U.S. Has Fears Of Another Cuba As Guyana Becomes Independent

By ARCH MACKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP)—The United States is welcoming the newly-born Guyana into the Western-hemisphere family of nations with mixed emotions. It smells another Cuba.

This appears to be a general apprehension in this communism-conscious land where Cuba remains an off-shore ideological infection and American troops still are posed in the Dominican Republic after last spring's military intervention in the name of anti-communism.

When the Union Jack came down at midnight Thursday morning in the expiring colony of British Guiana, it became automatic in American thinking that Guyana now was in the American sphere of influence and protection.

But there seems to be considerable pessimism that Guyana, starting off in debt, will make a go of it politically or economically.

The villain in the wings is the Marxist-dentist Cheddi Jagan, regarded here as another Fidel Castro. American aid to Guyana was cut off several years ago when Jagan was Guyana leader.

ENJOYS SUPPORT
He has the support of the East Indian population comprising the majority of the 650,000 Guyanans and he is anti-American.

The common assumption is that the U.S. urged Britain to stay as long as it could prepare the way for handing off the Jagan government. The last British troops are due to leave about October.

The New York Times says the present election system, rigged against Jagan, may not hold up and the possibility of another Castro-type regime in the Western Hemisphere thus will continue to haunt the U.S. and other American countries for some time.

The Washington Evening Star says Jagan has made no bones about establishing diplomatic and trade relations with Cuba if he gets back to power in elections due by 1968.

But then, Mexico has insisted on doing the same thing and relations with the U.S. remain good.

The question of Guyana's joining the Organization of American States does not seem important.

In any event, she will get the aid she needs from the U.S. at least as long as Jagan is kept out. Besides, neighboring Venezuela says two-thirds of the new little country is hers and that scrap might bar Guyana entry.

Steel Bookings Higher In U.S.

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP)—Steel mill bookings for May appear to be running five to 13 per cent behind the April pace, and automakers are almost entirely to blame for the dip, says Steel magazine.

Obviously, the lag in auto sales and the mammoth inventory of unsold cars (1,500,000 units) are causing more than casual concern in the steel market—the weekly journal of metalworking reports.

That's understandable considering automobiles account for around 20 per cent of total steel consumption.

Correction of the auto industry imbalance will probably see some assembly plants closing for model changeovers earlier this year than last—possibly by the end of June.

Some steel product lines, notably sheets, have been jarred by the automotive cutbacks, the magazine says, but adds:

"Orders from appliance manufacturers, machine tool builders, structural fabricators and service centres continue to hold up surprisingly well in view of the general economic uncertainty attending the slackening in automobiles, and the continued erratic behavior of the stock market."

EXPECT IMPROVEMENT
Steelmakers anticipate shipment of finished steel products in the second half of this year will better first-half volume by a small margin, the magazine says.

BABY PICKED PROPER SPOT

DALLAS (AP)—Tom Rubio was rushing his wife to the hospital for the couple's third child when his wife ordered him to stop the car because the baby was coming.

Rubio wheeled into a parking lot at the Coca-Cola Company bottling plant, yelled to a man standing in the doorway to get help, and then began to assist his wife.

Moments later, he was surprised to see a group of pregnant women surrounding the automobile and offering encouragement.

"They told me I was doing fine," Rubio said.

Then a nurse appeared and helped complete the delivery of the couple's first-born, Tom Rubio, Jr.

After the mother and child were taken to the hospital, Rubio learned that he had stopped his car next to the bottling company auditorium, where Mrs. Evelyn Wormser was conducting a class in "preparation for childbirth" for the Dallas Association of Parent Education.

She was explaining the second stage of labor, the actual childbirth, when the Rubios

Field Marshal's Famous Car Receives Bit Of Face Lifting

OTTAWA (CP)—The round trip to the body shop as a routine and humiliating 28 blocks. Like a woman bound for the powder room, Field Marshal Alexander's command car needed freshening this spring.

But no towed at the end of a rope was something new for this celebrated vehicle, veteran of four years in the African desert and Italy and 20 years on public display.

The car is one of the most curious trophies up for inspection by the 200,000-plus visitors annually at the Canadian War Museum.

It's a 1941 Ford sedan which underwent a 36-hour conversion in Cairo to meet Lord Alexander's demand for a mobile, reliable vehicle.

The conversion eliminated doors and added wooden gunwales on each side for added strength. Extra wide tires without treads kept the car from sinking in the sand; a rubber tube drained condensation from the radiator into a metal container to save water. A gun was mounted on the driver's side, and metal racks around the rear stored gasoline, water and oil.

Joe Wells, the field marshal's chauffeur through Tunisia, Algeria, Sicily and Italy, has lived for many years in Ottawa. He recalls that the 6,000-pound vehicle never failed in a critical situation.

It went through three engines and Mr. Wells recalls that a handful of sand could be cleaned from the filter each night.

Scatched and dented, its collapsible hood and leather seats stained with tea for camouflage, it was presented to the museum in 1949 at the request of Lord Alexander, governor-general of Canada from 1946 to 1952.

Museum curator Lee Murray ordered the car to be brought to its shiny best, with an eye to the Centennial Year celebration of Veterans' Week, when the car will appear with the National Aeronautical Collection in Ottawa.

They won't need a rope then. With its battery replaced and says These predictions are based on an assumption that fourth-quarter production of 1967 model cars will be at a high level.

Estimate in-got output of 2,776,000 net tons last week was up about 11,000 tons from the preceding week. Steel reports, adding that a 2,700,000-ton average weekly output in June would result in about 66,200,000 tons production in the first six months compared with 70,600,000 in the first half of 1965.

Scrap prices took a dive last week; the composite price on No. 1 heavy melting was down $1.34 to $28.83 a ton. That's the lowest since mid-March, 1964, and the end of the decline is not in sight, says Steel.

DO BETTER IN CANADA

Guernsey cows have been exported from Canada to Britain because the breed improved in the 50 years it has spent here.

higher costs of essential commodities and services.

For the middle- and upper-income taxpayers, most of the 10-per-cent cut in basic taxes made last year by former finance minister Gordon is being withdrawn. The purpose of this is to drain off spending power which tends to bid up prices.

Deductions from pay cheques to withhold taxes at these new rates start June 1.

These tax adjustments are an exercise in applied economic theory—the theory being that economic expansion can be encouraged by putting more spending power in the economic stream, and over-expansion can be dampened by taxing some of the spending power out of the stream.

Finance Minister Sharp, in addition to proving himself an accomplished politician, is by training an administrative executive and economist.

TWO POINTS OF VIEW
It is understood that he carefully judged the situation from both points of view when he drew up his March budget. As an economist he wanted to dampen over-expansion by drawing off some spending power.

But as a politician he didn't want to introduce such a tough, stringent tax policy that he might stir up strong criticism and complaint in the face of which he might have to withdraw.

He recognized that one of the mistakes his predecessor, Mr. Gordon, had made in his first budget was the introduction of taxes which he later had to withdraw. A finance minister rarely recovers his prestige fully after such an experience.

There was some doubt a few weeks ago—even in Mr. Sharp's own mind, it is reported—that the new taxes now coming into effect would be strong enough to meet the situation.

STOCKS ACTIVITY NOTED
But the last few weeks, particularly in the United States and as reflected by stock market activity both in the U.S. and in Canada, there has been a change in the economic atmosphere.

Some important economic indicators now point to a crest having been reached, at least temporarily, in the big expansion which has been going on for more than five years.

As most economists now see it, there is still a good deal of underlying strength, enough to ward off any pessimistic prediction of a serious recession.

But there appears now to be a period of pause in the upward surge, for consolidation of expansion already made. The dampening effect of the new taxes should, in the view of economists here, extend this into a plateau which can form the base for further expansion later on.

New Taxes Effective This Week Expected To Slow Up Inflation

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—The new personal income and corporation profits taxes that become effective this week are designed to put a squeeze on the overheated economy.

That was the intention, at least, when Finance Minister Sharp announced the moves in his March 29 budget.

Some weeks later, Ottawa authorities were wondering whether the squeeze would be tight enough and would come soon enough to be really effective.

Now, however, as the first payments of the new taxes became due this week, there is a feeling that they are more likely to be just right for the purpose.

The new taxes include a five-per-cent-a-year refundable tax on cash profits of companies earning more than $30,000 annually, to be collected for 18 months and then paid back with five-per-cent interest in the following 18 to 36 months, depending on the state of the economy then. The first payments are due Tuesday.

ADJUST INCOME TAXES
The other new tax is double-barrelled adjustment of personal income taxes. For the low-income wage-earner there is actually a small reduction, putting some more spending power in his hands, principally to meet
