

Pearson Stresses Need For Charity And Understanding

ONTARIO (CP) — External Affairs Minister Pearson says that to assume that real peace has been achieved because four men smiled at the cameras at Geneva would be dangerous and unrealistic.

Pearson told 8,000 delegates at the world convention of the Churches of Christ (Disciples) Thursday night that hope could be taken from the easing of international tensions in recent months.

"We added, real peace is not to be found in conferences of leaders at or below the summit but in the hearts and souls of men.

"We should not indulge in any premature rejoicing or loud hosannas," he said. "We must not become unreasonably exultant when things seem to be going well on the international front; nor unreasonably discouraged when there are setbacks, as there will certainly be."

ONLY ONE ANSWER

In the long run there was only one answer to the challenge of interdependence in the hydrogen age.

"It is the answer of Christian charity and understanding; and in showing by our actions—not merely by our words—that we are in truth our brother's keepers.

At the same time Mr. Pearson, a Presbyterian minister's son, questioned the influence of organized Christian religion as a unifying force for world peace.

"Records of the past make us doubt whether organized Christian religion is likely to play an important part in driving home the recognition of that interdependence of peoples which will lead to greater unification than has ever been achieved before."

SMALL MINORITY

After 2,000 hours, he said, Christianity remains the religion of a relatively small minority of the world's people. It was so divided that in the United States there were 70 different Protestant faiths, and Christians for centuries had contended against each other theologically and on the battlefield.

"Unless Christianity can spread among Christians as well as non-Christians, charity, tolerance and understanding it will not be adequate to face the challenge of this shrinking atomic world.

The main job of Christianity, he said, was to lead people away from arrogance and the assumption that they alone possess all truth and virtue.

Budworm Battle Goes On In New Brunswick Forests

FREDERICTON (CP) — There still is no sign of a let-up in the budworm attack on New Brunswick's forests and again large areas will be sprayed in 1956, it was reported Wednesday by directors of Forest Protection Limited.

While a decision as to the exact size of the forest which appears to require the application of spray was doused with insecticide, two or three years ago.

"It seems we may be in for a fairly long program of spraying," stated Dr. R. E. Balch, head of the entomological laboratory, science service department of agriculture. Continued support of the provincial government was assured by Hon. Norman Buchanan, minister of lands and mines who reported that the federal government had expressed its willingness to further extend its financial assistance to the province in connection with the work.

PERMANENT REDUCTION

An informal discussion of the effects of spraying on salmon, Dr. C. J. Kerswill of the fisheries research board of Canada, stated that spraying in 1954 on the Miramichi River, where observations are being conducted, is not likely to result in permanent reductions in its salmon population.

In Memoriam

MRS. J. WALTER MacEWEN

On Thursday morning, July 21, 1956 she passed away in the Prince Edward Island Hospital Mrs. Annie J. MacEwen of Bristol, in her seventy-fourth year.

She was born at Savage Harbor, P. E. I., on June 3rd, 1882, daughter of the late Eliza Coffin and his wife, the former Caroline Clark. Her girlhood days were spent at her home and at school in Savage Harbor, with about a year as nurse-in-training at Butler Hospital, Providence, R. I.

On Sept. 20, 1906 she was united in marriage with J. Walter MacEwen of West St. Peter's at whose farm homestead they resided for about a year; after that they moved to Bristol where they made their home. Of this union were born two children, the elder of whom died in infancy. Her husband predeceased her nine and a half years ago.

She leaves to mourn their loss and cherish her memory, one sister Bessie, Mrs. Lester MacEwen of St. Peter's Harbor; her son M. Stirling and his wife Edith. She is also survived by a grandson, Walter, whom she loved dearly, and by several nieces and nephews.

Her funeral was held on Saturday, July 26, with a short service at her home, then at Bristol United Church, of which she was a member, and was largely attended, giving testimony of respect and love which was hers as a neighbour and friend. Rev. A. Frank MacLean took his text for this service from Psalm 90: "We spend our years as a tale that is told." Hymns sung were favorites of the deceased: "Face to Face"; "The Lord is my Shepherd"; and "Safe in the Arms of Jesus". The choir, with Mrs. Vernon Anderson as organist, sang "In the Sweet Bye and Bye".

The pallbearers were Messrs. Harry Davidson, James Arnold, Patrick Sinnott, Harry MacEwen, Vernon Anderson and Cyrus La Pierre.

Interment was in the family plot at West St. Peter's Cemetery, beside her late husband and infant son.

The floral tributes were: Pillow—Stirling and Edith. Spray—Walter.

Wreaths—Bessie and Lester Beth, Sid and family Louise and Leonard.

JESUS RENOUNCED USE OF FORCE

"Mightier than the sword," said Napoleon, the consummate swordsman, "is an idea whose time has come." Now it seems that the idea has attacked the sword and is about to win. The present hope of humanity is that it will win.

It is tremendously impressive that Einstein's last word was an appeal to governments to renounce war forever as the means for settling their disputes. It was he whose investigations made possible the release of the energy of the atom, and he points out that war with the nuclear weapons that he and his fellow-scientists have put into the nation's hands will mean the destruction of humanity. With Einstein in this appeal is a group of the greatest scientists of modern times.

Now they have been joined in this appeal by winners of the Nobel Peace Prize, who point out with equal unanimity and urgency the need for immediate action. On the eve of a conference between the rulers of the mightiest world-powers of all time they echo the appeal on the ground that it is now persuasion or annihilation.

Our attention has been drawn to this alternative by a quotation from Professor A. N. Whitehead's book entitled: Adventures of Ideas. He says that "toward the end of his life, Plato reached and published his final conviction that the divine agency in the world is to be conceived as a persuasive energy, and not as a coercive agency."

"This doctrine should be looked upon as one of the greatest intellectual discoveries in the history of religion."

Now it is unlikely that Plato had ever seen the writings of the prophets of Israel, but both Micah and Isaiah have a passage that states this dream of peace in language more vivid than Plato's. We find it in Isaiah 2:2-4 and Micah 4:2-4.

SAME CENTURY

These two prophets belong to the same century, and it is possible that either might have quoted the other, but it is more probable that both quoted this divine word from an unknown prophet whose inspired utterance was cherished in the memory of their generation.

He describes the nations coming to the Lord God of Israel, and reports them as saying: "He will teach us of His ways and we will walk in His path; for out of Zion shall go forth the law and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. And He shall judge among peoples, and shall reprove strong nations afar off; and they shall beat their sword into ploughshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

Nearly 3,000 years have passed since those words were spoken, and how far we are from their fulfillment today! We are writing at the close of a day of incessant rains, downpour succeeding downpour hour after hour, and at this

The class was examined and the following candidates received Red Cross awards.

Aluminum was named by a man who never saw it. In 1807 the great scientist Sir Humphrey Davy decided that alumina had a metallic base, but failed to find a way to extract the metal. But he went ahead anyway and christened the unseen metal "aluminum". Later he changed his mind and re-named it aluminum. Both versions are still used.

Wonder if the English scientist ever dreamed of the day when, in far-off Canada, millions of hydro-electric horsepower would unlock the riches of alumina to produce more than 500,000 tons of aluminum a year?

is love." So when He faced the question of how He was to use His power, He decided that He could use it only to express the love which He had found in His Father's heart.

Before His mind in His Temporalities arose His people's expectations of a Messiah who would set up His throne in Jerusalem and by His might bring the nations into subjection. But this required the use of force and Jesus decided there and then that He could not reveal His Father's love by crushing people into submission.

All through His ministry He lived and worked by this law of love unlimited, and among those who clamored for His crucifixion where those disappointed patriots who wanted a Messiah who would lead them, as David did, in victorious war. But this does not mean inaction—an easy-going acceptance of things as they are. Jesus calls His people to a resolute and energetic campaign for peace as the conquerors of old made for war. Violence has gone the circle and returned to the point from which it started: the powers in man's hands are so great that war means mutual destruction. If there ever could be a conqueror in such a struggle, he will sit on a throne of wreckage and reign over a world in ruins.

So in every area of human relationships, Christ's people are called to bring in this new law of settlement by persuasion rather than by coercion.

In the maintenance of our personal rights, in the conflicts between class and class, in the civil war between man and man, and labor this new spirit must prevail, as well as between nations.

At the root of all our difficulties is the spirit of the individual.
