

Anti-Freeze Kills Prisoners

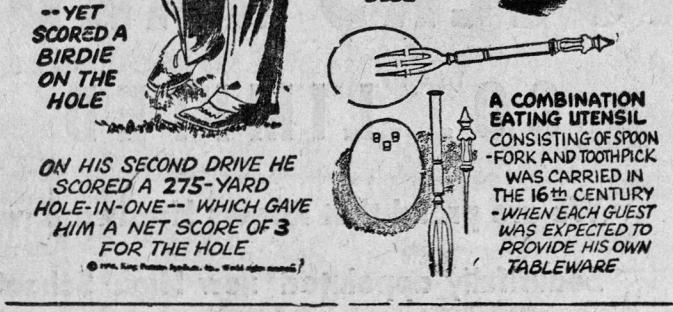

VANCOUVER (CP) — Officials of Okalla Prison in suburban Burnaby said Tuesday investigation has disclosed that two prisoners who died Sunday of poisoning drank anti-freeze fluid taken from a truck.

They said Archie Morin, 28, of Montreal and Joseph Bastarache, 48, of Moncton, took the fluid Saturday while the vehicle was parked at a Chilliwack forestry camp where they were at work.

Two other prisoners who drank the fluid are being treated in hospital here and are reported in good condition.

Officials said an inquest will be held into the deaths but no date has been set.

opponents would surely set to a slam if he passed five clubs. He hoped, by doubling, to intimidate the opposition, and also realized that if the doubled five club contract were redoubled, no harm, and perhaps a lot of good, would come even if six were made.

A redoubled five club contract made with an overtrick would come to 900 points while a six club contract made totaled 920 points. The 900-point minus score would therefore beat any other East-West pair against whom six clubs was bid and made.

But declarer also realized the situation when he saw dummy. Making the contract with one overtrick would not compensate for the lost slam. So he set forth on a campaign to make seven and recoup the lost opportunity to bid a slam.

He ruffed the heart lead with the king and led a trump to dummy's eight. A heart was trumped with the ace.

Still requiring three entries to dummy to accomplish his purpose south led a low diamond and played the seven.

The last heart was now ruffed to complete the dummy reversal. Dummy was then entered with a diamond and all the trumps were played, declarer discarding three spades.

It is true West could have prevented seven from being made by putting up the nine on the first diamond lead. But who would want to spoil a story like this?

Opening lead—nine of hearts. This hand goes back many years and arose in a duplicate game, where the prime consideration is to get a better score than other pairs who play the same hand.

The bidding is recorded as it took place. West had paid his card fee and felt entitled to bid whenever the mood moved him. The double of five clubs, incomprehensible as it is, did have some sense to it, but the spade bid defies logical explanation.

The hand was played in the days when there was no 50-point bonus given for making a doubled contract. West thought the

Secretary Of State Has Ambition To Become Flyer

By BERNARD DUFRESNE

Canadian Press Staff Writer OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's new secretary of state, Henri Courtemanche, may become known as "the flying cabinet minister" but it won't be because he'll be flying in airliners.

"The one big dream of my life has always been to have my own plane and fly wherever I want to go," he said in an interview after his recent appointment to the Progressive Conservative cabinet.

"I'm ready to fly my first solo now, and as soon as I get my licence I plan to buy a plane and fly regularly between Ottawa and my home," he said.

Home for the 41-year-old lawyer is Mont Laurier, Que. in the Laurentian Mountains. He plans to commute as often as possible, flying a seaplane between Lac Des Ecorces (Bark Lake) near Mont Laurier, and the Ottawa River at nearby Rockcliffe. Mont Laurier is about 135 miles by road from Ottawa.

INDEPENDENT TRAITS

Mr. Courtemanche, who was deputy speaker of the Commons in the last Parliament, was known as "le petit bourassa" after his first independent-minded sorties during his first term in Parliament in 1949-53.

"They still call me that," he said.

The late Henri Bourassa, the independent-nationalist who represented Labellé — Mr. Courtemanche's constituency — at the turn of the century and in the late 1920s and early 1930s was the founder of Montreal's nationalistic-minded daily newspaper, Le Devoir.

"I guess they tagged me with that name because I'm a fiery orator — like Bourassa — and because I split with the Progressive Conservative attitude twice during my first term in the Commons."

He referred to the fact that in 1950 he voted against the Liberal government, and against his party, on the question of sending Canadian troops to Korea.

SPLIT WITH PARTY

Later, he and Solicitor-General Balcer split with the Conservatives by supporting a Liberal motion to replace the term Dominion day with Canada Day.

"But the Progressive Conservative party likes independent-minded members who stand by their convictions, and the party never held my attitude against me," Mr. Courtemanche said.

He was a Progressive Conservative candidate in 1949. He was defeated in 1953, and ran again as an independent Progressive Conservative in 1957. This year he ran again as a straight Progressive Conservative.

He had supported Finance Minister Fleming in the party leadership contest won by Prime Minister Diefenbaker in December, 1956. That, along with the fact that his constituents traditionally like independent-minded MPs, led him to run as an independent-PC last year.

The first he heard that he would not be deputy speaker of the Commons again for this Parliament was on the eve of the start of the session. A friend telephoned to say he had heard a news broadcast that Pierre Sevigny, member for Longueuil, had been named deputy speaker.

Meanwhile, Mr. Courtemanche had received a call from the prime minister, who next morning told Mr. Courtemanche of his appointment.

"It was a great day, since the appointment came on my 13th wedding anniversary," he said.

Mr. Courtemanche is married to the former Gisele Paquette, daughter of Dr. Albin Paquette, Quebec's health minister and Union Nationale member of the provincial legislature for Labellé since 1939.

A lawyer, Mr. Courtemanche has maintained two offices — in Montreal and Mont Laurier. He has specialized in criminal cases. He has defended three persons charged with murder, winning each case.

However, he said he is in favor of capital punishment which he regarded as a deterrent to murder.

Arabian Nights Brought Finds

By BRADCHER & BREYER

TORONTO (CP) — Exquisite carved ivories, treasures from the ancient Assyrian city of Calah, may come to Toronto as a result of an archaeological project being worked in northern Iraq this spring and summer.

Dr. A. D. Tushingham, head of the Royal Ontario Museum's art and archaeology department, said the museum will carry out the digging in co-operation with the British School of Archaeology in Iraq.

Calah was built by the Assyrian King Assurnasirpal II, and served as the capital for the Assyrian empire during his reign and that of his son, from 883 to 824 B.C.

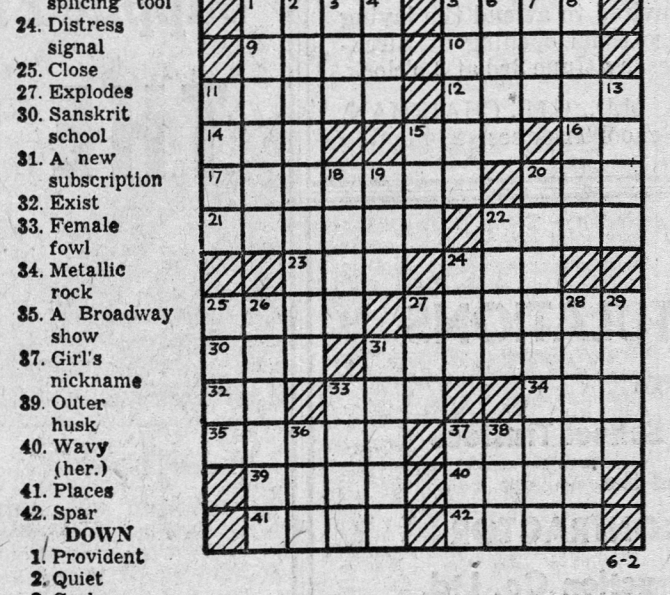

BIBLICAL SITE

Located near the city of Mosul, and site of the biblical town of Nineveh, the Calah mound was first excavated in 1842 by the British archaeologist Sir Austen Henry Layard, who was inspired in his search for ancient cities by reading the tales of the Arabian nights.

He uncovered the historical black obelisk of Shalmaneser III, son of Assurnasirpal, and a number of huge stone lions and bulls with carved human heads, now in the British Museum at London.
