Woman is an idol that man worships until he throws it down.

Women love always; when earth slips from them they take refuge in heaven.

Of all things that man possesses women alone take pleasure in being possessed.—Malthus.

Before promising a woman to love only her, one should have seen them all or should see only her.—A. Dupuy.

We meet in society many beautiful and attractive women whom we think would make excellent wives—for our friends.

We ensure the inconstancy of women when we are the victims; we find it charming when we are the objects.—L. Desnoyers.

The highest mark of esteem a woman can give a man is to ask his friendship, and the most signal proof of indifference is to offer him hers.

Men are so fearful of wounding woman's vanity that they rarely remember that she may by some possibility possess a grain of common sense.—Miss Braddon.

Woman among savages is a beast of burden; in Asia she is a piece of furniture; in England she is a spoiled child.—Senac de Meilhan.

It is not easy to be a widow; one must reassume all the modesty of girlhood, without being allowed to feign its ignorance.—Madame de Girardin.

Women of the world never use harsh expressions when condemning their rivals. Like the savage, they hurl elegant arrows, ornamented with feathers of purple and azure, but with poisoned points.
