EVICTED BY M. MENIER.

The English settlers at Fox bay, Anticosti, have at last been evicted by M. Menier, the French chocolate king; but through the kindness of friends who have interested themselves in their condition, they are on their way to the prairies. Exceedingly painful is the case of these English speaking Methodists. Their fathers settled at Fox bay, Anticosti, thirty years ago, on land that had been allotted to them by the then proprietors. When M. Menier bought the Island as a game preserve he claimed everything, and ordered the people to leave their home without delay. In his effort to drive them out M. Menier was aided by Mr. Tarte, who evinced great interest in his claim. Mr. Tarte defended the proposed eviction, and took occasion in Parliament to describe the English Methodist settlers as wreckers and murderers. He said they were there to lure ships to their doom by exhibiting false lights. This assault upon the character of the unfortunate people awakened resentment among English-speaking Canadians generally. It was uncalled for; it was deliberately untrue. During the past year, M. Menier has operated through the courts, and the judges have reluctantly had to decide that the settlers who could show no deeds were subject to removal. In the unhappy victims, Rev. Dr. Griffith, chairman of the Methodist district of Quebec, has taken a benevolent, humane, and fraternal interest. He sought to protect them, and aided them when their removal became a necessity. His action has incurred the displeasure of the Parisian millionaire, and this gentleman actually sought to have him arrested and transported to Baie St. Paul for trial on the charge of inciting the people to resist the decision of the court. Failing in this, M. Menier is suing Dr. Griffith for $5,000 on the same allegation. The suit has produced much surprise. Meanwhile the evicted settlers, penniless and suffering, have reached Quebec on their way to the West. It is altogether probable that in the end the change will be beneficial to them, and their children. But, meanwhile, the loss of their homes, their boats, their little lobster factories, and their fishing plants is a sorrowful thing for them. They go West, not as wreckers who lure ships and sailors to their doom, but as good and religious people who deserve well.

THE WAY THE BOERS CHARGE.

A Boer charge is destitute of heroism and dash. There is no alignment and little semblance of concerted action. Yet the concerted action is there. Having been broadly instructed by their commanders as to the general object and plan of the movement, the Boers start, moving rapidly enough while at long range, yet cautiously, so, to conceal themselves behind what, to the ordinary man, would seem ridiculously inadequate cover, is an insinuating with the Boer, born of the veldt and its ways. Thus running in a crouching attitude, and keeping out of sight as much as possible, as the thin, widely scattered line moves forward until a point is reached within effective range of the enemy. Then the real attack begins and the peculiar method of the Boer begins to operate. It will not be a movement of the whole line, but only of a small segment. The rest of the line will support it. A certain number of men in each commando, amounting to probably one-fourth, had been told off before the attack began, to hold when rushes were made and concentrate their fire upon the enemy. These men lie securely sheltered, their ready rifles at shoulder, and pointed, their watchful eyes scanning the positions of the defenders. The signal is given and the rush begins. Up spring fifty or a hundred men, with rifles held loosely at a "trail," and dash forward at full speed, leaping over the ground like Zulu runners. A few scattered shots give warning of the hotter fire to come. From the earth go the charging Boers. Up again, and a wild scurry on for half a minute before the second volley can come, a dash down again, each man under cover. Fifty yards had been gained. To see a body of men spring up suddenly and dash toward them is calculated to flurrier any troops. The Boers have counted upon this, and for it the reserved marksmen are prepared. Startled for a moment out of his presence of mind, or in his eagerness to get a fair shot, Tommy Atkins will expose himself. A head, a shoulder, an arm or leg shows. It is sufficient mark for a Boer. The Mausers yelp in a stammering chorus, and a score of gentlemen in knickerbockers blindly about in the dirt and gravel.

HONORS FOR THE WAR HEROES.

All Will be Liberally Rewarded by a Grateful Sovereign.

LONDON, June 16.—The honors to be conferred on Lord Roberts for his conquest of the Boers are already being discussed here. There is a vacant garter in the Queen's hands at present, to which Bobs is generally deemed entitled, despite Palmerston's motto that the great advantage of selecting Knights of the Garter was that "there was no question of merit involved."

Roberts will also get an earldom and probably a reward of £250,000.

General French will be given the Grand Cross of the Bath, and be promoted to full general.

Ian Hamilton and Archibald Hunter Tuckey will get the Grand Cross of St. Michael and St. George, Colonial Order, together with promotion to Lieutenant Generalship.

TARTE'S ANTI-BRITISH VIEWS

In a speech in the Canadian section of the Paris Exhibition, Mr. Tarte, it is reported, conveyed the impression that the Province of Quebec was desirous of adopting the tricolor.

Later, in company with a party of French-Canadians, he visited Rouen and delivered a lecture, in which the following words occurred:

"I shall go back consoled with what I have seen and heard. We have never ceased to look towards France. May France never lose sight of us."

It is no violation of the principle of free speech to say that Mr. Tarte's attitude ought to disqualify him from public affairs.

The people will bid him and Mr. Bourassa welcome in private life to hold as intense anti-British views as they like, but the British people of Canada have also the right to refuse their votes and countenance to any Government that shelters and honors men who are so evidently foreign to the Canadian idea and who plainly yearn for the overthrow of British influence. — Stratford Herald.

"HAMLET"

The Lyceum Company is praised by all who attended the Opera House last evening for a very fine production of Shakespeare's Hamlet. The company deserved it all, for the presentation of the play was certainly good. The company is not large, but is composed of good talent rising to a high order in the persons of the leaders. It was pleasant to notice that where a member played two parts, the futile effort to conceal this by assigning him or her a second name was not resorted to. Throughout the five acts the audience was held deeply attentive. The costumes were good, and the staging appropriate, but it was in the intelligent reading of the lines and the spirited action displayed by nearly all of the company that everyone took the keenest pleasure. As Ophelia, Miss Effie Hext was charming in appearance and acted admirably. She showed great ability in the scene where she appears bereft of reason, and was warmly applauded for her excellent work. Miss Hext is a clever actress, and promises an exceptional treat in the roles which she will assume during the rest of the engagement. Mr. Edouard D'Oize played Hamlet and was thoroughly imbued with the character of the melancholy Dane. His acting was excellent, and his lines were given with all their worth. Miss Beatrix Hamilton played the queen well. Mr. Wm. H. Booke was excellent as the Lord Chamberlain, Polonius reciting the lines of the part admirably. He also played the first grave digger. Mr. Buffham, as Laertes, was better in the last act, where he did excellent work than in his earlier appearance. Horatio was well taken through out by Mr. Keefer. Claudius, the king, was also done well by Mr. Cufford. Joseph Selman played the ghost and also the first actor, filling both roles very favorably. The other characters fitted well in making the entire production a thoroughly artistic one, and delighting all admirers of the great poet's work. — St. John Telegraph.
