—SUMMERSIDE BOARD OF TRADE WILL FIGHT ANY RAISE IN TELEPHONE RATES—A special session of the Summerside Board of Trade was held on Tuesday to discuss the proposed raise in rates by the Telephone Company. The president, Mr. G. Merriam presided. Several members took part in the discussion and the general opinion of the meeting was that the action of the Board of Utilities at this time is unjust and unreasonable, especially at this time when Canada is at war, and the utility companies have to come with other utilities have cut their rates and the least the Island Telephone Company could do would be to keep the rates as they are at present. Members felt that the Utilities Commission should refuse to grant the increase asked for. The Board passed a strong resolution, which is to be sent to the Utilities Commission to the effect that the Board will support any movement to fight the raise of telephone rates. The fox demonstration Week came up for discussion and it was decided to hold it if the Fox Committee received the necessary support from the Civic Authorities and the Provincial Government. The approaches to the car ferry were also discussed at some length. TST-11.

—U. S. President Prefers Complete Neutrality Repeal

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—(AP)—President Roosevelt was reported tonight to have indicated to a bipartisan White House conference that he would prefer complete repeal of the United States Neutrality Act to any modification of the existing law.

However, several of those who attended the conference, including chairman Key Pittman (Dem-Nevada) of the senate foreign relations committee, were said to have advised Mr. Roosevelt that there was little chance that congress would approve complete scrapping of existing neutrality statutes and returning to international law.

The discussion then veered to the possibility of repealing only the clause banning arms shipments to belligerents, and substituting a cash and carry system for such sales.

A person who attended the discussion said that during the discussion about complete repeal, Pittman advised Mr. Roosevelt that there would not be more than five of the senate foreign relations committee's 23 votes for such a plan.

Mr. Roosevelt, it was reported, told the president he always had favored international law as the basis of United States dealings with other nations. Mr. Roosevelt was said to have indicated his assent to this view.

Alfred M. Landon, titular head of the Republican party, was reported to have advised the president that he believed congress should remain continuously in session as long as there is war.

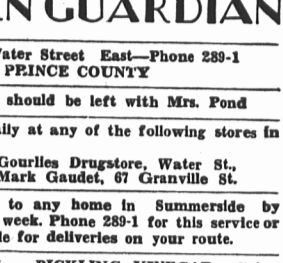

Mr. Roosevelt, the conference said, expressed the belief that it should not require more than two or possibly three weeks for congress to act on neutrality legislation.

Hitler Exposed As World's Champion Liar

LONDON, Sept. 19.—(CP)—Following is the text of the British statement on Fuehrer Hitler's Danzig broadcast:

Herr Hitler's speech is full of the crass statements which usually fall from his lips and to which the world has now become accustomed.

It is surprising that a man in his responsible position should venture to convict himself so palpably out of his own mouth.

Thus for example we now hear from Herr Hitler:

"At that time there lived in Poland a man of energy and action. I tried in common with Marshal Pilsudski to find a solution that would secure peace. In this we put aside the Versailles treaty and attempted to reach a temporary solution."

"After the death of Marshal Pilsudski however the mortal fight against all Germans in Poland began anew. This fight naturally embittered and ruined the relations between the two nations."

"It was possible for us only with difficulty to look on while the German minority was barbarously ill-treated."

"The world which is always shaken to the depths when a Polish Jew who has recently emigrated to Germany is deported remained dumb in the face of this ill-treatment."

So says Herr Hitler.

"Cordial Friendship"

The world remained dumb in the face of this ill-treatment for the very good reasons that from the time of Marshal Pilsudski's death until this spring Herr Hitler represented his relations with Poland as excellent.

No word was said in Germany of the mistreatment of Germans in Poland. On the contrary this is how Herr Hitler himself described his friendship for Poland:

In the Reichstag of May 21, 1933: "We recognise the Polish state as the home of a great patriotic nation with the understanding and the cordial friendship of cordial nationalists."

In the Reichstag of Feb. 20, 1938: "In the fifth year which followed the coming into force of the first great international conference concluded by the Reich, we state with genuine admiration that our relations with that state with which we had perhaps the greatest antagonism, are not only characterized by a detente, but that in the course of the past year, these relations resulted in a more and more friendly drawing together."

"I know full well that this is chiefly due to the fact that at that time there was not a western Parliamentarian in Warsaw but a Polish Marshal whose commanding personality pushed the importance of the Polish position to the fore."

The Munich Betrayal

To return to the present speech: Herr Hitler says further on with reference to his proposals for a settlement: "I do not know in what state of mind the Polish Government could have been to reject such proposals."

The answer is that the Polish Government had before their eyes the solemn assurances given by the German Government at Munich. They knew that these demands were only the preliminary to further exactions.

If Herr Hitler had wished to inspire confidence in his word he should have been less reckless with his earlier promises.

Germany has no further territorial ambitions in Europe?—an undertaking which had been broken too flagrantly and too often. The table of Herr Hitler's broken promises is so long that he can scarcely expect Great Britain to believe that German aspirations are limited and that Germany has no further aspirations in the west.

Hitler On Russia

And now compare what Herr Hitler tells us of Russia with what he told us when it was Herr von Ribbentrop's mission to persuade Great Britain of the Russian peril.

This is what he says now: "We have found that it is in the best interests of both our nations to have an understanding with each other. Thus the British aspiration of the unlimited world position of Germany is finally contradicted. We shall never again fight a war in the interests of the western democracies. Make a note of that my English gentlemen."

This is what he said then in the Reichstag on Jan. 30, 1937: "Bolshevism is the doctrine of world revolution, of world destruction, as far as Germany is concerned, do not want to leave any doubt as to the following:—

1. We look upon Bolshevism as upon an intolerable danger to the world."

2. We shall try and keep this danger away from the German (volk) people by every means at our command.

3. We are, therefore, endeavoring to make the German Volk as immune as possible from this contagion.

For this it is necessary that we should avoid all close contacts with the bearers of these poisonous bacilli.

I request the German fight against these international parasites and consequently it will never occur that one will see me dining and winning with them. Furthermore, any treaty links between Germany and present day Bolshevist Russia would be without any value whatsoever."

At Nuremberg, 1937

Again at the Nuremberg party rally on Sept. 14, 1937, I repeat most emphatically to be joined up with those whose program is destruction of Europe and who do not even try to conceal this program. To refer to collaborate with such elements does not mean to isolate oneself but to secure oneself.

Again, in the Reichstag on Feb. 20, 1938:—

"There is only one state with which we have never sought close relations and with which we do not want to have any close relations. I mean Soviet Russia."

"We must look upon Bolshevism as upon the incarnation of the destructive qualities of human nature. There is no question of Great

SOLDIERS HELP FARMER

LONDON, Sept. 20.—(CP)—Britain took two steps today to assure sufficient food supplies.

The war office extended permission for soldiers to help farmers with the crops until Sept. 30 and with the board of education appealed to schools to start vegetable gardens.

Britain waging war, as Herr Hitler declares, on German women and children.

The German Government have already declared that there are ample stocks of food in Germany but the restriction of the import of raw materials is not a measure of which the German Government can legitimately complain.

Finally, Herr Hitler's account of the circumstances attending the outbreak of war is a travesty of the facts.

He was determined on war and hoped to the last that Great Britain would not fulfill her treaty obligations to Poland.

It was only two days after the invasion of Poland, when she had been received to the British communication, that an ultimatum was addressed to the German Government.

Bacterial Studies on The Curing of Wiltshire Bacon

Wiltshire-cured bacon has become one of Canada's major agricultural exports and the role of bacteria in its production is one of the problems in connection with this particular type of bacon under investigation at the National Research Council. Bacteria are responsible for many desirable changes in the curing of bacon, but they may also produce undesirable results. Dr. N. E. Gibbons of the Division of Biology and Agriculture discussed the work of the Council on this subject at the Third International Congress for Microbiology which held its opening meeting at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York City, 5 September, 1939.

Dr. Gibbons stated that it had been found that the bacterial development which is supposed to be responsible for the curing of meats does not take place in the pickles in which the meat is immersed but at the pickle-meat interface. Large numbers of bacteria are therefore present on the surface of the curing tanks. It has been found that wiping the sides with cloths wrung out of hot brine materially reduces the number of bacteria present on the surface. Wiltshire-cured bacon is therefore therefore reach their destination in better condition than sides which are not wiped.

Dr. Gibbons reviewed the available information regarding the numerous kinds of bacteria found in curing pickles and described the conditions under which the best results are obtained in the pickling process.

The importance of studies in the curing of bacon by the Wiltshire process from the Canadian point of view is that the English market favours this type of bacon. In the past slight variations in quality and flavour two weeks of the war caused a development of demand in Great Britain for Canadian bacon. It is hoped the studies now under way and in which Canadian packers are co-operating fully, will enable Canadian producers to market greater quantities of bacon in Great Britain than has heretofore been the case.

Germans Losing Three U-Boats Weekly, Is Report

LONDON, Sept. 20.—(CP)—The ministry of information said in a statement tonight Great Britain's campaign against submarines during the first two weeks of the war comprises "most favorably" figures for the first Great War.

The ministry pointed out that Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement in the House of Commons today that six or seven U-boats have been destroyed means an average of three or more were going down weekly against an average of one to 1-2 at the height of submarine warfare in the last war.

The ministry statement said it was estimated Germany had 30 submarines of 500 or more tons ready for duty when the war started.

Canada At War

(By The Canadian Press)

Canada's initial contribution towards effective co-operation with Great Britain in the war against Germany will involve safeguarding the security of Canada and the British and French possessions in the north Atlantic, according to Prime Minister MacKenzie King.

Synchronizing with that will be the training and dispatch of Canadian airmen overseas and the ensuring of a supply of food and munitions to the allies.

The question of an expeditionary force has not yet arisen and according to the Prime Minister will be decided in the light and character of hostilities and the needs of the allies.

In 1914, a total of 33,000 men sailed from Canada in October, formed runners of a force which eventually reached 450,000 before the Great War ended. Canada enlisted 619,000 soldiers for war service, the overwhelming majority of them by voluntary enlistment. In addition to these a large number served in the Royal Flying Corps and in the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Canada's contribution to the war effort in man-power was one of the most effective aids to the successful issue of the Great War and history may again repeat itself in this respect.

Casualties in the Canadian forces during the last war included 55,634 killed in action, died of wounds and other causes, and 149,732 wounded.

A vast war-effort faces Canada as the second great war enters its second week and the dominion now is formally involved.

Government officials say it is impossible to estimate what the cost will be.

The total cost of the first great war to Canada is estimated at $3,000,000,000. The dominion entered the struggle with a national debt of only $263,000,000 and came out of it owing $2,248,868,000. Since the war more than $800,000,000 has been paid out in war pensions, $150,000,000 in soldiers' civil readjustment and $300,000,000 in allowances to needy war veterans.

The war was financed by both borrowing and taxation. Some loans were floated in the United States but the great bulk of the war loans were subscribed by Canadians.

The war brought the introduction of the federal income tax in Canada, ever since a rich source of revenue to the dominion government. It also brought other taxes, some of which were dropped afterwards such as levies on luxuries, and an excess profits tax.
