included in the ranks of the men. He has five years seniority over Granddaughter his cousin, the next in age to him. But to please the younger four who pit wit and strength against his, they play together on the lawn where today both pup and goat also shared in the fun. And many a young laugh echoed, and many a voice was raised in general excitement obtaining, before machines went outward-bound to fieldwork, and the place settled into its customary workaday calm.

"Wouldn't it be nice, Ellen," James remarked wistfully moments ago when we sat on that same verandah watching the shadows of dusk spill down the valley "if the summer would stay as it is? No aging. The fields fresh and green and the leaves — yes, all just as it is."

There is however no staying it. And now another day of it, pictured, and pleasant is no more. Until tomorrow — — — Diary — Good-night.

MR. AND MRS. R. J. INKPEN Couple Pledge Vows At Saint Dunstan's Basilica

A pretty wedding took place at Saint Dunstan's Basilica on Saturday morning, June 20th, at 9:30 when Rev. Father Hammill united in a double ring ceremony Doris Phyllis Tulle, youngest daughter of Mr. George Tulle, and Robert Joseph Inkpen, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Inkpen of Sydney, N.S.

The bride given in marriage by her father, looked charming in a ballerina gown of Chantilly lace over tulle with a shoulder length veil. She carried a white prayer book and orchid.

The bridesmaid was Miss Freda Tulle, sister of the bride, who wore a street length dress of blue nylon with matching head-dress and mitts and carried a basket of pink and white carnations.

The bride's sister, Mrs. Vincent Mitchell wore black nylon, with pink accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

The groom's mother wore a sky blue dress with white accessories and a corsage of pink and white carnations.

Donald MacDonald was best man and the ushers were Dr. Kenneth Tulle and Allison Tulle, brothers of the bride.

After the wedding a reception was held at the Queen Hotel for immediate relatives of the bride and groom. The bride's table was centered with a three tier wedding cake.

After the reception the bride and groom left on a short honeymoon through the Maritimes. For going away the bride wore a coral dress with beige accessories. They will reside in Charlottetown where the groom is employed with T. Eaton and Co.

Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. John Inkpen, Mr. and Mrs. James Inkpen, Sydney, N.S., Dr. and Mrs. Kenneth Tulle, Dalhousie, N.B., Mrs. Vincent Mitchell, Newcastle, N.B., Miss Rose Tulle and Mr. Veto Marrello, Boston, Mass.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Grandchildren, Pup And Goat All Romp Together

"We should put an end to that one," we remarked to Granddaughter visiting with us on the front verandah this afternoon. A July-veil of heat shimmered over the fields and nearer, bees hummed that sleepy tune of summer which with the birds' contented chirps, one recalls with some longing when the sparrows are almost our only guests and they in, dejected flocks of feathers in the leafless rosebush by the window.

That sparrow so appealing in her home-building not long ago, we suffered her to lift timbers for it up to an eaves' nook of this old house came to another dilemma in her motherhood today. A fledgling of that nest, testing young wings had lit not far from where we sat and, was content to remain there despite his mother's dismay. As innocent and trustful as a babe he sat in a pool of sunlight unaware of any danger threatening him there.

"Yes, we should," we nodded. "A tap of the broom... and there'd be one less to worry the songbirds."

"Why, Nanna!" Granddaughter exclaimed, "how cruel to think of the like. See how fond she is of her baby. It would break her heart if any harm were to come to it. Maybe," she offered, "she doesn't like being a sparrow, and having to do the things they do-quarreling with the songbirds that come to nest here. She's a kind mother. And isn't he the cutest thing! See him blink in the sunlight," she smiled.

"We'll let her enjoy her baby, won't we? And she added with a look up and down the valley "all of the summer."

Our surroundings had settled by then into that pleasant afternoon — hush usual at Alderlea when the fathers have gone to the fields. They were weeding a patch of turnips toward the far end of the farms, continuing despite the heat, we thought should have given them a spell of rest. They were grateful for the heat-to wither the weeds removed, and to encourage the seedlings' growth delayed by June's coolness and damp. Of the workers, Gage and Mack are privileged when the work irks them, to tie off to the stream and the angling there.

And sometimes, as today, meal-time returns them with a treasure taken from it to make fresh and delectable fare.

When a meal-time gathers all the children to Alderlea, it is invariably followed by a period of play. We have to stop and consider a moment before we reckon on the number of grandchildren, now that Jamie the eldest is in-
