Testimonial

C. P. Fletcher, Esq.

DEAR SIR,—I do not wish to return to Montreal without expressing my gratitude to you for the very excellent Bell Piano that you placed at my disposal for my recital. I have tried many Canadian Pianos of different manufacturers and must say that, considering the size of the instrument, I have never found one to equal it for depth and brilliancy of tone. The action is quite as elastic and responsive as in American Upright Pianos of the highest grade. Again thanking you, very sincerely,

I remain, Yours, FRED. E. MORRIS

TO MY PETUNIA.
He stood upon my window sill.
A trumpeter in green.
While half across the window pane
The frost had drawn a screen.
Outside, in garbled and twisted age,
The weary apple trees
Stood clashing all their hopeless boughs
Cut by the bitter breeze?
But nothing cared my trumpeter
For all the gloom and chill.
He blew from out his crimson horn
A blast with right good will.
It was a brave and merry peal
Which through my fancy rang.
It brought a host of budding flowers,
And birds of springtime sang.
I saw the sunshine on the grass,
The glancing shadows fall,
While lovely hues and fragrances
Went floating through it all.
Without 'twas bitter cold and bare,
The north wind's reign of power,
Within were spring and all her train
Led by a single flower.

SIGNIFICANCE LONG LOST.

Some Superstitions Which Have to Do With the Passing of Life.

The superstitions which have clustered about the closing scenes of human life are almost innumerable. Some, perhaps the greater portion, now seem to be meaningless, but a few had in early days a significance which they have since lost. The stopping of the clock at the moment a death occurs in the house is still practiced in many families in this country and Europe, and originated in the fact that according to the laws of several European states it was necessary to have evidence of the exact moment of births and deaths occurring in the royal family. When a king died, an attendant was always present whose duty it was to stop the clock in the royal apartment at the moment when death occurred, and the timepiece was thus a mute record of the event. From royal families the descent of this practice to aristocratic and finally to families of low degree was easy, and many persons adopted it as a mere superstition without knowing anything of its former significance.

Turning the looking glass to the wall is a superstition which is said to have originated in the country districts of Germany during the days when mirrors were novelties. Mirrors of glass with quicksilver backs are said to have been made at Venice in 1300 A. D., and were first made in England in 1573, but did not come into common use among the middle classes until the beginning of the last century. At first they were regarded with superstitious awe, the idea being that the reflection of the face in the mirror was a sort of specter or second soul of the individual. When a death occurred, the looking glass which the person was accustomed to use was turned to the wall, lest his ghost should be disturbed by others using the mirror before his spirit had finally departed from the neighborhood, there being an idea that the spirit of the departed lingered about the vicinity for several hours, or perhaps days, after it had separated from the body.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Smart Minister.

"Yardsley donated a caster worth 97 cents to the minister and put a tag on it marked '$16.'"
"Yess?"
"Well, the parson took the article to Yardsley's store yesterday and traded it for dry goods. Yardsley's smile won't be able to be out again for six weeks."
—Harper's Bazar.

Justifiable.

"The $1,000 beauty had to get a divorce from the human ostrich."
"Why?"
"He kept swallowing her curling iron and hairpins."—Chicago Record.
