Egg-Topped Veal Cutlet Is Favorite English Recipe

IN BRISTOL, England, our party of American press representatives were guests at the Grand Spa Hotel. The first evening we had a leisurely informal dinner, each to his own taste, in the spacious, gracious dining room. The menu featured many foods unusual in the United States.

QUEEN'S FAVORITE
"For example, these tiny shrimps 'potted in butter,'" said the Chef. "This creme de la Reine, cream of chicken, soup was a favorite of Queen Victoria."

"There are many fish dishes, game, unusual entrees such as escalope Holstein — veal cutlet with poached egg — no salads (these are more often served at luncheon in England) but a wide selection of fresh vegetables carefully prepared. The hearts of celery au Parmesan look most appetizing."

FINE MEAL
"The desserts and pastry are excellent. And to finish the meal with a savory in the British custom, there is a wide choice of hot canapés and assorted cheeses, all specialties de la maison. "Certainly this is excellent cuisine."

Among the dishes we enjoyed were crevette (shrimp) cocktail, veal cutlet Holstein, hearts of celery Parmesan and Crepes Alaska, all featured today.

TOMORROW'S DINNER
Shrimp-Grapefruit Cocktail
Veal Cutlet Holstein
Parried Potatoes
Braised Hearts of Celery Parmesan
Crepes Alaska
Coffee

For the Family: Omit the first course; serve bananas with honey and lemon juice for dessert.

SHRIMP-GRAPEFRUIT COCKTAIL
3 medium grapefruit
30 cleaned cooked medium shrimp
Vinaigrette dressing
Halve grapefruit and remove seeds. Loosen segments with sharp knife, then take out every other segment. In each empty place a shrimp — tail-end sticking up toward center. Chill.

Pour over French dressing piquante just before serving. Garnish with water cress or curly endive.

VEAL CUTLET HOLSTEIN
2 pounds veal cutlet sliced 1/2 inch thick
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon monosodium glutamate
1/2 teaspoon pepper

ELLEN'S DIARY "He Thanks Thee Best Who Serves Thee Best"

February put rose in the gray of the smokes which billowed from the chimney pots this morning. And set a lovely calm over the lightly white winter-fires.

"This is the day!" Mack smiled happily, passing by the door on his way to join other lads of this team called on to play hockey at the rink, an event which brings a rare delight to young hearts. Just to belong, to have a place on a hockey team is to consider oneself to be fortunate indeed.

"This is the day!" Granddaughter beamed, later, obviously pleased to have returned for the weekend to home; to catch up on the news of the farm and to be a part of the family again.

In the afternoon, she went with other youngsters of the neighborhood to the pond up the stream, to skate away happy hours.

"I like the Saturdays," Alex said when he came from the house across the lane then to visit, "for it's the day when she comes home again. And," he nodded, "she never comes that she doesn't bring me something nice! Last week it was a book: The Three Bears. Today it was... but I must go and bring it over so you will see for yourself what it is."

Back along the path he had come, he hurried, Scampie ahead, a kitten following the little lad who returned presently with his new treasure.

"Why, it's a slate!" he said. "Yes, a magic slate," he smiled. "I think," he said, "it's something like the one Anne-you know?—in Anne of Green Gables (Mother is reading it to Mack and me these evenings)—when she went to school. And one time," he chuckled, "when the boy in the seat behind hers, pulled her braids and said 'Carrots!' because her hair was red, as quick as flash she crowned him with it! His name was Gilbert. When they grew up they married. Now, wasn't that queer!"

And all the time the hours, sunlit and lovely were spending away, bearing us on to week's close. And now for the day's light, the week has given us: the privileges enjoyed the work which keeps hands busy, and the joys of the round that we know; for the dark of the firm and the fields softly white, and the wide winter-peace which now enfolds us, we return our best thanks. Grace Noll Crowell writes of this:

MARY HAWORTH Husband's New Attitude Baffles Faithful Spouse

Dear Mary Haworth: Two years ago we had a lovely home and furniture. Then my husband sold our house, gave up his business, put our things in storage and moved out here to his home town, to be with his parents, brothers and sisters.

My parents are four thousand miles away. In the town where we met and married—12 years ago, I was happy there. Now it is different. We live in an old house, with old furniture.

My husband gets up in the morning, eats, reads, never says a word. Goes to work, comes home for dinner, eats, reads, never says a word. Goes out again. Comes back, reads or figures.

If I TRY to make conversation he tells me not to bother him, or he hasn't time to talk. This goes on for months. He never takes me anywhere nor buys me a gift, not even at Christmas, although he has money and makes sure he has been on weekends.

I feel I am his slave; he has said so many times. If I didn't love him I could walk out. I hate this town. I could never like it, no matter how I try. I want him to move back to our own town, to the good life we had. He can get work so that's no problem.

I know a wife should go where her husband goes; but this town and my husband's behavior since we've been here I can't take. He was never like this until we came out here. When we have company he talks and talks, but not to me. Have you any ideas?

H.Y.

Dear H.Y.: It sounds as if your husband is emotionally sick as if he is heavily beset by morbid tension, unconscious conflict and mental depression. A good coasting backward anxiously toward childish dependency upon his family — in search of help with this problem that he can't fathom.

It seems that nature is trying to put you wise to his need of frightened, sympathetic, intelligent help.

Marked personality changes for the worse usually precede or accompany emotional breakdown. And the fact that he is glumly refuses any friendly ex-

Hair Specialist Here Monday Will Show Men and Women How to Save Hair and Prevent Baldness

OTTAWA, Ont. New home treatment methods for saving hair and improving its growth will be demonstrated in Charlottetown, Monday, Feb. 12th at the Islander Motel Lodge.

Trichologist R. G. Lang will be in charge, representing the dynamic Roberts Hair & Scalp Specialist organization. He will personally examine hair-worried men and women from 12:00 to 8:00 p.m.

"This new treatment is neither 'mail order' nor 'cure-all.' It is adapted to the individual after a personal examination and progress is checked at regular intervals by a Roberts Specialist.

Who Can Be Helped?
Will the new Roberts treatment cure baldness? "No!" For we cannot help men and women who are sick-head after years of gradual hair loss. But if you still have hair and your scalp is still creating hair, you can at least save and thicken what you have.

Other conditions that usually bring on excessive hair-loss—dandruff, itching, over-illness or dryness, follicle plugged with sebum or sebaceous—can be corrected by the Roberts home treatment if caught in time.

"DON'T WAIT UNTIL IT'S TOO LATE."
Baldness won't wait for doubters to be convinced, you're going to keep right on losing hair 'til you're bald—unless you get your scalp in healthy, hair-growing condition again.

Examine You Free
We want to make it clear that you incur absolutely no charge or obligation by coming in for an examination.

Your only obligation is to yourself. We do not accept cases that will not respond.

Guarantee Satisfaction
The Roberts Specialists will give you a written guarantee that you must be satisfied within 30 days or it will cost you nothing.

For a free examination and discussion of your hair problems, ask the desk clerk for Mr. Lang's room number. He does not make appointments, so come in at your convenience.

Examinations are given in private.
