Young Players Troupe To Perform At Centre

Les Jeunes Comediens, a troupe of young French Canadian actors and actresses currently on a coast to coast tour of Canada, will open a three-day island visit at Confederation Centre Monday, Dec. 6. The troupe will present a matinee and evening performance at the Centre before going to Summerside and O'Leary for performances in the next two days.

The troupe will present two plays, Lecons d'Amour by Moliere, and Hommes at Betes entirely in French, relying on a strong visual style and exuberant playing to overcome the language barrier.

Les Jeunes Comediens is a young theatrical company performing under the auspices of the Canadian Players Foundation. Most of the cast are graduates of the National Theatre School in Montreal. Seventeen weeks of the 26 in the current tour will be spent playing to wholly English speaking audiences.

The national tour follows a shorter tour of English speaking in Ontario and the west where communication with the audience was quickly established without benefit of common language, and the company played to public and critical acclaim.

The Confederation Centre student matinee begins at 1:45 p.m. with the evening performance scheduled for curtain at 8:00 p.m.

Painting Exhibit Starts On Dec. 10

Nova Scotia painter Carol Fraser will be accorded a special one-man show at Confederation Centre Gallery in Charlottetown beginning Dec. 10. Art Director Moncrieff Williamson has announced.

Miss Fraser's work follows the only Canadian exhibition of the "15 Canadian Artists" collection which leaves the gallery for disbanding on Dec. 6.

Carol Fraser is an American from the middle west who came to Halifax several years ago with her husband who is with the English Department at Dalhousie University.

She has exhibited at the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts, the National Gallery and in many other exhibitions throughout North America. Much of her work is retained in private collections, though she also has works in the National Gallery, at Sir George Williams College, the Minneapolis Public Library and in other public collections.

She has also been a teacher of painting and sculpture at the University of Minnesota.

Her show at Confederation Centre Gallery will include recent works in oil, water colour and ink and reed techniques. Much of the subject matter is drawn from the Provence France region, where Miss Fraser recently spent some time.

Reviewing her current work Martin Kemp of Dalhousie University said, "Each of Carol Fraser's large oils is the result of an intense struggle. The margin of success in such a highly charged style is small, and the fact that many of the large pieces succeed in both detail and overall effect is the measure of her talent."

The resolutions to be presented to the board of governors were then read and discussed.

Other topics discussed were the possibility and feasibility of acquiring a guidance director, review of federation fees and proposals for another workshop.
