Irish National Land League.

The Land League held its usual weekly meeting in St. Patrick's Hall, last evening.
The President occupied the chair. Business of a preliminary nature having been disposed of, some additional subscriptions received by the Collecting Committees since their last report were handed in. It was decided that they retain their books to receive the further contributions of friends.

Mr. C. D. Collins read a very carefully prepared paper on the work which the Land League has accomplished, both in Parliament and out of it. Mr. Collins, in a clear and concise manner, dealt with the high-handed action of Parliament in muzzling free discussion of grave political questions by the hitherto unknown rules of gag law. Although these rules were specially introduced to stifle free discussion on demands for parliamentary reform of Irish grievances, they could, and possibly would, yet be used to summarily dispose of the clamors for reform of the grievances of the British public itself. He drew a parallel between the entreaties sent by the ancient Saxons of Britain to their Roman masters for one more legion to guard them from the attacks of barbarians and the entreaty of Irish landlords for "one more legion" to save them from their terrible Irish tenants.

Mr. John L. Trainor followed in a well-received address, in defence of the No-Rent programme, as laid down by the leaders of the Land League. He showed it to be a perfectly legitimate course to adopt. The cry for land reform was not to fix rents, but to abolish the system as had been done in Prince Edward Island. The lately established Irish Land Court had proved one fact—if it needed proof—that the rents which Irish holders of land had been paying were twice as high as the value of the holdings were worth. Considering these facts, it seemed a sound course to adopt, in the words of the manifesto, "to pay no rent until the Government relinquishes the existing system of terrorism and restores the Constitutional Rights of the people."

Councillor Byrne rose and highly complimented Mr. Trainor's fine address. He strongly endorsed the views therein set forth. The huge monopoly of Landlord-ism was repugnant to the unchanging principles of justice, and a burden on the industries of a nation, and no Government should permit such an evil to exist to mar social harmony with its baneful effects.

The ladies having honored this, as well as some previous meetings with their presence, a discussion took place as to the prospects for forming a Ladies' Branch of the League in this city. The Executive Committee was instructed to consider the matter and report at a future meeting.

On motion, the meeting adjourned.
RICHARD WALSH,
Secretary.

Ch'town, Feb. 14, 1882.

MARKETS.

EXPORTATION OF CANADIAN POTATOES TO HAVANNA.

To-day a shipper commenced loading ten car-loads of potatoes at the Grand Trunk yards at Point St. Charles, for Havana.
They are being shipped via New York, and ten cars more will be shipped to complete the order. The lot now being put on cars cost $1.10 per bag, and it is understood that $1.15 per bag has been paid for a part of the second batch. As Cuba in previous years has imported large quantities of potatoes from the United States, and as the latter country is compelled to import this season, we would not be surprised if this new export trade develops into important proportions.—Montreal Gazette, Feb. 7.

THE HORSE MARKET.

The following were the shipments of horses from this city to the United States:

Horses.	Value.
For week ending February 4th, 18 2	$12,223 50
For week previous	113 12,915 00
For corresponding week in 1881	129 11,535 14

A good demand exists for heavy draught horses, and good carriage teams on export account at former values. There are about 14 American buyers on the market, and about 80 horses were standing at the stables of the American House to-day ready for shipment.—Montreal Gazette, Feb. 7.

In the United States the Funding bill introduced by Mr. Sherman, ex-Secretary of the Treasury has passed the Senate, and is likely to receive favorable consideration in the House of Representatives. It provides for the issue of $200,000,000 of 3 per cent bonds of the United States, to replace a like amount of the outstanding 3½ per cent bonds, which are redeemable at the pleasure of the Government. In order to induce investors to purchase the new issue, it is provided that none of the bonds shall be retired until all outstanding bonds bearing a higher rate of interest have been redeemed. It being anticipated that investors will prefer the bond bearing a lower rate of interest, and having an indefinite period to run to the three and a half per cents, which may be withdrawn at any moment.
The amount of the new issue has been fixed at $200,000,000, because of their experimental character, no country having yet succeeded in keeping a 3 per cent bond at par, even in times of peace and easy money.

A Montreal gentleman has received a letter from London, Eng., stating that the menced in the spring. The enlargement

The Post and Daily News excepted, the English press has indulged in singularly few comments on this week's despatches describing the reversal of Blaine's South American policy and universal repudiation of his views by the people. The Daily News assumes that the Clayton-Bulwer treaty will stand, and likens Blaine to Oscar Wilde, Deacon Pogram, and Jefferson Briek.

In recognition of the gallantry displayed during the retreat to Candahar, the Horse Guards have conferred a commission as Lieutenant on Sergeant Algron M.
Caulfield, of the (late 65th) Berkshire R-giment. Lieut. Caulfield, who is only in his 24th year, was present at the battle of the Maiwand, and in the fearful retreat on Candahar he, although wounded in the leg, rendered such assistance to an officer of his regiment as to be the means of saving his life. This is the fourth commission from the ranks awarded for gallantry in the late Afghan war.

A good story, illustrating the audacious humour of R-menyi, the celebrated violinist, comes from Scranton, Pennsylvania.
While he was playing one of the finest passages in Schubert's serenade, the enchanted audience was disturbed by the vigorous crunching of peanuts by some one in the gallery. After enduring the irritation for a some time, Remyeni brought the solo to a sudden close, and, when recalled, made the following speech:—"Ladies and gentlemen, I now make me a little speech. That pen-nuts eater me very much annoy, and I think he enjoy himself so much as nobody else in the house. When he get through with his peanut solo I go on." This rally was loudly applauded, and there was no more peanut crunching for the rest of the evening. With a view to soothing the wounded feelings of his unknown tor-mentor, the violinist subsequently sent the following letter to a local paper, which published it with editorial comments:—"To the Editor—This is an open letter written to the great unknown 'peanuts eater and cracker, whom I have not the pleasure to know, and who showed his great bravura virtuosity in cracking peanuts while I was playing the softest strains in Schubert's lovely serenade, and whom I dared to rebuke publicly at the concert which I gave last evening at your nice Opera House in Scranton. It is now too late for me to repent for having rebuked him publicly, because he was right and I was wrong. The unknown peanut devourer was a real melonae, and of course also a gastronomae, and this I can prove beyond dispute. I'mo. His idea was to give to me and to the public in exchange of my musical notes, peanuts; besides, he meant it also well not only from a gastro-nomical, but also from a melonae standpoint—he wanted to help me with a kind of castagnette accompaniment. So you see, dear editor, he was not a fiend—on the contrary. But in future the great unknown gentleman peanuts cracker, eater and devourer would do wisely if he would bring with him a bushel of peanuts and to strew them on the floor. It would greatly relieve the monotony of a concert by this continuous kind of pedal ceez-craz accompaniment, which would be altogether charming and most harmonious. He might also, if he is rich, try to lay the foundation to a peanuts musical conservatory, for which philanthropical action he may well deserve the gratitude of the future peanuts crackers. Well may he live. EDOUARD REMYENI."
