

Capt. Boyton's Parrot.

Captain Paul Boyton owns a talking parrot, which has a habit of imitating crying babies. On Friday the Captain was bringing the bird in a basket to New York from his home at Flushing.

"Captain," said the officer, "there's an old gent says you've got a baby in the basket."

"What nonsense!" said Boyton, as a crowd gathered; and suppose I have?"

"Well, it's a curious way to carry a child and you'll excuse me if I insist on seeing it."

"All right," said the Captain, as he cut the cover of the basket open with a pen-knife. The parrot stuck its head out of the basket, and yelled, "Polly wants a cracker!"

And now the policeman would like to meet the "old gent" who gave him the information which led to the laughter which followed.—N. Y. Herald.

Literary and Dramatic.

The popularity of Shakespeare's plays with German audiences is shown by some statistics published in the year book of the German Shakespeare Society, by which it appears that, taking the whole of the German companies, in two years and a half ending December 31, 1882, there were given in Germany 1,834 performances of Shakespeare's plays.

The much praised coolness of Manager Abbey in standing with cigar in mouth gazing at the destruction of his own theatre by fire, recalls the story of Sheridan, who, when his theatre was burning, went into a bar-room near by and, ordering a glass of wine, sat down by the window and watched the conflagration. Upon being rallied for this, he answered:—"Is it anything strange that a man would sit drinking by his own fire?"

While Mrs. Siddons was playing one night an obstinate man in the crowded pit insisted upon standing up. A disturbance took place, which threatened to become a row. It was, however, arrested by the witty Henry Erskine. Coming to the front of his box, he quietly said, yet so as to be heard by all:—"Pray, excuse the gentlemen; don't you see it is only a tailor resting himself?" The effect was magical. A burst of laughter put everyone in good humor, and the obstinate man took his seat.
