COLD POLICE SHIFTS

LONDON (Reuters) — Russia's "pole of cold" shifted this winter from Yafstsk in northeast Siberia to the European part of the Soviet Union, the Soviet news agency Tass said Friday. This shift meant that at times last month it was warmer in Siberia than in the Ukraine, where the lowest temperatures in 50 years were recorded. The Baltic and the Azov Sea were ice-bound, Tass said, and icebreakers even had to smash a channel through to the port of Odessa after the sea froze for 300 yards from the shore.

Massey Medal Given To Arctic Specialist

OTTAWA (CP) — The 1963 Massey Medal has been awarded to Graham W. Rowley, an Arctic specialist with the federal department of northern affairs.

Mr. Rowley, has been involved with the Canadian north for 25 years as an explorer, traveller, scientist and administrator.

The medal is awarded annually by the Royal Canadian Geographical Society to recognize outstanding personal achievement in the exploration, development or description of Canadian geography.

Selection of Mr. Rowley was announced at the society's annual meeting Thursday night.

Formal presentation of the medal, named for former governor-general Vincent Massey, will be made Friday by Governor-General Vanier.

A native of Manchester, England, Mr. Rowley won honors in natural science at Cambridge University and joined the British Canadian Arctic Expedition of 1936 which investigated the northern parts of Hudson Bay and the lands adjoining Foxe Basin.

The young archeologist and explorer spent most of the next three years in the Canadian north, exploring unmapped regions and excavating at the site of an early civilization near Igloolik, a community in the northern part of Foxe Basin.

CROSSED BAFFIN RANGE

He was the first white explorer to cross the mountains of northern Baffin Island, travelling by dogsled with Eskimo companions, and discovered new islands in Foxe Basin.

An Arctic river and island have been named after him in recognition of his work as an explorer.

In May, 1938, he wrote a report on his travels for The Times of London in which he described the generosity and hospitality of the Eskimos. He also told of a visit with an Eskimo tribal queen, "a remarkable old woman who had been obliged to eat her first husband and three of her children after they had died of hunger in the interior of Cockburn Land."

Writing of the rigorous daily routine, he reported: "Every night building the igloo, unpacking the sled, burying most of the dog food and cutting up the rest occupied exasperating hours. But, once inside the igloo, with the door blocked up, thick deerskins spread over the floor and the candlelight flickering on the white snow wall, we felt we were living in a fairy tale."

JOINED ARMY

Mr. Rowley was at Igloolik in September, 1939, when a visiting mission ship reported the outbreak of the Second World War two weeks earlier. He boarded the ship for its return voyage to Quebec City and enlisted in the army.

He served overseas with the 1st Canadian Division, returning in 1946 to command the advance party for Exercise Muskox, a rugged 2,900-mile trip across the Arctic which tested war-developed army equipment. His group set up an airfield, weather station and advance base at Baker Lake in the eastern Arctic.

Muskox, which lasted eight months, proved theories that a force equipped with snowmobiles and tractors and supplied by airdrops could operate in severe winter conditions.

After retiring from the army with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, he joined the Defence Research Board as director of Arctic research.

In 1953, Mr. Rowley joined the department of resources and development — since renamed northern affairs and national resources—to co-ordinate federal activity, in the North. He now is secretary to the advisory committee on northern development.

He is a former chairman of the Arctic Institute of North America and former president of the Arctic Circle, a club for Arctic veterans.

NOTICE OF SALE BY SHERIFF

Steel Output Is Expected To Increase

CLEVELAND (AP) — March steel shipments likely will increase by about 15 per cent to 6,700,000 tons, with consumer inventories rising more than half a million tons, Steel magazine said today.

The metalworking weekly said the month's shipments should climb to the highest level since last April and quoted market analysts as citing these reasons:

"Economic conditions are better than expected, and steel is being consumed at a surprisingly fast pace. Users in seaonally affected industries like canmaking and construction are stepping up their purchases because they know their requirements will soar when the weather moderates.

Inventory liquidations is grinding to a halt. Some users are starting to hedge against the threat of a steel strike."

Automakers probably won't add much steel to their stockpiles in March, Steel declared, "but they're getting set to accelerate their hedging during the second quarter."

Notwithstanding a moderate sales pickup, distributors' stocks total an estimated 3,200,000 tons, compared with 3,400,000 tons a year ago.

Production will climb this week for the fourth straight week, Steel predicted, with output expected to pass the 2,100,000 tons the magazine estimated was poured last week, when the operating rate was 68.5 per cent of capacity.
