Lilimani Perera Of Ceylon Is Entertained At Alberton

Alberton had a distinguished visitor Thursday afternoon in the person of Lilimani Perera of the Women's Institute in Ceylon, who is on a study tour in Canada this summer.

Mrs. Roy Drinnan of Bidford, her hostess, accompanied Miss Perera to Alberton where they were joined by Mrs. L. Lloyd White, a past president of the Women's Institute in this province, and a representative of The Guardian, Mrs. A.C. Green. Miss Perera was received at the town hall by Mayor Roy Leard and town clerk Thelma Ahearn. Before signing the guest book she was presented with a gift of local handicraft. A tour of Lanselet Museum was preceded by afternoon tea provided by Mrs. W.R. Oulton.

At Alberton South Miss Perera had opportunity to inspect fishing boats in various stages of construction at the shops of Alberton Industries and Hutt Brothers. During her visit to the Maple Tree Craft Workshop, Miss Perera displayed a keen interest in the woods used by Herbert Leavitt and his method of crafting them, and described some of the beautiful woods used in her native island. She was delighted to accept from Mr. Leavitt a small plaque bearing the provincial Women's Institute crest.

The handicraft Studio Workshop was another source of interest to Miss Perera who was

The August meeting of the Kensington branch of the Royal Canadian Legion Ladies Auxiliary was held in the Legion Home after cancellation of regular meetings for two months. Mrs. D.L. McNis presided. Mrs. Elmer Cole displayed two tablecloths received for labors.

Prices of blazers and skirts were discussed. A pantry and rummage sale was discussed but was shelved until after next meeting. The members plan to cater to a wedding on September 25.

Outer circle friends of the newlyweds, on receiving announcements, may either send gifts, or a gracious handwritten note of felicitation, or simply let the whole thing slide until a chance encounter provides opportunity for saying "bless you both."

In conclusion, therefore, my advice is: give or not, according to your wish and your purse, when the two couples' silver wedding anniversaries dawn. Don't let your hostess' frater bias cloud the decision.—M.H.

ON our Global Holiday Tour through the Coca-Cola Pavilion at the New York World's Fair, we entered a cool, pine-scented forest, and walked along a wooden pathway, to the replica of a realistic ski lodge in the Bavarian Alps.

Our journey took us: past racks of skis, a cozy corner where a table with a red-checked cover and low lights suggested romance, past a display of gleaming Bavarian China and glass; around a corner to a huge roof-high, combination

ELLEN'S DIARY

Warm Rains Produced Tasty Wild Mushrooms

"The rains we have had of late have certainly put a new face on things," James, husband to this farmwife, observed with a pleased smile to another farmer this morning. "They freshened the pastures. Why, even the lawns are green again!"

"They surely saved the day for us — and in more ways than one, an amount of feed for the stock" the other agreed.

"Put life in the aftermath," James nodded, "helped the potatoes, and other crops. Yes, it's amazing the change the rains have made."

"They brought the mushrooms," we remembered, "the first we found this summer!"

"So you folks had them too?" the visitor chuckled.

"One of us" James corrected with a twinkle. "For my part, I prefer to be fairly sure of what I eat!"

"Well, we had a dish of them yesterday at supper — the woman got them down on the brow of the hill, there below the house — and I don't know when I have eaten anything more tasteful."

"I'm always uneasy after folks eat 'wild' mushrooms. There might be a toadstool amongst them," James said.

Overly this day was, the morning full of sunlight, and blessed with a clean bright wind. One made especially, so it seemed, for the 4-H Calf Club, to which Mack and his sister belong, to betake themselves and their animals, off to a district not far from Alderlea, where on a farmstead an Achievement Day was being held. Young laughs, and odd young lowings intermingled as the calves were being eased up the ramp to the waiting truck in the barnyard. Scampie watched it down the lane and out of sight before returning to his beat in the yards. An interesting event, as always, in its various features, it proved to be, and enjoyed by the number of children and interested folks foregathered there.

This afternoon then, our farmers found their way along the fields to the heaps of wood by the woodlands, that since the springtime's harvesting had awaited the sawing there. Presently it was a familiar arched sound though unseasonal, which reached across the span of fields to the cooks. How busy then were the little trucks kept, bearing off the saw sticks to a woodshed. It was an ideal opportunity for the younger lads to catch rides to and from the scene of the work. Already young raspberry canes are commencing to cover that tidy piece of built-in heating stove and grill with walls decorated with trophies, deer and elk heads, and windows of leaded glass. From the lodge, the view of the towering Alps left us breathless.

Famous For Food

"We can imagine," remarked the Chef, "that after skiing and the exhilaration of the pure, clean air and sunshine, everyone will be hungry. Bavaria is famous for its fine food."

"There are plenty of salads, many made with herring. The soups are very substantial — bean, split pea, lentil and meat soups all with dumplings. There is Nuremberg Bread Salad with apple. There are many types of sausages grilled on the open grate and served with cabbage. One can have an interesting hot salad made with fried potatoes, vinegar and oil. There are many omelettes often served with Spaetzle (little dumplings). For dessert, there is almond cake and gingerbread."

"And, of course, there must be the famous Bavarian cream, one of the world's great gourmet desserts," I said. "That reminds me — today let's give our readers a new version: a Bavarian torte."

stump, which mated that springtime harvest.

"If the cattle are kept out of that corner" we call from this study of ours to James who reads in the kitchen, in his old armchair, "we'll have plenty of raspberries next summer!"

There is a silence. No reply. And now we remember hearing the porch door open and close a while ago, when a truck lighted "like a Christmas tree", came up to the yard. A first group of the cow-kind is being carried away tonight, to be in place in the morning, fed and content at "curtain-time" at the Crapaud Fair.

Priest Opposes U.S. Involvement In Birth Control

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Roman Catholic archbishop Sunday sharply opposed any U.S. government involvement in birth-control programs.

Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, indicating he was presenting the official position of the church in the United States, attacked what he said are attempts to promote birth control through the Johnson administration's anti-poverty program.

He also opposed a bill pending in the Senate that would provide federal funds for the dissemination of information and materials dealing with birth prevention.

"In a situation like this, involving serious moral issues in which people strive to form a right conscience, the role of government is clear—strict neutrality," he said in a sermon.

A positive solution, he said, would be to make better use of the still vast wide-open spaces in the United States through decentralization of industry and the consequent spreading of the population.

A few one-inch pieces of celery in the skillet while you fry fish eliminates the odor but doesn't affect the delicate flavor of the seafood.

Let children wear mismatched socks—everyone has them—for play and you save wear and tear on good socks and prevent the good ones from becoming mismatched so soon.
