Tory Talks in Britain

By ROD CURRIE LONDON (AP)—The Conservative party's annual conference got off to a lackluster start Wednesday with an overwhelming approval of the party's economic policy.

The speech by Reginald Maudling, the recently appointed chancellor of the exchequer, wound up the debate, apparently did little to enlighten the delegates.

The debate, in general, had the effect of finally bringing to the highly unpopular all-though somewhat successful pay raise, a scheme of former treasury chief Selwyn Lloyd for freezing incomes until production and exports caught up.

The majority of speakers found fault with the resolution supporting the policy. "But if they are secured, not by greater efficiency but by brute force of monopoly, either by capital or labor, then the effect will be that the total of incomes will rise and inflation will follow and many wealthy and deserving sections of the community will be left behind."

POPE JOHN XXIII, 86, and the prime of Poland, Stefan Cardinal Wysynski, are shown during their 45-minute conference in the Vatican.

The Viscount carried a crew of four and 19 passengers. The two men of the Voodoo crew managed to gain enough altitude after the low-level collision to work their ejection seats and they parachuted into a field near the airport.

The men were identified by the RCAF as Flying Officers J. S. Whalley of Saint John, N.B. and R. S. Jeffrey of the London, Ont., area.

Whalley was the pilot and was injured in the ball-out. Jeffrey, the navigator, broke an ankle.

Farm Group Seeking School Spud Pickers

The executive council will consider this afternoon a request from the P.E.I. Federation of Agriculture that it authorize regional high school trustees boards throughout the province to close their schools for one week so pupils can help out in the job of potato picking.

The time of the requested vacation would be left to the trustee board in each school, and would depend on how many potatoes are ready for potato harvesting at the time.

The request has been made secretary J. J. Dewar said last night, owing to the unusual difficulties encountered this year which has kept the grain and potato harvesting season so late.

Many farmers in Western Prince are ready to start potato harvesting and a few have started already, but most farmers in Queens and Kings Counties still have a great deal of grain to harvest and a few are only getting started.
