Priest Criticized By African Paper

LAGOS (Reuters) — Internal Affairs Minister Alhaji Shehu Shagari of Nigeria said Tuesday he is not considering taking any action against a Canadian Roman Catholic priest here who has been criticized by a local newspaper.

The paper, the West African Pilot, claimed Monday Rev. James McKeown insulted Nigerians by allegedly calling them monkeys on a post card which the priest mailed home.

Father McKeown was not immediately available for comment.

Shagari told a reporter he had no knowledge of the alleged insult beyond what he had read in the paper, adding he would take no action unless requested to launch an investigation.

The West African Pilot said Father McKeown sent a post card from Bauchi, Northern Nigeria, to Mark McKinnen of Ottawa. The paper said the front of the card consisted of a picture of two Nigerian boy scouts. The paper published what purported to be the back of the post card on which was written: "Dear Mark: this is change from monkeys. Give my love to your grandad and grandma—tell them to take you to see the trains—it's a nice walk of 15 miles. Regards to the 'auld yins.' yours—from Jim."
