SPACE AGE PILL

Engineer Albert Waters studies a column of bubbles emitted by a common "morning after" tablet in an experiment that led Douglas Aircraft Co. space researchers to develop slosh suppression devices for use in space rockets. The bubbles provided a vivid picture of fluid agitation caused by sloshing action. Unless it is suppressed the sloshing of rocket fuels can throw rockets off course.

EXPO 67 SEEN GOLD MINE

Montreal Is Described Criminals' Wall Street

MONTREAL (CP) — The leader of a province-wide business group says Montreal is "a wall street for criminals," and the tentacles of the Mafia are the gates of Expo 67.

Jacques LeBlanc, president of the 3,000-member Federation of Quebec Businessmen's Associations, said here in an interview that "1967 will be a bonanza year for organized crime in this city."

"A special police corps must be set up immediately in the province of Quebec to clean up the situation this year. Next year will be too late.

But Jean - Paul Gilbert, director of the Montreal municipal police force said Wednesday the situation is not alarming and will not become so.

Mr. LeBlanc said Justice Minister Claude Wagner should be given "carte blanche to clean up crime and should be looked upon as, and given the powers of, a J. Edgar Hoover, longtime FBI chief.

"Montreal is the nerve - centre of organized crime in Canada he said. "Its international airport, seaport and the fact that it is a general entry point to Canada make it a gold-mine for gangsters.

He said his association represents small and medium-size businesses and that the protection racket, now flourishing, will boom in 1967.

"We know the prostitution racket will expand as well as gambling and sales of liquor, but as small businessmen, it is the growth of the protection racket we fear most of all.

"At the moment the hands of the police are tied. It is difficult to prove that you have been threatened and todays operators are smart. They send a 200-pound thug to pound his fist on your desk and threaten your life but he carries no gun.

"Then they arrange for 10 or 12 holdups at your place until the insurance companies will no longer protect you. After that you have little choice.

"Last week I saw a 55-year-old businessman crying like a baby because of the repeated menaces of the protection racketeers. They just scare th guts out of people.

Mr. LeBlanc said it is time for the federal, provincial and municipal police authorities to stop squabbling and tackle the crime question.

"Politics, of course, play a large part in this, he said. "If our governments really wanted to clean up crime they could do it in 24 hours. All we need is realistic law - making and emergency police powers and the might of the Mafia and crime syndicates could be broken forever in Canada.

Commenting on Mr. LeBlanc statements, J. Adrien Robert director of the Quebec Provincial Police, said closer co-operation between police and private citizen is a must.

He said private citizens should be requred to carry an identity card which would help dentify criminals.

Mr. Gilbert said he realizes there is a protection racket but deplores the fact that small businessmen do not make more use of police protection.

Bussinessman Regrets Lack Of Viet Nam Aid

NEW YORK (CP)—Canadian businessman James Stuart Duncan said here he regrets more Western countries, including Canada, are not playing a larger role with the United States in its policy of opposing the expansion of Chinese communism.

"It would be folly to underestimate china," said Duncan, author of the book A Businessman Looks at Red China."

"She is already a great nation, and will in the course of time occupy great status throughout the world.

"It would be equally foolish, however, to overestimate her," added Duncan, who made a six-week, 12,000-mile tour of China in 1964.

Considering China's "overbearing, truculent and aggressive mood," any immediate solution to the Sino - American problem would necessarily call for the United States' "unconditional surrender in the Pacific."

"I am confident, however, that with the unfolding of time, a solution to our problem will be found, providing we pursue a resolute policy of containment," Duncan told the U.S. National Association of Manufacturers' International economic affairs committee.

FORMOSA VITAL

U.S. abandonment of Nationalist Chinese - held Formosa, for example, would be regarded by mainland China as "evidence of weakness and a stepping stone to further demands."

Abandonment of Formosa "would open the road for Communist domination of all Southeast Asia, the Philippines, Okinawa, and would probably sound the death knell to Hong Kong's independence and leave Australia . . . and even New Zealand open to the land-hungry hordes of the rapidly expanding Asiatic peoples."

Duncan said that since his return from China he has been "frankly surprised at the important body of ill - informed people" who at teachings, institutes or conferences he had attended at universities throughout the United States have criticized the U.S. state department's China policy.

Based on his experience in China, Hong Kong and Washington, Duncan felt that the state department is not, as its critics contend, inflexible in its China stance.
