SMART AND CAREFUL OF HIS BELIEF.

A good story, though old, does not lose its merit on that account, and we think the following will be considered one of this class:

A boy travelling out of London on foot was met by a gentleman on horseback who reined up and enquired of him

"Well sir, do you know what time it is?"

"I do not sir."

"Is it twelve?"

"It is not less."

"Is it one?"

"It is not more."

"Where did you come from?"

"Where I could be well spared."

"Where are you going to?"

"Where I'm not wanted."

"What is your belief?"

"The same as that of the old woman who sells beer in the lane."

"I think you are an insolent vagrant, so I will take you to the Mayor who will probably prevent you from going where you're not wanted."

"All right," said the boy, "you will only see me let go again."

Accordingly he was taken back and brought before the Mayor. The gentleman having made his accusation the "young vagrant" was asked if he had anything to say.

Yes sir, I met this gentleman, as he says, and he asked me what time it was, I told him I did not know, because I did not, he then asked me if it was twelve and I told him it was not less, because it struck that hour as I left London, then he asked me if it was one; I said it was not more, for I knew that I had not been an hour on my journey. He then asked me where I came from; I could not see very well why he should ask, but I thought it best to be civil, and told him "from where I could be very well spared" because I came from my father's house who has several boys younger and older than myself, so I thought that my company could be very well dispensed with here. He then wanted to know where I was going, and being on my way to my uncle's who has more boys than my father, I thought I would not be very welcome there and answered, "where I am not wanted." Still indulging his inquisitiveness he wanted to know my belief, when I told him it was that of the old woman who sells beer in the lane, for I got a gallon of beer from her about a month ago. She believes I'll never pay for it, and I believe the same, so we are both of one belief.

"Well my lad," said the Mayor, who was rather pleased at his readiness, "I do not think you deserve to be detained any longer, so I will allow you to go," and taking a crown from his pocket he had it passed to the boy saying, "you may take that and pay the old woman who sells beer in the lane."

"Thank you sir," (and getting near the door) but I won't pay the old woman who sells beer in the lane."

"Why?"

"Because it would break her belief and mine too."

CONTENTS OF A WHISKEY BARREL.—Senator Busk of Texas was once at an Indian "palaver," when a man drove up with a barrel of whiskey.

An old Indian, after looking earnestly some time at it, asked Mr. Busk if he knew what was in the barrel.

He said he presumed it was whiskey.

"No," said the Indian, "there are about a thousand songs and fifty fights in that barrel."

An Irishman remarked to his companion on observing a lady pass, "Pat, did you ever see a woman as thin as that?"

"Thin replied the other, "I've seen a woman as thin as two of her put together, I have."

A French Author has lately said that the women in France are such slaves to fashion, that if the Empress should decree that they should go without clothes this summer, they would blush—to find themselves dressed.

A miserly bailiff coming into possession of a baton-cty, and desiring an appropriate coat of arms, adopted one representing a tin plate over which was placed a fork signifying "Fork over tin."

A recruit going through the exercise of sword-dance asked how he should parry. "Never mind that," said the old hussar, who was fencing-master to the regiment "you only cut; let the enemy parry."

"I think I have seen you before, sir," said one gentleman to another. "Are you not Owen Smith?"—"Oh yes," said the other, "I'm owin' Smith and owin' Jones and owin' everybody."

MANAGEMENT OF HORSES.

In the management of a horse, one should never go in a passion; but what is undertaken, or required of a horse, he should be made to do; yet nothing unreasonable, or what he does not know how, and is unable to do, should be required of him. When you have taught a horse that you are his friend and master, you have laid the foundation of complete success in his management.

If you are afraid of a horse, do not go near him, and have nothing to do with him personally, till you make him fear you. A horse knows when his driver is afraid of him, and he will have his own way accordingly; but no horse should be expected to do what has never been taught him to do. You might as well require a child to solve a question in algebra, who had never learned to count beyond ten, as to demand of a horse to do what no one has ever taught him how to do.

For instance, a young horse that has never been "set" in a gully, with a load before, is whipped by his owner, or driver because he does not draw the load out. The animal is willing to do what he can, but he does not know how to draw out the load. He tries, and finds that it does not move, not knowing that a steadier and stronger pull would do it, and when the lash comes down upon him, and he hears the yells (that is the right word too often) of the driver, he is frightened, and jumps and rears, through fear, rather than ugliness, or baulkiness. No better way could possibly be devised to make a horse baulky, than to beat him under such circumstances. You might as well attempt to make a horse move a three story building, and draw it off, as to get out of a slough, with a heavy load, when the animal has never been taught, by degrees, to draw a load out of such places.

It is true, that it is bad policy to un-litch a horse from a load, under such circumstances; but it is far worse to beat him an hour, and then have to do it. Our way of teaching colts is as follows:—We put on light loads after they are well broke to a harness, and go into bad places where it requires hard pulling by degrees, and the animal learns how to draw the load out. He reasons as a man does thus: "I've been here before and got out, and I can do it again," and out he goes. We add to the load one or two hundred pounds, and go through the same process, then wait a day or two and try him again, taking care that we require nothing to be done that he has not done before, except with a lighter load. This is teaching a horse to have confidence in himself, which is the basis of all good draught horses.

A truckman of Boston got into a deep snowbank, last winter, with a load of two tons. He was "set." Did he bawl, or yell at, and beat his horses? Not at all; "Charley," said he, addressing one of his horses, "we are in a bad fix here, and I want you to do your best." And when he gave the word go, they did go, exerting themselves the utmost, and the truck went on to its destination. These horses were rational animals, and knew what it was to be encouraged; and so it would be in all cases. A gentleman who witnessed the truckman's operation, stopped him and handed him $5. Take that, said he, it is the first time I have seen a truckman treat his horses, under such circumstances, in a proper manner.—Rural American.

How to TREAT BAULKY HORSES.—If you have baulky horses, it is your own fault, and not the horses, for if they do not pull true, there is some cause for it, and if you will remove the cause, the effect will cease. When your horse baulks he is excited, and does not know what you want him to do. When he gets a little excited, stop him five or ten minutes; let him become calm; go to the baulky horse, pat him, and speak gently to him; and as soon as he is over his excitement, he will, in nine cases out of ten, pull at the word. Whipping and slashing and swearing only make the matter worse. After you have gentled him awhile, and his excitement has cooled down, take him by the bit; turn him each way, a few minutes, as far as you can; pull out the tongue; gentle him a little; unrein him; then step before the baulky horse, and let the other start first; and then you can take them anywhere you like. A baulky horse is always high spirited and starts quick; half the pull is out before the other starts; by standing before him the other starts first. By close application to this rule, you can make any baulky horse pull. If a horse has been badly spoiled, you should hitch him to an empty wagon, and pull it around a while on level ground then put on a little load, caressing as before, and in a short time you can have a good work horse.—American Farmer.

Mrs. S. A. Allen's, PREPARATIONS FOR THE HAIR.

Mrs. S. A. Allen's

World's Hair Restorer is suited to both young and old. It strengthens the Hair, prevents its falling or turning grey, and imparts to it a beautiful glossy appearance. It never fails to restore GREY HAIR TO ITS ORIGINAL YOUTHFUL COLOR. It is not a DYE, but acts directly upon the roots of the Hair, giving them the natural nourishment required, producing the same vitality and luxuriant quantity as in youth. It will restore it on bald places, requires no previous preparation of the hair, and is easily applied by one's self. One bottle will usually last for a year, as after the hair is once restored, occasional applications once in three months will insure against grey hairs to the most advanced age.

The Restorer Reproduces and the Hair Dressing Cultivates and Beautifies. Principal Sales Office, 198 Greenwich Street, New York City. August 1, 1867.

Mrs. S. A. Allen's

World's Hair Dressing, or ZYLOBALSAMUM, is essential to use with the Restorer, but the Hair Dressing alone often restores, and never fails to invigorate, beautify and refresh the Hair, rendering it soft, silky and glossy, and disposing it to remain in any desired position. FOR LADIES AND CHILDREN, whose hair requires frequent dressing, it has no equal. No lady's toilet is complete without it. The rich glossy appearance imparted is truly wonderful. It cleanses the Hair, removes all dandruff, and imparts to it a most delightful fragrance. It will prevent the Hair from falling out, and is the most economical and valuable Hair Dressing known. Millions of bottles sold every year.
