SAFE SOOTHING SATISFYING

Originated by an Old Family Physician in 1810.

You can safely trust what time has indorsed for nearly a century.

There is not a medicine in use today which possesses the confidence of the public to so great an extent as Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. For more than eighty years it has stood upon its own intrinsic merit, while generation after generation have used it. The best evidence of its value is the fact that in the state where it originated the sale of it is steadily increasing.

Johnson's Anodyne Liniment

I. S. JOHNSON Esq. My Dear Sir:—Fifty years ago this month, your father, Dr. Johnson, called at my store and left me some Johnson's Anodyne Liniment on sale. I have sold it ever since. I can most truly say that it has maintained its high standard and popularity from that time to this. JOHN B. RAND, North Waterford, Maine, Jan., 1891.

A BAMBOULA.

Underwood, moved by the simplicity and earnestness of the speaker, laid his hand on the brawny arm next to him, and opened his lips to speak. But Marcas shrank from the light touch. Underwood felt the same flesh quiver beneath his fingers. "He knows that I have come to carry away his young mistress, and he is jealous," he thought, smiling with pardonable exultation.

His eyes roved curiously over the broad park. The kind of table-land, from which the pine hills sloped away to the west and north, was covered with noble woodland trees, through whose trunks, in passing, he caught glimpses of orchards, vineyards, and fields. It was his first visit to Pine Needles, and he looked out eagerly for the house. A last turn of the smooth road brought it in view—a large rambling country-house embowered in greenery, with wide galleries, slanting roof, and square, red-brick chimneys.

"Yander's Miss Cecil, er-waitin'!" said Marcas, pointing with his whip. Underwood barely had time to catch the flutter of light garments through the foliage before the horses were drawn up beneath the veranda where she stood.

She came down the steps with outstretched hands.

"Welcome to Pine Needles, Francis," she said, with a sort of shy pride. "This is my cousin, Mrs. Garland," she added, presenting the small, alert-looking personage who filled the agreeable office of companion to the young heiress.

Cecil Berkeley offered a pleasing contrast to the man upon whom she was about to bestow the ownership of herself and the Berkeley estates. She was tall and slender, with hair and brows of an almost startling blackness, and dark eyes in which a smouldering fire seemed to dwell; her high-bred oval face was singularly delicate in its outlines. There was a pliant softness in her movements, and a hint of strength in her firm white chin and perfect mouth. She flushed as her lover's ardent eyes met hers in the fading light.

"Welcome to Pine Needles!" she cried again, springing lightly up the steps.

Underwood had not finished relating the commonplace details of his southward journey when the soft fall of unshod feet sounded on the polished floor; a shadowy form glided across the dim lit room in which they were seated, and bent over Miss Berkeley's chair. He felt, rather than saw, that it was the woman whom he had seen an hour before standing on the edge of the dark pool in the hollow.

"Thank you, S'lome," said her mistress, in a tone of affectionate familiarity, taking the leaves, whose color was lost in the semi-darkness. The quadroon bent her shapely head, and passed from the room as silently as she had entered it.

That night they sat late before a blazing pine-knot fire in the snug library. The hands of the slow-ticking old clock on the mantel pointed almost to midnight when the guest arose to bid his hostess good-night. As he opened the door a strain of music fell upon his ears, accompanied with a burst of noisy laughter.

Cecil smiled in reply to his questioning look. "Uncle Darius is fiddling on the kitchen gallery," she said, "and the negroes are doubtless dancing there, late as it is. Come, let us take a peep at them."

She led the way down the wide hall, and out upon a small vine-hung porch in the rear of the dining-room. The night was clear and still. The grassy yard and the garden beyond were bathed in the tranquil light of a full moon. But an enormous fig-tree, whose branches brushed the low eaves, swathed the long kitchen gallery in dense shadow, save where, from an open door, a broad glare of red light streamed across it. Uncle Darius, lean and brown, sat just within the doorway, fiddling with all his might, his chair tilted against the wall, his gray head thrown back, his big bare foot keeping time on the floor. Aunt Peggy, the old black cook, dozed on a stool beside him. A confused mass of dark forms were dimly visible in the shadow, lying about the floor, lounging on the low steps, squatting against the wall. Here and there a dusky face, a bare foot, an out-thrust arm, gleamed strangely in the muddy light. Lindy, big-limbed and black, and Mushmelon Joe, small, wizened, and wiry, sank on their heels against the door-posts, breathless and exhausted after a prolonged break-down, as the invisible spectators drew aside the leafy curtain and looked out.

"I ain' gwine ter play nary 'nother tune ter-night," declared Uncle Darius, bringing his chair-legs down with a thump. "De chickens is fair crowin' fer day now." But as a tall figure stepped noiselessly from the darkness into the shaft of light, he tucked his fiddle under his chin again with a whoop. "Now you gwine ter see dancin'!" he shouted, flourishing his bow. "Blue-gum Marc gwine ter teach de niggers how to rake down de cotton row!"

Marc swayed his huge body from side to side rhythmically, then paused. "Ain' you gwine ter rake down de cotton row 'long o' me, S'lome?" he demanded, turning his face toward a group of women at the further end of the gallery.

"No," drawled a low musical voice there.

"Den you can ontie de fiddle-strings, Unc' Darius," said Marc, joining good-naturedly in the loud laugh at his own expense.

Underwood bent forward, straining his eyes in the darkness. But Aunt Peggy had already shut the kitchen door, and a moment later they all trooped away, singing, to the negro settlement in the pines, which had replaced the old-time quarters.

II.

One morning about ten days later Miss Berkeley came out of the house alone, and walked slowly across the lawn. Her step was listless; her eyes were downcast; her cheek had lost its brilliant color. She seated herself on a rustic bench under a low-branched oak and opened the book which she held in her hand. But her gaze wandered absently from the printed page. It fell at length upon Marcas, who was moving to and fro among the flower beds whistling joyously. He carried a small garden hoe, and the splint basket on his arm was heaped with tufts of violets. His face brightened as his eyes caught those of his young mistress. He took off his hat and came over to where she was sitting.

"Hits edzackly de weather ter transplan', Miss Cecil," he said; "de groun' is dat meller and sof—"

"Marcas," she interrupted, imperiously, leaning her head against the dark tree trunk, and looking fixedly at him, "is it true that you carry poison in your teeth like a rattlesnake?"

"Lawd-a-mussy, Miss Cecil!" he cried, falling back a step or two in his amazement. "I dunno. Yes, 'm. I ain' never projecked none wr dat foolishness. But my ole daddy useter say so, an' I reckin a Affican prince oughter know!"

Her eyes dropped on her book, and he returned with a bewildered air to his work. She watched him abstractedly as he placed the moist roots one by one deftly in the ground, and patted the loose earth about them with a large open palm.

"The dwarf-marigolds are nearly all gone," she remarked, after a long silence.

"Yes, 'm," assented Marc, glancing at a triangular plot in the centre of the lawn where a few small yellow flowers shone on their low stalks.

"S'lome has been gathering them—" she went on, musingly, and as if speaking to herself.

"S'lome do hone a'ter yaller, dat's a fac'!" he commented, with a pleased laugh.

"—for Mr. Underwood," she concluded, in a monotonous tone.

The negro rose slowly to his feet. A sombre fire shot into his eyes. He stood for a moment silently looking down at her. Then he dropped again to his knees, and drew the basket to him.

She went away presently, leaving the book, which had slipped from her lap, lying face downward in the yellowing grass.

He watched her furtively until she entered the house. Then, without a glance at the overturned basket and neglected tools, he passed across the grounds, leaped the low fence, and plunged into the silent reaches of the pines.

That night when the mistress of Pine Needles came down from her own room, whither, under pretext of a headache she had withdrawn after the mid-afternoon country dinner, she found the house wearing an unwonted air of festivity.

"Ah, there you are at last, Cecil dear!" cried Mrs. Garland, bustling into the hall to meet her. "Everything is waiting for you. I've arranged what Uncle Darius calls a speckle-tickle for your Mr. Underwood," she added, dropping her voice.

She drew the girl into the long parlor, whose polished floor reflected the clustered lights in the old-fashioned crystal chandeliers. Wax tapers burned softly in the tall silver candelabra on the mantel; roses were stuffed in the wide-mouthed vases; the furniture was pushed against the wall; a couple of quaint high-backed chairs were placed side by side in the broad curve of the bow-window.

"You and Francis are to sit here, like the king and queen in a play," said Mrs. Garland gaily. "Don't lift an eyebrow, Cecil, pray, if you recognize the contents of your own armoires and jewel-cases."

Cecil sank into the chair with a wan smile. She looked frail and almost ghost-like in her trailing white gown. Underwood, who seemed possessed by a sort of reckless gaiety, seated himself beside her. He wore pinned upon the lapel of his coat a small yellow flower.

Mrs. S. James, Seaforth, suffered for years with what is called old people's rash. She was treated by many physicians without any result. Mr. Fear, the local druggist, recommended Dr. Chase's Ointment, which relieved the irritation at once and speedily effected a permanent cure of the skin eruption. Mrs. James also says that Dr. Chase's Ointment cured her of itching piles which she had been troubled with for years.

The Mark Lane Express says:—The sodden state of the land is damaging the autumn sown wheat. Reports from France say that there is very poor promise for the growing wheat, but in Italy the outlook is satisfactory.

With Invalids.

Yes! with invalids the appetite is capricious and needs coaxing, that is just the reason they improve so rapidly under Scott's Emulsion, which is as palatable as cream.

When Archbishop Langevin left Ottawa for Winnipeg he took with him a subscription of two thousand dollars which had been sent from Rome towards the maintenance of separate schools in Manitoba.

O. S. Doan, of Clinton, says not to go on suffering as he did for years with Salt Rheum, when a few boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment will cure you.

Dr. Chase's Ointment cured Hiram Frey, of Norwood, after suffering ten years with Eczema of the leg.

Chase's Ointment also cured his little girl of Eczema on the face.

Baby Eczema and Scald Head.

Infants and young childaen are peculiarly subject to this terrible disorder, and if not promptly arrested it will eventually become chronic. Dr. Chase made a special study of Eczema and disease of the skin, and we can confidently recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to cure all forms of Eczema. The first application soothes the irritation and puts the little sufferer to rest.

The Hon. J. W. Longley is an apostle of "Altruism." He defines it as "a rule of life whereby the greatest results are attainable, not by seeking our own comforts in this world, but by devoting our lives at all times to the happiness of others."

It is pointed out that Mrs. Hanna Ross, who died at Highland Falls, recently, was not a temperance advocate, and whiskey was the only medicine in which she believed. During the last seventy years she used tobacco quite freely. Notwithstanding these little drawbacks she lived to the ripe old age of 106.

Dr. CHASE CURES FATHER AND CHILD

Both afflicted with Eczema of a very troublesome type and cured in a remarkably short while by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

"I was troubled for ten years with eczema on one leg; the itching was something terrible; would scratch until the blood came. How I came to know the value of DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT, I have a little girl two years; when she was one year old the same disease began to show upon her face. It wasn't long before her face became literally covered with it. In order to keep her from scratching it we had to bandage her hands up. I tried several doctors, but got no relief. Seeing DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT so highly advertised I made up my mind to purchase a box, which I did from one of our leading druggists. The first application I noticed a change. It was then I began to think about myself. With four or five applications, to my surprise, I am completely cured, no sign of the disease, and my little girl's face to-day is clear of all the scabs. I am only too glad to inform any person what a blessing DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT has proved itself.

Paine's Celery Compound Cures Are Always Permanent.

The Happy Cures That the Afflicted Desire.

A Report From Mr. Douglas Hixon, of Beamsville, Ont.

A great number of men and women, cured months and years ago by Paine's Celery Compound, have taken the trouble to assure the proprietors of that famous medicine that their cures are permanent.

This noble and bright record of permanent cures, shown only by Paine's Celery Compound, is worthy of special notice, as it is the grandest record of the kind in the world. It should also be noted that all the permanently cured people are residents of our own Canada.

There are some medicines that partially relieve pain and suffering, that assist in building up vain hopes of a new life; but after a few days or weeks the terrible agonies come back again in more alarming forms, and hope and faith are lost forever.

This never happens when Paine's Celery Compound is used as a banisher of disease. The first bottle establishes a joyous feeling of security, and soon a perfect cure is effected which is permanent and lasting.

Mr. Hixon says: "Today I think more of Paine's Celery Compound than ever before. Since I was cured—over two years ago—I have never had a bad day or lost a day's work, never having had a return of the rheumatism from which I once suffered so terribly.

"Through my influence many have used Paine's Celery Compound and have been cured. I wish to affirm once more that it was Paine's Celery Compound that took the rheumatism from my system. I strongly recommend it to all rheumatic and sick people."

DEATH IN A POTATO PIT.

John Bonniman, a farmer living near North Branch, Minn., on Tuesday last built a fire in a pit in which potatoes were stored, as he feared the frost would penetrate to it, and the following day he went with his oldest son to straighten up the place. Together they lifted the heavy pit door and the father let himself down into the pit. In an instant he dropped dead. The son gave a shriek of terror and went to the rescue of his father. He, too became corpse but his scream brought her brother, a boy of eighteen, and a homehouter the mother came running from the line followed by her youngest son, a lad of fears. The second son arrived first and dropped into the deathly trap thinking to help his father and brother, but the firedamp killed him in an instant. When the mother arrived she, too, jumped into the pit. She was immediately overpowered, but had strength enough left to tell her remaining son not to come into the cellar.

A VALUABLE TABLE

One Which Will Enable the Dairyman to Make Balanced Rations

Hoard's Dairyman, which was asked by a subscriber for a table showing the chemical analysis of the various kinds of grain rations for milch cows, replies as follows:

In order to formulate a ration one needs in addition to the chemical analysis, a table of what are called digestion co-efficients. These co-efficients are the percentages of digestible matter in the totals found by the chemists. For instance, corn contains 10.5 per cent. of crude protein, but only 60 per cent. of this is digestible, or there is 6.3 pounds of digestible protein in 100 pounds of corn. Instead, therefore, of giving this inquirer the analysis called for, we give a table, showing the total organic matter and the digestible nutrients in th articles mentioned, and in most other common feeding stuffs. The figures are taken mostly from Woll's Dairy Calendar, a most valuable book for any dairyman. The figures given are percentages, or number of pounds of each element in 100 pounds of the feed, but bear in mind that the digestible nutrients are included in the organic matter. Opposite corn silage and corn fodder two sets of figures are given. The large numbers represent the average of several Wisconsin analyses, and will apply generally to well eared and well matured crops of corn, of the medium and small varieties. The smaller numbers represent the averages for all varieties and should be used for immature corn and the larger dent varieties:

A CASE OF DIABETES

No Help From Medical Men—Suffered for Many Years—Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

North Bruce Feb. 15 (Special)—An old and well known settler in this township, named Thomas Brooks, who lives on Lots 7 and 8 in the 14th concession is rejoicing with his neighbors over his recent recovery, and he said:

"I was cured by using twenty-four boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and as nothing else ever helped me, I say they saved my life."

I had tried all the doctors of this locality and was treated for Diabetes, hoping and suffering for years."

From reading of cures I determined to use Dodd's Kidney Pills, and I must say that after using the first box I would have considered them reasonable at ten dollars a box.

The Czar of Russia doesn't care even if the war in Cuba does send the price of Havanas up. His physician has ordered him to give up smoking.
