concrete. Although nothing was established at the conference, the basic ground work was laid.

One may see an Ombudsman for problems between faculty and student in the future. There may be nights dedicated to music and drama on Campus. A Coffee Shop may be revived and events will be held that are not directly alcoholicly involved. A co-ordination centre may be put into use for students who are interested in doing different charity work or volunteer work in town. The list goes on and all of it thanks to the discussions at Involvement.

The weekend was fun, thought-stimulating, fascinating and probably the most memorable weekend in any student's university career. Seniors who attended felt ripped off that something similar didn't happen during their freshman year. All agreed freshman students benefitted most from the experience.

Father James Kelly summed up the weekend

well when he said, "People have gotten a better understanding of how their future life is going to be affected by how they're handling things now. If they study only their own particular corner they're going to end up distorting it. University is perhaps the best chance they'll ever have to talk to people studying other parts of life."

Was it worth $1,600? YES!
