Address.

TO THE REV. E. BELL:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—You have now completed a term of useful labour among us, which was conducted on your part with interest and cheerfulness, and received by us with inestimable appreciation, although hitherto we have had no cause to give expression to our gratitude.

To the Temperance cause you have ever been a present help in time of need, and your readiness to perform any task we have placed before you, shows that yours was a labour of love. Every year of our acquaintance has linked us firmer together in friendship, and we much regret that we have now to part with one whose disinterested zeal in doing good has so entirely gained our affection and confidence.

Indeed, we feel that we cannot approach the whole of our duty towards you, but we ask you to accept this token of the respect with which we regard you.

We sincerely hope and pray that you may have a long and happy life of usefulness, wherever it is the will of Providence to place you, and that you may always continue to labour in the cause of Temperance with unmitigated zeal, and that success may crown your every effort and undertaking.

H. J. EREHAUT,
JOSHUA ROBERTS, JR.

REPLY.

DEAR OFFICERS AND BRETHREN,—I thank you for the kind expression of esteem contained in the address presented to me just before my departure. Need I assure you it is with feelings of deep regret that I leave a people and place that I have become so attached to? I feel that whatever help I may have been to the Temperance cause while in your midst, I have only been doing my duty. I trust that the good cause will prosper amongst you, and pray that when we have done with the things of earth, we may all meet in that Temple above, where parting is unknown.

Yours, in Hope and Charity,
E. BELL.

A Successful Business.

(From the Cambridge Chronicle.)

A representative of the Chronicle, a few days since, called upon Mr. Wm. G. McLeod, the agent for Fisherman & Co.'s, compressed yeast for this vicinity, and in a short interview obtained a few items of information which we deem interesting to our readers. It is almost twelve years since Mr. McLeod, in connection with his father-in-law, Mr. John Verity, took the agency for the sale of this yeast. At that time many of his friends and associates thought it a rather small affair, but through their energy, push and enterprise, it soon began to develop, and has continued to increase until it is now a most successful business. Mr. McLeod has the exclusive right for Cambridge, Somerville, Malden, Everett, Arlington, Medford, Lexington, Waltham and Newton, and his sales amount to nearly five thousand cakes daily; and as each cake is good for five loaves of bread it is safe to say nearly 100,000 people are made happy by having good bread every day. Mr. McLeod receives his yeast in bulk, direct from the New York factory every morning, when it is cut up into cakes and packed in silver foil. Three delivery carts distribute it to the grocers and dealers through the different towns, six horses being employed, thus giving alternate days of rest to each animal. Mr. McLeod has newly fitted up his premises at Inman street, office, packing room and stables having been remodelled in a very neat and convenient manner. It seems almost needless to say anything about the merits of an article so well known as Fisherman & Co.'s, compressed yeast. It has been before the public for more than twenty years, and has constantly increased in popularity, it is sales now far exceeding in amount those of any similar production. Its great superiority lies in the fact that it has always been of the best, is always reliable and never fails, if used according to directions, to make good bread. It has never deteriorated in quality since the first, but has rather increased in excellence. Under Mr. McLeod's management the yeast is delivered fresh every day; his drivers are gentlemanly and courteous, and any remissness on their part he assures us would be remedied at once by notice at the office.

The Mr. McLeod above referred to is a son of John Scott McLeod, Esq., St. Peter's Road. He left Charlottetown after serving his time as a shoemaker with John Yeo, Esq., eighteen years ago, and landed in Boston with a hundred dollars in his pocket. He has acquired considerable real estate, and clear of his business has an income from rents alone of $250 per month. His business is growing constantly. Mr. McLeod is truly a successful Islander!
