The Royal Funeral

The Princess of Wales remained for some time after the service was concluded, looking mournfully at the coffin of her beloved son. (Cable report of the funeral.)

Sadly the old flag droops its crimson folds
In all the lands that own our empire's sway,
Millions of hearts one common sorrow hold
About the bier they carry forth to-day.

Death claims a nation's hope, an empire's heir,
The first-born son,—his parent's joy and pride,
Our aged Queen's young bud of promise fair,
The cherished darling of his promised bride.

Slowly the sad procession wends its way
Through sorrowing crowds, to England's royal tomb,
—All the bright visions of the bridal day
Are quenched in darkness mid a nation's gloom.

Oh death and sorrow—conquerors of kings!
Though nought terrestial can resist your sway,
Yet, with the doom, one balm your presence brings
The tender touch of human sympathy.

The mother mourning o'er her first-born's bier,
The maiden's tears that for her lover fall,
The grief of sorrowing age o'er child so dear
Are one in cottage or in royal hall.

From east to west, wherever true hearts beat,
Through the wide realm that knows no set of sun,
About that flag wrapped bier to-day they meet,
And multitudes of pulses throb as one.

Oh wondrous bond of sympathy divine,
Linking our hearts with unseen powers above,
Faith hails you, mid her sorrow as the sign
That death itself can never conquer love!

FIDELIS.

The testimonial [illegible] patient who was pronounced incurable by leading physicians in England:

From Rev. Dr. Hill.

M. F. Eagar, Esq. HALIFAX, N. S.

Dear Sir,—I feel that it is due to you that I should say publicly what I have said privately very many times, namely, that I firmly believe your PHOSPHOLEINE was the means of restoring a near relative of mine to ordinary health. The patient was apparently in the last stages of Consumption, but with the concurrence of skilled physicians your PHOSPHOLEINE was tried, and, I am happy to say, with results that I certainly did not anticipate. My friend is to-day in the enjoyment of excellent health.

Believe me, yours very truly,
