

"Probably no single drug is employed in nervous diseases with effects so markedly beneficial as those of cod-liver oil."

These are the words of an eminent medical teacher.

Another says: "The hypophosphites are generally acknowledged as valuable nerve tonics."

Both these remedies are combined in Scott's Emulsion. Therefore, take it for nervousness, neuralgia, sciatica, insomnia and brain exhaustion.

Of Special Interest to our Farmers

The Breeder of Poultry.

In speaking of breeding thoroughbred poultry we wish it to be correctly understood we are not speaking of the person who is noted in his or her neighborhood as a success in raising any given member of pure bred or cross-bred fowls out of a certain number of chicks hatched from the eggs, or how fine and healthy they look after they are matured, or of how many eggs he is capable of making a certain number of his fowls produce. The art of doing all this, any and all will admit is a science, and is or would be very valuable to the scientific breeder. Yet a man could be possessed of each and all of the above qualities and still not be a successful breeder in the correct sense of the term. A man to be what we call a successful breeder is a man with qualities that only comparatively few have. Certainly he is a really good judge of the breed or breeds he is interested in, very often a deal better than any understand, except a very few gifted like himself and interested in the same breed. They understand each other and see far more of the finer and more difficult points or qualities to be desired in the breeds in which they are interested and on which their thoughts are centered. A scientific breeder is gifted with a foresight that tells him that a male bird he sees has qualities in him that just fits him to be mated to a certain hen or hens that he has. Very often if asked, he would be unable to put his reasons into words so that his questioner could comprehend his meaning yet he knows he is right. He is a thoughtful man, a man who does not believe in theories but in practice. He makes notes, takes nothing for granted. It must prove itself when put in practice. He can take a flock of ordinary or fair specimens of any of the breeds he understands and raise better, more typical specimens from them by mating them his way, scientifically, then his friend or neighbor who has none of his qualities and ability can from the winners of Madison Square Garden. He understands full well that one sort of in-breeding will ruin any variety, while another sort of in-breeding will intensify and perpetuate any of those qualities desired and harm the breed in no way. In fact, he is the man who has brought all our valuable and beautiful breeds up to the high standard they now occupy, and it is this sort of men, the genuine breeders, who build up the business, and who every year raise a few birds that are not for sale regardless of price offered simply because they need them as breeders and they are beyond value in dollars and cents to them.—By "Zim"

Improving Farm Cattle.

We have frequently noted the fact that the big stock raisers of the west take the best of the pure bred stock from the breeding establishments of the eastern and central states, leaving for the farmers of these states the second rate animals. There is a good reason for this in the fact that the western man with his large number of females can afford to pay a better price for a pure bred male than the farmer whose herd is small. But whatever the reason, the fact is to be deplored, from the standpoint of the farmer, because it is constantly increasing the capacity of his rivals to compete in the quality of their stock. We have seen range bred cattle improving steadily for years, while those bred on farms have stood still or retrograded, and the reason is that the ranchman has bred straight and bred up, while the farmer has too often done neither. The good bulls have gone west, and the result is seen in range bred cattle that top the market when fed right. If our farm bred cattle are to maintain their lead, they must be bred up. If individual farmers cannot put up enough money to keep the best bulls at home, they must club together or organize to do it. It is this or march in the rear of the procession before many years in the breeding of beef cattle.—National Stockman.

Farrowing Sows.

The Farm Journal gives the following advice in regard to farrowing sows: After parturition care should be exercised that the dam does not take cold, and her food should be of a nonstimulating character for a few days. A little bran and water will be enough food for the first 24 hours and only small additions to this for three days. Nature needs rest and will recuperate in the best way. If these rules be observed, the system will be all the more vigorous and able to assimilate food to nourish the young afterward. The digestive capacity of many sows is lessened by overfeeding at this critical time. As a natural sequence the pigs are not so lusty and large at 6 to 8 weeks old as they should be to command ready sale. If the sow has been fed the best on the farm directly after the pigs arrive and fever sets in get into the pen with a sponge and pail of hot water and bathe her udder for half an hour twice or three times daily and give loosening food.
