TURKEY AND GREECE.

The Patience of Many People Sorely Tried by Delay

LONDON, Aug. 3.—The Marquis of Salisbury, replying in the House of Lords yesterday to the Earl of Kimberley as to the state of the peace negotiations between Greece and Turkey, said it was no wonder the patience of many people was sorely tried by the delay. Lord Salisbury explained that the territory conquered by the Turkish army was one assigned to Greece by international arrangement, and therefore the powers' voice in regard to its disposal was recognized by the Sultan. The latter was right in demanding security against incursions such as brought about the present war. It was also reasonable to hold that the Greek communities should not be placed under Turkish rule. The premier further asserted that Her Majesty's ministry believed these questions had been settled, and that Turkey had accepted the frontier line traced by the military authorities of the embassies of the powers. Speaking of the indemnity to be paid to Turkey by Greece, the premier said: "There comes in the mysterious and difficult question of the German bond holders. We do not think that any international duty lies on Europe to provide for their payment, though I admit they have been long unpaid." Lord Salisbury further said: The credit of Greece in the European market will for a long time be exceedingly small, and there should be some form of control of the Greek sources of revenue. I cannot say that negotiations in that direction have advanced very far, and I must admit that the question may be a source of very considerable delay.

With reference to Crete, His Lordship said there was no use for the powers to attempt a form of government until a more important controversy had been settled. The present attitude of Crete seemed to be favorable to an agreement so far as the Christians were concerned, but the two creeds were no nearer than they had been for many centuries.

PERSECUTION OF CHRISTIANS.

Chinese Drive Missionaries from Stations—A Steamer Foundered.

On July 9th the Chinese Vuchon attacked and destroyed the mission of the Plymouth Brethren, and were about to attack the Catholic mission when soldiers interfered. The attack on the Plymouth mission was brought about by the report that the missionaries had killed a child. A mob of Chinese attacked the ladies' home boarding school, where five white women had taken refuge. Just as the mob broke in the door, the women escaped through a back gate to the house of Mr. Blanford. The mob demolished the ladies' home and then proceeded to the Blanford place and attacked it. The people escaped into the hills, where they hid all night in the darkness. The Blanford place was also looted and burned. The mob then rushed to the Catholic mission, but by this time the soldiers had been summoned and they dispersed the rioters. The next day the five women and Mr. Blanford were taken away in a boat. News has been received of the wreck of the steamer S. R. I. Hoong Anu, bound from Singapore to Malacca. The steamer foundered in a squall, ten miles from Malacca, and one hundred and ten people were drowned. Captain Rawlins and six passengers were saved.

MESSAGE TO MEN

Proving that True Honesty and True Philanthropy by Still Exist

If any man who is weak, nervous and debilitated, or who is suffering from any of the various troubles resulting from youthful folly, excesses or overwork, will take heart and write to me, I will send him confidentially and free of charge the plan pursued by which I was completely restored to perfect health and manhood, after years of suffering from Nervous Debility, loss of Vigor and Organic Weakness.

I have nothing to sell, and therefore want no money, but as I know through my own experience how to sympathize with such sufferers, I am glad to be able to assist any fellow-beings to a cure. I am well aware of the prevalence of quackery, for I myself was deceived and imposed upon until I nearly lost faith in mankind but I rejoice to say that I am now perfectly well and happy once more and am desirous therefore to make this certain means of cure known to all. If you will write to me you can rely upon being cured and the proud satisfaction of having been of great service to one in need will be sufficient reward for my trouble. Absolute secrecy assured. Send 5c silver to cover postage and address Mr. G. Strong, North Rockwood, Mich. 135 p&w.

FAITH AND THE UNIVERSE.

A trembling star that steals along,
Vast night's isolated wanderer;
A pale ghost by the splendor strong
Of Venus and of Jupiter;
A world forlorn, with one sad moon
To light across the unsounded deep
Her clouded orbit and, the swoon
Of her dream shaken, shuddering, sleep.
Is this the place where one should say
Was found a creed for all the spheres—
That truth's sole sun is the weak ray
That flits thro' our embarrassed years?
No thought of God august, benign,
Born of hope's, reason's, puzzled strife,
May fully the veiled force define
Which feeds the roots of boundless life.
—Joseph Truman in Spectator.

A SPIDER FIGHT.

It Was Fast and Furious and to the Death.

I once had a spider pet of a kind the books enabled me to identify. He was a fine, big fellow. I caught him in the garden, carried him home, and for nearly two months he and I took a close interest in each other, he for the flies I introduced to him and I for the amusement he introduced to me. I kept him in a milliner's box, letting him out when I visited him, specially delighting myself with allowing him to drop from one hand by his fine spun thread, and then either catching him in the other or gently compelling him to climb back again by apparently eating his own ladder.

One day I captured another spider of the same species. I kept him for a few days in a separate box, and then, with the kindly idea of companionship, I introduced him to Tiger. I have seen dogs fight; I have seen chanticler fight and slay his man; I have seen rams fight till, with his skull crushed in, one lay dead at the foot of the other; I have seen men fight; I have seen women fight—at least, they once were women—till they became a confusion of blood and hair and shredded garments; but the fullest sense I ever realized of mad, murderous passion let un governably loose, centered in one destroying aim and summoning every physical energy to its devilish service, I realized when those two spiders rushed to mortal combat. I stood in boyish terror as their tangled legs dropped off, torn by mutual rage, and as, with vicious dexterity, they struck each other with their poisoned fangs, using for their own destruction the weapons and appliances with which nature has provided them for the capture and slaughter of their prey, I visibly turned pale.

Tiger was the victor, but even while with brutal wrath, all mangled as he was, he bit and spurned his dead and limbless foe, he was seized with symptoms I took to be paralytic, and in a minute or two I helped him to his death. And this fearless gladiator was afraid of, I remember, and never would tackle, a big bluebottle fly. What is courage?—Manchester City News.

Grant as a Boy.

The late Colonel Jesse E. Peyton in his book of reminiscences thus described his first meeting with General Grant: "In the year 1838 I was working as a boy in a country store at Flat Rock, Bourbon county, Ky. Ulysses S. Grant was then a boy, living at Georgetown, O., not many miles distant. One day Grant drove over to Flat Rock with the niece of my employer. Grant was then 16 years old, awkward, ungainly, determined, industrious and very poorly dressed. He drove a vicious horse. The night after his arrival at Flat Rock he slept with me in the store. It was a cold night, and we boys kept close to the lee of the counter.

"In the morning Grant asked me if he could assist me. I said 'Yes.' He helped me take down the shutters and sweep out the store and put stock in place. After breakfast he drove off. I heard from him afterward of his drive home. Before he had gone far from Flat Rock his horse ran away, and finally brought up with a crash in a fence corner. Nothing broke. Grant jumped out, seized the trembling horse by the bridle and tied his handkerchief over the beast's eyes. He drove the horse blindfolded all the way to Georgetown, O."

It Made No Difference.

There had been a little family jar and she was sulking. "You have no right to refuse me," she said. "When I promised to marry you, I told you that I always wanted my own way, and you said that made no difference."

"Well, it doesn't, does it?" he retorted. "You don't get it, do you?" Thus it happened that she called him a mean thing.—Chicago Post.

Trolley Cars For Headache.

A Brooklyn man has told a reporter that a ride in a trolley car cures his headache. After a long day's work in his office he starts home with a headache, and after riding three miles the headache is gone. He thinks the air of the car is filled with electricity, and that the cure is due to that. Perhaps, however, it is only the fresh air that works the cure.

A Brazen Girl.

Miss Highup—It's perfectly scandalous. Did you hear about Miss de Pink? Miss Tiptop—No. What has she done? "Oh, the most immodest thing imaginable. She's let all the world know she is crazy to get married by going and joining a cookery school."—New York Weekly.

THE QUEST.

Upon my lips there fell when first the night
Fades in the highest heaven, seeing day
Far down the fathomless eastern depths
Away—
Fades with a fearful joy, a dread delight—
Even my lips, with waked watching white
There fell a kiss. One instant's space it lay
Soft as a roseleaf that the west winds fray,
And then my eyes awoke to dazzled sight.
The warmth, the tender impact and the thrill
Burnt on my lips, and the calm pulse of sleep
Awoke and quivered quick in soft surprise.
From that day forward knew I love!
And still
By day I search and nightly vigil keep
For her revealed to me in such strange wise.

THE BOER AT HOME.

He Does Not Hate All Englishmen, Only Some of Them.

Bryant Lindley met a Boer and asked the way. He received a surly answer which amounted to "Go to the devil!" Upon this he protested angrily, and the Boer rejoined in equal bad humor. At length the Boer shouted, "What's your name anyway?" and when he heard it his manner altered at once, and he exclaimed, "What, and are you the son of the great American missionary Daniel Lindley?" My friend gladly pleaded guilty to this charge, and the surly Boer became at once the most hospitable friend and begged forgiveness for his rudeness. As they rode together toward the road which my friend was seeking the Boer recounted with grateful satisfaction the many good deeds performed by the elder Lindley, but of them all the best to him was that represented by a sound thrashing he had once received at the hands of this venerable missionary. For it appeared that this particular Boer in his youth had been sent to a school taught by Lindley; that the Dutchman was noted for his size and strength and had bragged of his capacity to down the teacher, and had actually sought the opportunity by refusing obedience. But he soon learned that he had made a gross mistake, for this particular missionary was also a noted athlete and gave him such a hiding with a bullock whip that the young giant reared for mercy before the whole school. And for this and similar deeds the Boers loved the elder Lindley, and this particular Boer venerated his memory.

On the evening in question, when the two men were about to part, the Boer, who had been so uncivil at first, begged Lindley, with tears in his eyes, to grant him a great favor for the sake of his conscience. "Your father," said he, "did me a service so great that I can never repay it—he gave me the worst thrashing I ever had—he saved my character, and I am a better man today, thanks to him."

My friend cheerfully promised to grant the request, puzzling his head as to what was going to be required of him. The Boer was mounted upon an excellent horse, which he prized beyond anything he owned. He dismounted, put the reins in Lindley's hand and then ran away into the black forest as though the devil were after him. Here was no Indian giving. This Boer had put it out of the power of the American to discover the name or whereabouts of the strange giver.

It is a story typical of the Boer and serves to illustrate many apparent contradictions in his nature. He does not hate Englishmen in general. He hates only those who seem to threaten his peculiar quality of independence.—"The Dutch Feeling Toward England," by Poulitney Bigelow, in Harper's Magazine.

The Old Sandbox.

"Blotting paper," said a man of mature years, "has been commonly used for only about 40 years. Before that we used sand, which was poured from a sand box out upon the paper. Enough of it adhered to the wet ink to keep it from blotting. The rest was poured back into the box. I think I liked the old sand box better than I do the modern blotting paper. Sometimes when you opened a letter you would find sand in the envelope, which had rubbed off the letter in transit. But that didn't do any hurt, and the letter itself was more slightly to look at than the letter of today. It did not shade off pale, where fresh ink had been taken from the lines bodily by the blotter—it was uniform in color. And the lines, fine and coarse, were just as the writer made them—not blended or blurred or softened or spread out, more nearly uniform. They were clear and precise and characteristic of the writer.

"I liked the old sand box, but of course we couldn't use it now; we're too busy."—New York Sun.

Wonderful Forethought.

The habit of companies which insure against accidents to compel their patrons to resort to the courts to recover in case of injury was the occasion of this singular thoughtfulness, told by the president of a large accident company:

"Some time ago," he said, "a large policy holder in my company was run over by a Brooklyn trolley car and his right leg painfully crushed. He remained conscious after the shock for three minutes, during which time he pulled out his watch and called the attention of the crowd to the fact that it was just 15 minutes of 12. His policy expired at noon, and his foresight was rewarded by the immediate payment of his weekly indemnity without controversy or litigation."—Youth's Companion.
