheumatic Liniment cannot be excelled for removing pain and soreness. It is no worthless trash, as some may suppose, simply because they have been imposed upon by others; but is positively the "King of Pain." Sore throat cannot stand before its power.

All we ask is a trial that you may be convinced of the truth of our statement. Our experience is that one bottle tried also sells many more.

See circular for particulars and testimonials, and try a bottle—it will not fail to do all that is promised.
