

ment. The inhabitants are anxious to get a wharf built. The site mentioned is somewhere near Mr. Matheson's fishing station. They certainly have strong claims on the Government, deprived as they are at present of any shipping place at which a vessel can load, other than carrying the produce out in boats. We would advise the inhabitants to call a public meeting and ascertain how much they could raise by subscription, and then make an application to the Government. The temperance cause, in that quarter, is going ahead. Several very interesting lectures have already been delivered on that subject before large audiences. This speaks well for the intelligence of its inhabitants.

After partaking of the hospitalities of our friend, Mr. R. Costan, we wended our way home, fearing the storm of Tuesday. We hope in a few days to visit Campbellton, the West Cape, and other places that we were not able to reach this time.

Although the most beautiful scenery of this Island is, in winter exceedingly dull, nature appearing in her mantle of whiteness and most forbidding aspect, yet the watchful traveller need not find the road long, as in most places it is neither tiresome or uninteresting, especially to a stranger. There are many things to engage one's attention. The appearance of the country, the houses, and in some places huts; the many strange faces; the lots of little children near the school-houses, standing in rows to make their bow to the stranger—all afford material for observation and comment. In many places large and beautiful houses have taken the place of the log house or hut. Many fine barns are to be seen, and in the barn yards some very fine cattle. The schoolhouses too are more comfortable than formerly, and the people, if left to themselves, would live on the best of terms with each other, and be well satisfied with the present system of education. But designing politicians and others must endeavor to kindle the spark which it has taken so many years to extinguish. They will find it a hard task we fear. The people even in the most remote parts of the Island, fully understand all about these matters.

LIFE.

"Gaily we glide in the eyes of the world, With streamers aloft and canvass unfurled; All gladness and glory to wondering eyes, Yet freighted with sorrow and chartered with sighs." In childhood we wandered as it were upon a silvery strand, washed by the crystal wave of the sea of life. Heedlessly we roam, thoughtlessly we count the white pebbles over, asking nothing of the proud world but to leave us undisturbed in this dream of delight. Thus childhood glides along until the rosy hours begin to fade into youth.

We get into life's boat as it passes by, and then the world is, Oh, so beautiful. The white robes of fancy are fluttering at the helm, and the bright star of hope is glittering in her jeweled coronet, the whispering zephyrs play among the snug sails murmuring of the happy days to come. Bright shines the sun overhead as onward we move. We see naught in the beautiful depths below, but coral reefs in dazzling loveliness, our eyes are blinded to the cold pale ferns that have been wrecked there who are warningly lifting their arms upward for us to beware.

Thus we sail along until we find ourselves approaching manhood. Stern ambition then takes the helm. "With a resolute hand she turns the prow of the boat toward the dazzling meteor which blazes in the temple of fame. Dark grows the sky, the storm-kings army gather around, the thunder rolls, and the lightning flashes, while billow madly leaps to billow. Our little bark groans and sighs, but still we tread to despair, we turn and shift and vainly try to fight the wind and waves till before we are aware, we find ourselves on the placid waters of old age. Suddenly we start and look around us, the bright dreams of youth are vanished and ambition has fled. Our heads are silvered with the hoary frost of age, and as we feel life's current moving slowly through our veins we feel we are nearing the port of eternity. We can only see one star glimmering through the grey mists of evening—the star of faith; and by its rays we can see the pearly gates and golden streets on the other shore. We seem to hear the celestial music from the golden harps of loved ones gone before, and we calmly fold our weary hands and await the summons of the pale boatman that shall anchor us safe on the shore of Heaven.—COM.

Government Notices.

COUNCIL OFFICE, Feb. 4, 1869.—His Honor the Administrator of the Government in Council has been pleased to appoint William Bowley, Postmaster at Marie, Township No. 40, in terms of the Act 14 Vic. Cap. 12, in the place of William McKay, resigned.

The city during the week was well supplied with flour and oatmeal, without any change in last quotations. Meat of all kinds is plenty, and no advance in prices. In the country market, the supplies have been unusually small. Butter especially is both scarce and dear. Pork shows a slight advance on previous rates, and may be quoted at from 5d. to 6d. for heavy weight.—Pat.

"We are gratified to hear that the name of Mr. ROBERT MURCH, formerly of King's College, stands fourth on the list of forty matriculants, at a recent examination held in the medical department of McGill College, Montreal."—Mail

The young gentleman named in this notice, who is a son of our respected fellow townsman SAMUEL MURCH, Esq., distinguished himself very shortly after he entered McGill College. He is a youth of very superior abilities; and we feel assured that he will continue to do his part to maintain the high reputation for scholarship which has been established in the Universities of Montreal, Windsor, and Edinburgh, by the sons of little Prince Edward Island.—Jal.

Mr. H. E. McEWEN, our readers will regret to learn, was so severely injured by the explosion which took place in his store, in Queen Street, on Monday night, that after lingering in excruciating agony for nearly nine days, death put an end to his sufferings about 12 o'clock on Tuesday night last. For two days previous to his death, he was, we believe, wholly unconscious. The deceased, who was only twenty-four years of age, commenced business on his own account a few weeks since, and was highly respected. The whole community deeply sympathize with his afflicted parents and relatives. His remains were conveyed, yesterday, to St. Peter's for interment.—Islander.

We have received two Insurance companies' Almanacs for 1869. They are both beautifully got up. One is the Almanac of the North British and Mercantile Fire & Life Insurance Company, of which G. W. DeBloss, Esq., is agent; the other is the New York Almanac, forwarded by the New York Life Insurance Company, of which Mr. H. A. Harvie is agent. A very neatly got up Office Almanac of the Canada Life Assurance Company, has also been left with us by the agent in this city, Mr. W. D. Stewart. They are all, we believe, excellent institutions. We could wish that the New Yorkers and the Canadians would establish Fire Insurance, as well as Life Insurance, agencies in this Island. The North British is a most substantial company, but then the agent here can only take risks to a certain extent in each block, which necessarily leaves some parties unable to obtain assurance at all, as our Mutual has also as many risks as it can well take in certain portions of the city.—Patriot.

ROBERT GORDON, Esquire, Clerk of the Small Debt Court at Alberton, is empowered to receive money on our account and grant receipts for the same. We hope that those persons to the Westward, who are indebted to us, will endeavor to make payment to him as soon as possible.
