A solution for you. Your child would be deprived of a father's love and care and you'd have to do the supporting anyway.

DEAR MISS DIX: What advice can you give me about my next-door neighbor borrowing, and never, never bringing back a thing?

ANSWER: The only way to stop a perennial borrower is to stop giving. When she comes in for a cup of sugar, tell her the canister is empty.

DOROTHY DIX cannot reply personally to readers, but will answer problems of general interest through her column.

STATE OF BUSINESS—According to the Bank of Montreal Business Review for July in the Maritimes, wholesale and retail trade was well maintained at the same level or somewhat higher than a year ago. Automobile buying, however, has been adversely affected by credit restrictions and by heavy purchases earlier in the year.

of lumber continues strong, although there are indications that the pulpwood market has lost its edge. Fresh fish catches have been good and the domestic market has been firm; stocks of dried fish are low, demand from the Caribbean area is good and there is a possibility of the West Indian sterling market reopening to Canadian fish. Crops are progressing favourably; a bumper hay crop is being harvested; acreage to potatoes may be down as much as 55%; the apple crop promises well. Coal and steel production continue on a full-time basis.

"Oh," she gasped; "I hated London—the coward!"

He smiled. Her hot tone championed him; she was his friend.

"You know everything now," he said gently. "I was going to tell you all but I couldn't—it's not true; you believe that?"

She nodded, speechless. "It will never be cleared up. I'm afraid. There's only one thing to do; I've got to make a new life and a new name for myself. I'm going out west, as they say. I don't know how far—as far as I can, I fancy. I'd like to feel free, to draw long breaths of freedom; I've had fifteen years of—the other thing!"

ing down at her, not touching her—he must go away and never see her again, for he was sure that he would never be cleared. She was like a child, like a white flower, he thought again. If a fierce wind blew on her it would break her; yet there was something strong about her too.

"I've got to go," he whispered at last. She nodded, looking down, her lips drawn close together. He drew his breath hard. "If I'd only come here like other men!" he groaned.

She smiled. "You couldn't," she said softly. "For you're just like anyone but yourself. I—you believe me, don't you, when I say I trust you? I know you're innocent."

"Pam, I love you!" he answered passionately. "There! I never meant to say it; I've no right to say it, but I've got to; I loved you that first day—you know it?"

She lifted her head at that. "I know," she said softly. "I knew then."

He caught her in his arms and held her close. "If I wasn't innocent of that charge I couldn't touch you," he said. "I've no right to do it now, for I must go away. I didn't mean to tell you, but I've beaten, I can't go without it. I've got this to remember when I'm alone—way off somewhere—trying to make good!"

I could—I wish I could marry you today and carry you off." She clung to him, sobbing. "I go—tomorrow, if you're going," she said. "I'll show them that I believe in you!"

"Oh, you angel! You'd ruin your life, marry an ex-convict—just to show your faith in him?" "Just because I love him!" Pam said bravely. "Oh, Mark, I was as miserable just now—I'll be happy battling for you!"

He took her hands gently from his neck and held them in both his, looking at her with haggard eyes.

"Because I love you so much I can't let you do it, Pam. I'd be a coward to let you do it!"

"Why? I've a right to marry anyone I please!" She was a gallant little thing, ready to battle for him.

"No," he said gently, "not a convict! You don't know what it would be. We couldn't keep that secret back. It'll follow me—look at London."

"Oh, London!" she cried contemptuously. "There are many Londons. They'll point at me. I've got to face that, but I'd never ask the woman I love to face it. Pam, you'd be brave at first, but it would break you. Oh, I know! They'll call me a murderer; they'll talk of it. Because I adore you, I won't make you bear that; an ex-convict's wife, a man who isn't cleared; it would wear you down, break your heart!"
