

Buyer meets seller with Guardian Want Ads. Dial 8506 ask for classified ad taker, for quick results.

Cloudy showers beginning in afternoon, milder, south winds 25. Low-high at Charlottetown 32 and 53.

"Covers Prince Edward Island Like The Dew"

Little Improvement Seen In Tax-Sharing Prospects

Optimistic Viewpoint Diminishes

By GUY RONDEAU
Canada Press Staff Writer
QUEBEC (CP)—Premier Paul Sauvé's optimism of last week for appreciable improvements in tax-sharing arrangements between the provinces and the federal government before 1962 has diminished.

Mr. Sauvé addressing two delegations which presented briefs Wednesday, described as "unpalatable" the present tax-sharing agreements which set the provincial share of corporation income at nine per cent.

At the recent finance ministers' talks in Ottawa most provinces asked that the provincial share of corporation income be increased to 15 per cent while British Columbia asked for 25 per cent.

Mr. Sauvé did not say what share his government would like to collect in taxes.

The "evident disproportion" in the tax arrangements is a problem for all the provinces, Mr. Sauvé said.

But we must be realistic and we cannot expect major adjustments until 1962," he said. He added that perhaps some minor modification could be hoped for before that time but any important change would be "extraordinary."

Mr. Sauvé was talking to delegates of the Union of County Councils and the Quebec Federation of Labor (CLC) which presented their annual briefs to the provincial cabinet.

His statements Wednesday contrasted with his optimism last week when he said appreciable improvements in tax-sharing arrangements could be expected by 1962, and perhaps sooner.

Tax agreements were signed in 1957 for five years by all provinces except Quebec.

"I DECLARE this cornerstone to be well and truly laid" said Premier Walter R. Shaw yesterday as he laid the cornerstone of the new Canadian Legion home at Summerside yesterday. With the Premier is architect Keith Pickard.

Cornerstone Laid For Legion Home

SUMMERSIDE BUREAU OF THE GUARDIAN
Summerside's Canadian Legion members yesterday saw the cornerstone of their new building laid by Premier Walter R. Shaw who performed the ceremony with the trowel on the Notre Dame street structure.

The beautiful weather which prevailed through the Remembrance Day ceremonies prevailed as the legionnaires, the Premier and the assembled guests made the trip to the building which will be the new home for veterans in the Summerside area.

WORK PRAISED
Mr. Champion commended the building committee on their excellent work and named committee members as Mercier Mullin, chairman; Earl Cannon, Lorne Monkley, Dr. H. B. MacNeill, Joseph Murphy and Joseph LeClair.

Mr. Mullin congratulated the executives in office during 1958 and 1959 for their initiative and courage in planning the new home.

President Emmett Trainor placed the copper container in position behind the corner stone which contained copies of the three Island newspapers, photos of the executive, the building committee and furnishing committee as well as several coins.

CH'TOWN MAN HANDLES CUP
METZ, France (CP)—They're playing for the Little Grey Cup here Saturday and if the patter sounds familiar, that's the way they want it.

Algeria Peace Move Is Seen

By HAROLD KING
PARIS (Reuters)—Responsible French officials Wednesday forecast a concrete move toward Algerian peace in the near future.

They provided no details for their optimism beyond pointing to President Charles de Gaulle's renewed offer to the Algerian insurgents.

De Gaulle said on Tuesday the leaders of the five-year insurrection could come to France in complete secrecy if they wished to discuss a cease-fire.

He also reaffirmed this plan to grant Algeria self-determination within four years of the end of hostilities.

REBELS EMBARRASSED
Reports from the Tunis headquarters of the Algerian rebels said they felt "embarrassed" by de Gaulle's statement. They demanded a formal statement, however, until they had fully studied the text.

Cable Break Is Reported

SYDNEY (CP)—A break in a transatlantic cable 200 miles off the Newfoundland coast has knocked out 36 telephone circuits to France and Germany, John Stephens, manager of the Eastern Telephone and Telegraph Co. Ltd., said Wednesday night.

The cable ship Cyrus Field was to sail from St. John's at dawn today to investigate and repair the break.

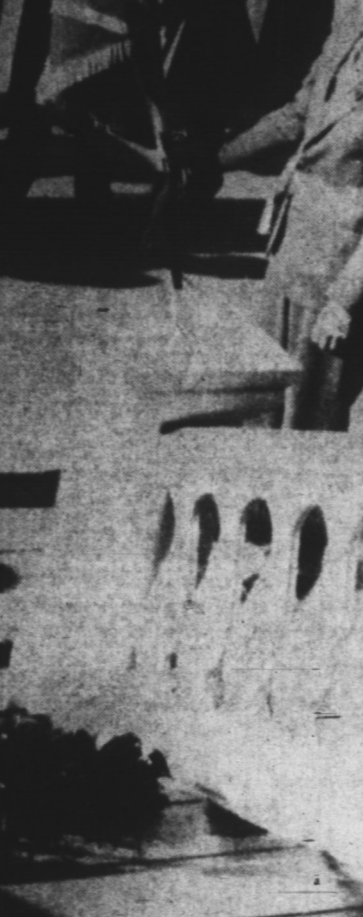

In Halifax, Walter Lancaster, superintendent of the cable ship depot, said the break could have been caused by any ship that passed through the area.

"Damage to cables is a fairly frequent occurrence," he said.

The broken cable stretches from North America to Penmark, France.

A P-3V patrol plane of the United States naval base at Argentia, Nfld., was sent over the area Tuesday to see if any ships were in the area that might have caused the break. It had to return to base because of poor visibility.

Additional members of the commission named by prime minister Diefenbaker last May are: Archibald H. Balch, Ottawa; Rene Gobeil, Quebec City; Howard Mann, Moncton; Arnold Platt, Lethbridge; and Herbert Ancombe, Victoria.

wreaths during the impressive service at which Rev. J. W. McCardie delivered an eloquent address. (Story on Page 3).

LT.-COL. JOHN A. Macdonald, M. P., for Kings, is seen placing a wreath during Remembrance Day services held yesterday at the Kings County Memorial Hospital, Montague. A large number of citizens and organizations also placed wreaths during the impressive service at which Rev. J. W. McCardie delivered an eloquent address. (Story on Page 3).

Woman Who Remembers Lays Wreath For Mothers

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer
OTTAWA (CP)—A woman who remembers not only on official Remembrance Day but on every other day of the year placed a wreath for all bereaved mothers at the national war memorial Wednesday.

Mrs. W. B. Anderson, 65, of Craigmyle, Alta., a tiny, gallant figure in black, placed the wreath after Governor-General Vanier, a soldier in both world wars, placed a wreath for all Canadians.

Mrs. Anderson lost all three of her sons in air combat during Second World War bomber operations over Germany. Two of them were "wins" and one of them, Billy, has no known grave.

The other two, Jimmy, is buried at Fulford, Yorkshire, England, and the eldest son, Lloyd, at Rheinburg, Germany.

20,000 LOOK ON
A quiet throng of about 10,000 ringed the memorial in Confederation Square or stood on a nearby slope of Parliament Hill for the 10-minute ceremony on this warm autumn day.

The playing of O Canada by the massed bands at 10:59 marked the beginning of the ceremony.

The two-minute silence began at 11 a.m. with the firing of a signal gun. For the only time in the year, the clock in the Peace Tower of the parliament buildings did not strike the hour.

THE LAST POST
The bugler sounded The Last Post and the band played the hymn Abide With Me as Gen. Vanier, wearing a general's uniform with blue cloak, placed the first wreath.

Gen. Vanier threw his gaze to the very summit of the granite memorial, then saluted with a white-gloved hand.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker and legion president Maj. Dave Burgess, both First World War veterans, placed wreaths and were followed by the armed forces' chiefs of staff while the band played the hymns Lead Kindly Light and O God our Help in Ages Past. The dipped Legion flags were raised again. The band played God Save the Queen, and the ceremony was completed.

Four briefs will be presented today to the six-man Royal Commission on Transportation during a three-hour hearing to be held in the Charlottetown Court House.

J. O. C. Campbell, Q.C., and Gerald R. Foster will present the brief prepared by the government of the Province, following a short introduction by Premier Walter R. Shaw.

Briefs will also be filed by the Charlottetown board of trade, the Summerside board of trade, and the Canadian Truckers Association.

Witnesses to appear include J. Lincoln Dewar, secretary of the Prince Edward Island federation of agriculture; D. A. MacDonald, manager of the Producers' Co-operative Association; E. D. Reid, president of E. D. Reid Produce Limited; and Walter Wilson, produce division manager of Canada Packers' Charlottetown plant.

Captain Claude R. Hunter, chairman, will present the brief to be submitted by the Charlottetown board of trade, and Keith MacKinnon, president of the local association, will speak for the truckers.

Today's sitting of the Commission will be chaired by acting chief commissioner, M. A. MacPherson, Q.C. of Regina. In the absence through illness of the chief commissioner, C. P. MacTague of Toronto, commencing at 10:00 a.m., the single sitting of the Commission here is scheduled to conclude at 1:00 p.m.

Additional members of the commission named by prime minister Diefenbaker last May are: Archibald H. Balch, Ottawa; Rene Gobeil, Quebec City; Howard Mann, Moncton; Arnold Platt, Lethbridge; and Herbert Ancombe, Victoria.

INFORMAL MEETING
An informal meeting between the provincial government and the commissioners will be held after lunch. The commissioners and their party of officials accompanying them will leave the Province at 6:45.

Yesterday the commissioners visited Summerside and the National Park. Their itinerary included a trip on the carferry Abegweit and Scotia II, luncheon at the Borden Hotel, and visits to the fishing centres of Cavendish and North Rustico.

"Even those of us who visited Prince Edward Island before gained a new insight into some of its beauties."

(Continued on page 5 Col. 4)

will recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.

But Air Vice-Marshal Thomas J. Kelly released an excerpt from his diary describing Churchill as "looking slightly cyanosed (blue) in the face" as his plane went higher than planned to avoid a storm.

Lord Moran, Churchill's physician at the time, denied Wednesday that Churchill ever was in danger on a flight in December of 1943 from Carthage to Marrakech in Morocco, where Churchill recuperated from pneumonia and heart irregularities.