Racy Literature.

"Will yer honor take a car?" said a Dublin car-driver to a gentleman. "No, thank you, I am able to walk," said the gentleman. "May you long be able but seldom wilin'," was the witty reply.

A smock-frock philosopher, whom I once met in the country, compared wife-beating to thrashing a sack of flour. "You may knock all the fine out of it," he said, "but 'pend 'pon it, the coorses will stop behind.

"Bridget, what have you done with the cream? Those children cannot eat skim-milk for breakfast." "Shure, marm, and it isn't myself that would be afther givin' the scum to yees. I tuk that off and give it to the cats."

BEAUTIES.—A correspondent says that the beauties generally die old maids. They set such a value on themselves they don't find purchasers until the market is closed. Out of a dozen beauties who have come out within the past eighteen years, eleven, he says, still remain single.

The latest case of absence of mind is recorded of a lady about to "whip up" some eggs for sponge-cake, who whipped the baby instead, and sang "Watt's Cradle Hymn" to the eggs.

I would have, if possible, a wise man be contented with his lot, even with a shrew; for, though he cannot make her better, he may, you see, make himself better by her means.—Steele.

An Indiana Husband advertises for his runaway wife, saying that she "has left him just as the summer's work is beginning, notwithstanding he has had the expense of wintering her."

A lawyer, engaged in a case, tormented a witness so much with questions, that the poor fellow at last cried for water.—"There," said the Judge, "I thought you'd pump him dry."

WOUND UP.—An old author quaintly remarks, "Avoid arguments with ladies. In spinning yarns among silks and satins a man is sure to be worsted and twisted. And when a man is worsted and twisted, he may consider himself wound up."

A man's wife is his best lawyer, his best counsel, his best judge, his best adviser, and also the cheapest and most reasonable.

An Indianian wants a patent for an invention "to make new potatoes out of last year's crop," without planting them.

A Texas paper says that, though "courting can still go on, getting married is played out," there being no one in office there who is authorized to perform the ceremony.

A Boston paper says the Jubilee folks there have thoroughly scraped the country for catgut, for the mammoth peace festival, and aspired to secure the lunar bow, but found it too "high strung."

A Western paper says: "Wanted at this office, an editor who can please everybody. Also a foreman who can so arrange the paper as to allow every man's advertisement to head the column."

A young man, "illiterate but polite," on being invited to attend a wedding, sent a note in response saying "I regret that circumstances repugnant to the acquiesce will prevent my acceptance of the invite."

A Wisconsin paper having exulted over the fact of its coming out in a new dress, a rival sheet remarks: "In this, as in everything else, they are an age behind our office, which was supplied with new material years ago."

A curious card appears in a Texas paper. A man advertises that his brother is candidate for Sheriff of the County because he himself is disfranchised, but that he is to be the real officer. "You are voting for me," he says, "that is, for my benefit, and I am to receive all the pay, if my brother is elected."

In a church not far from this city, the ladies, having re-carpeted it, put up a notice requesting all gentlemen who chew tobacco, to "leave their mouths at the door."

Births, marriges and deaths in an Oregon journal are arranged under the respective heads of "Come" "Fixed to Stay," and "Gone." The second would not do in Chicago.

A cotemporary complains of the lack of enterprise of the wealthy men of Cincinnati and St. Louis, and says "the great want of each city is about thirty-five first-class funerals."

Lamartine was asked by a friend if he did not spend too much money in advertising. "No," was his reply, "advertisements are absolutly necessary. Even divine worship (le bon Dieu) needs to be advertised. Else what is the meaning of church bells?"

A western paper having announced the "shooting of a wildcat by a little boy five feet eight inches long," an exchange queries "what they call big boy there.

HOW TO PREVENT A PLACE FROM THRIVING.—If you wish to keep a town or city from thriving, don't put up any more buildings than you can conveniently occupy yourself. If you should accidentally have an empty dwelling, and any one wants to rent it, ask him about three times the actual value of it. Demand a Shylock price for every spot of ground God has given you stewardship over. Turn a cold shoulder to every mechanic or buisness man seeking a home among you. Look at every new comer with a scowl.

Run down the work of every new workman. Go abroad for wares, rather than trade with those who seek to do business in your midst. Wrap yourself up within yourself and cover yourself up with a coat of impervious selfishness. There is no more effectual way to retard the growth of a town than actions like these enumerated, and there are people in every town who are pursuing the above course every day of their lives, and to whom the above remarks are respectfully offered for their careful attention.—Salem Gazette.

The Large and increasing sale of these

PERFECTED GLASSES

Is a sure proof of their superiority. We were satisfied that they would be appreciated here as elsewhere, and that the reality of the advantages offered to wearers of our beautiful lenses, viz.: the ease and comfort, the assured and readily ascertained improvement of the sight, and the brilliant assistance they give in all cases, were in themselves so apparent on trial, that the result could not be otherwise than it has, in the almost general adoption of our Celebrated Perfected spectacles by the residents of this locality.

With a full knowledge of the value of the assertion, we claim that they are the most perfect optical aids ever manufactured. To those needing Spectacles, we afford at all times an opportunity of procuring the best and most desirable.
