Among The Farmers
Federation Of Agriculture News

Harvest Progress
While we do not believe that the moon controls the weather nevertheless we are forced to admit that fine harvest weather and the harvest moon coincided.

Save That Straw
Straw, while not of high feeding value is, if properly utilized a valuable material in the farm program.

Why Produce More?
Those in authority have been proclaiming that the way to beat inflation is to work harder, work longer and produce more.

Notice To Teachers
Rural school teachers who are interested in obtaining supplementary material as aids in teaching health subjects in relation to dairy products may obtain a free kit of such material for their schools by writing to "The Associated Milk Foundations, 24 Bloor Street East, Toronto 3, Ontario."

Membership Cards
Members who have paid their fees in cash and have not received their card for 1951 should check with their local secretary in case that remittance has not reached the office or that cards have been mislaid or not distributed.

Fairs And Plowing Matches
County Exhibitions have long been a valuable attraction and feature of agricultural life.

Graham Breeding School
We would call the attention of the breeders and herdsmen in particular to the course conducted by the Graham Scientific Breeding School at Moncton, New Brunswick starting on Tuesday morning, September 25th in Brunswick Hotel.

Vocational School
Boys and girls who have completed that part of their education to be obtained in the rural school and who do not wish to further pursue academic studies but who are interested in continuing their education along practical lines, in becoming better citizens, and in improving their earning capacity may well take a careful look at what our Vocational School has to offer.

Strange But True

By F. H. MacArthur

I am often asked: "Where do you get all the information that goes into Strange But True? The answer is: research, research, research, which does take a lot of time. Too, I have had considerable data furnished me from time to time, from persons who read and like my column, like author Fred McWharter of Kansas City, Mo., who recently thaled me a photo-story of the disastrous flood which swept across his state in July 1951, together with the following facts:

"Thousands of domestic animals were driven to upper floors of buildings, like the American Royal Building, and there starved to death before they could be rescued. A horse, after swimming across a street buried under 25 feet of water, climbed onto the roof of a two-story building, stayed there for a week (being fed and watered) and was rescued by a crane."

No. 7 in the photo-story series shows a lone porker standing on the aft-walk of a submerged box-car, with deep, swift water on either side.

Speaking of the industrial center of Fairfax, author McWharter writes: "Huge manufacturing firms are located in the Fairfax areas, including the Buick-Oldsmobile assembly plant. During the day of Saturday, July 14th, when hundreds of men and machines were doing battle to save the dike protecting the city, dozens of brand new cars, right off the assembly line and scores of good used cars were pushed into weak spots in the dike, and smashed into the breaches with heavy machinery, and covered with clay."

To add to the horrors of the flood, fire broke out which caused staggering losses to the citizens of Kansas City. It led Mr. McWharter tell the story:

"This became the greatest fire in the history of Kansas City, Mo. It started at 1 p.m. on Friday, July 13th. I saw the smoke from my bedroom window some 15 minutes after the blaze got under way. It soon spread over an area seven blocks long and ten blocks wide, all heavily built up with oil firms, lumber yards, etc. The blaze lasted 72 hours, and water up to 15 feet deep flowed past the burning buildings—large sections of the city were ordered evacuated of all residents during the worst of the conflagration. My wife and I watched the floor and fire on our T.V. set. We could look out our north window and watch the fire (about 1 1/2 miles away) with one eye, and see the same sad scene on television with the other eye!"

Creation is revealed through the law of atoms. The electric element gives the atom life until depleted. After an atom has been depleted from the loss of organic magnetism, the substance that remains is taken up by the atmosphere and spread beyond its limits. So numerous atom shells are imprisoned until revived by action of other energy. When this takes place they have the power of attracting and being attracted to do similar work in the organic construction of natural law.

The fluid air we breathe is a mixture of 20 per cent oxygen and 79 per cent nitrogen, with 8 per cent hydrogen. At the height of 20 miles the atmosphere changes to a mixture of 1 per cent argon, 14 per cent oxygen and 85 per cent nitrogen. At 100 miles up, the oxygen becomes dissipated into nitrogen, which in turn is absorbed by the hydrogen. Result: etherized air.
