All races mile heats in harness, best three in five, and to finish at the end of fifth heat, when money will be awarded according to standing in summary. Any horse distancing the field or any part thereof entitled to one money only. Stakes divided 50, 25, 15 and 10 per cent.

Five per cent additional deducted from money winners. Two or more horses trained or owned in the same stable may start in the same class, when full entrance is paid on each entry.

Races to be called at 1:30 p.m. sharp. (Railway time.)

This meeting will be governed by the National Trotting Association Rules (of which this track is a member) except where they conflict with the above.

The above list of horses is sufficient reason for the best day's racing held on the island this year.

People coming by auto, or train, if you want a good hot tasty dinner at a nominal fee, come right out to the Race Track grounds where your hunger will be appeased in the most pleasing manner. Just try us.

The following train arrangements have been made, carrying horses as well as people to and from the races:

Stations	Fares.	Time.	Stations	Fares.	Time.
Summerside	$3.20	a.m.	Royalty Junction	$1.70	9:15 a.m.

Above fares include War Tax—Proportionate fares from intermediate stations not named.

A special auto road has been opened on the east side of the road leading to the track, and all cars will go and come by this road, so as to leave the old road entirely open for horses and carriages. There is plenty of space to park your cars, and a competent man to look after them while you see the races.

Two years since you were to Montague, so you owe it to yourself to be there this year. Come by train, auto or team; they are all at your convenience. Montague for a good time, I'm going, are you?
 Admission 50c. Children 25c.

SANDRA THE JEALOUS

By Jane Phelps

ROSE EXPRESSES HER OPINION OF EVERETT CHAPTER XLXI.

When I saw Everett I was so astonished I lost what little wit I ever possessed, and instead of answering I just stared at him.

"Well, why don't you speak? Where have you been until this time?" again looking at the watch he held in his hand.

"To the theatre," I filtered.

"Who said you could go to the theatre? I thought I expressly told you in my letter to go to bed early."

"Everett, don't you see Rose, Rose Grandon—you met her out home you know?"

"Yes I remember Miss Grandon," he inclined his head slightly, as with a faint 'good night' Rose slipped past us, up to her room.

In a way I was glad she had gone, that she would no longer be a witness to my humiliation. In another way I wished she had remained. Everett might have been less unreasonable.

Neither of us had replied to Rose's 'good night,' but as soon as she had some Everett said:

"Come into the library."

I followed meekly, but didn't feel one bit meek inside. He had been away for days, hadn't told me what he was doing or anything. He hadn't even kissed me. Father always kissed mother several times, if he had been away over night.

I stood opposite him after he switched on the lights.

"Why didn't you obey me?" he asked sternly.

"Because—because—why Everett, I haven't done anything wrong."

"When I tell you to remain at home, to retire early, I expect to be obeyed."

"But I am not a child!" I don't know where I got the courage to speak up as I did. "I was lonely, I asked Rose to come and stay with me while you were gone. I couldn't read or do anything, I was so lonesome. And after she came we had to do something. I am sure that you wouldn't have talked to Leola the way you do to me. I am ashamed to have Rose go home and tell how I am treated." I stopped, frightened almost to death. I had not meant to mention his first wife—to this day I don't know what made me do it.

"But I was so hurt and angry."

Everett had turned a pearly gray color when I mentioned Leola, and the knuckles of his hands, which gripped the table were white and strained. For a moment he did not reply. Then in a voice I scarcely recognized, he said:

"Go upstairs and go to bed."

"Aren't you coming?" I asked, frightened at his looks.

"Not now—but go!"

I went.

Rose was watching for me, and followed me into my room.

"You poor dear! I was awfully anxious of you—all your wonderful clothes, this beautiful home and everything. But I'm not jealous any longer. It's a bear!" I wouldn't live with him for a million dollars! I'd be frightened to death to breathe naturally for fear he wouldn't like it. Give me a young man who likes 'em, and loves me!" she finished with a great deal of emphasis on the last word.

"He was cross because I didn't do as he said," was all I could think of at the way of an apology.

"But you're a married woman! You're not a child living at home with your father and mother. They have a right to boss you, he hasn't wouldn't put up with it for a minute. I'd show him where he got off," she finished angrily.

Just then I heard a movement downstairs.

"Run back to your room Rose. He's coming!" and like a frightened rabbit she scuttled back.

"What did your friend have to say to you that couldn't keep till morning?" Everett asked as he closed the door.

"She said she would rather marry a man that loved her than to have all you have given me," I had purposely left out the 'young.'

"So she thinks I do not love you?"

"Of course."

"Why—of course?"

"Because—why—because of the way you act—the way you treat me."

"I see. And you agree with her?"

"Yes, I can't help it. You have been away over a week. You haven't kissed me, not said a kind word. My father went away for one night he loved mother most to death when he came back."

He made no reply, and I crawled into bed quivering with anger and disappointment; yet glad he had not asked who took us to the theatre.

Tomorrow—Rose Goes Home.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION

The following address of welcome was recently presented to Mr. George Dunsford:

Dear Friend,—We your friends and school mates of South Melville are gathered here tonight to express our pleasure in having you once more among us and to bid you "Welcome Home" from the scenes of the Great World War.

Giving up the comparative ease and safety of home life you took up arms and proceeded overseas, breaking the ties of home and kindred and sacrificing whatever the future years might hold for you, to throw your young life into the scales of justice in order that Right should not prevail. Now you have returned unscathed by Wars Red Lust and we join your parents and family in rejoicing that you were not called to make the sacrifice to which you had pledged yourself.

Be assured, also, that whatever you may undertake in the future whatever calling in life you may follow, you have our sincere and heartfelt wishes for your success and happiness.

In conclusion we beg of you to accept as a tangible expression of our esteem and friendship this token. Signed on behalf of your old friends and school mates.

PROTECTED WHERE THE WEAR COMES

ORDINARY silver-plated spoons and forks soon show signs of wear at the back of the handle and bowl, and, in lesser degree, at the tip of the bowl.

But in the HOLMES & EDWARDS "Silver Inlaid" and "Super Plate" Flatware all these wear points receive extra protection.

In the "Silver Inlaid" line the wear points on back of handle and bowl have a piece of Sterling Silver welded right in, while the tip of the bowl is Super plated.

In the "Super Plate" line, which is somewhat lower in price, all three wear points receive a heavy extra coating of pure silver.

When buying new silver-plated flatware ask your jeweler for HOLMES & EDWARDS Silver Inlaid or Super Plate and you will get maximum durability at minimum price.

Set of Six Teaspoons—Silver Inlaid, $4.25; Super Plate, $3.25 Other Pieces in Proportion

Manufactured exclusively in Canada by The Standard Silver Company of Toronto, Limited
