You note the difference in children. Some have nearly every ailment, even with the best of care. Others far more exposed pass through unharmed. Weak children will have continuous colds in winter, poor digestion in summer. They are without power to resist disease, they have no reserve strength. Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil, with hypophosphites, is cod-liver oil partly digested and adapted to the weaker digestions of children.

GODFREY'S WHITE QUEEN.

BY EDWARD RAYMOND.

I am very much flattered by your thinking so; I thought it quite the loveliest face I had ever seen in my life." Audine's imagination was keenly excited by the visit to the sculptor's studio. She could think and talk of nothing else. Mrs. Neville, enchanted by her sympathetic admiration of her son and his works, unscrupled not to prolong their stay in London for two or three days. A certain restfulness came over Godfrey, now that the missing link of inspiration had been supplied, and he consented sometimes to leave his work and accompany them to a gallery or a museum. These were days of extreme enjoyment to Mrs. Neville; her son used to devote himself entirely to her, leaving Audine to the attentions of Castaletti, who was never long absent from his fellow-artist's elbow For a time Audine was amused by the flowery conversations of her companion, full of flattery and ingeniously composed compliments; then she grew somewhat fatigued by it, and wished that Mrs. Neville would not so continually talk to her son. But she was good-natured, and seeing that these conversations were intensely precious to her friend, she never complained.

One day they were walking together in the Park, and Casteletti suddenly, to Audine's astonishment, changed his usual style of talk, and began to speak of his own country. He spoke with such fervor, such passion of Italy, that Audine was quite carried away by his enthusiasm. He drew the most vivid picture of his own village in the wild Campagna. He possessed the rare gift of the Italian improvisatore; and his words were so ringing, so powerful, that Godfrey and his mother paused to listen.

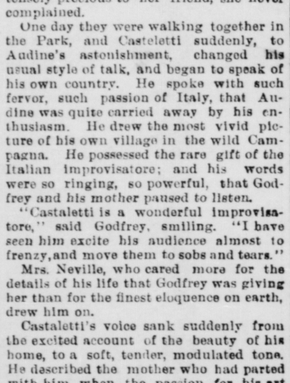
"Castaletti is a wonderful improvisatore," said Godfrey, smiling. "I have seen him excite his audience almost to frenzy, and move them to sobs and tears."

Mrs. Neville, who cared more for the details of his life that Godfrey was giving her than for the finest eloquence on earth, drew him on.

Castaletti's voice sank suddenly from the excited account of the beauty of his home, to a soft, tender, modulated tone. He described the mother who had parted with him, when the passion for his art had carried him away, and led him to Rome. He described how, one by one, the shackles of ignorance, homelessness, and prejudice had fallen from him, and left him awhile lonely and isolated. Then the art which he embraced with such fervour encircled him with her loving embrace—he became an artist. Fame, with the golden trumpet, allured him from afar. He lived for the future; he endured the present; he spurned the past.

Audine's large eyes were gazing on him. What a strange transfomation it seemed! He saw them and the parted rosy lips, and he suddenly began to speak again, gently, softly, tenderly. He asked her if she would not long for the golden sun and the purple skies of Italy—for the wide world, one glorious carpet of flowers—for the clustering roses, the luxuriance of color and warmth and odor; and Audine was half-frightened, and could scarcely answer. It was a great relief to her when Mrs. Neville stopped and waited for her and did not leave her again till they returned home.

Mrs. Neville was too much absorbed in her son to perceive that Castaletti had conceived one of those sudden and violent passions for Audine Fitzjames that belong to a southern nature. Love at first sight, so much laughed at and disbelieved, was no trifle to him. Audine was startled by the vehemence of his manner, and by his rapid change of color when she spoke to him.



HE WAS FALLING—DOWN, DOWN.

Her eyes were opened on the day on which they returned to Lealstone. They had reached the station from whence they were to start, when a cab dashed up to the door, and Castaletti leaped out; his face was as white as a sheet, and working with emotion.

Mrs. Neville was half inclined to be frightened, and caught her son's arm. Godfrey had accompanied them to the station.

"What does he want, Godfrey?" she said.

"Only to say good-by," he answered, and she was satisfied. Castaletti entreated Audine to speak to him one moment in the waiting-room. With gentle dignified manner the girl refused, but allowed him to walk beside her up to the end of the platform.

In one moment, speaking low but very violently, he poured out the passionate declaration of his love. He told her that he knew that his feeling was not returned; that Englishwomen were not like his country-women—they must be won by gold. He declared that he would make his fortune, and lay it at her feet or die. The extravagance of his words and the working of his features so alarmed Audine, that she involuntarily put out her hands in the direction of Godfrey. Castaletti saw the gesture, and his face became almost like that of a demon.

"I see!" he said between his teeth. "I know well the reason that the White Queen is only a portrait of yourself. Your image is never absent from his brain; but he does not love you! no! no!"

He seized her hand, kissed it passionately, and was gone. Audine ran back to her friend; and not till they were safe in the carriage and some miles on their way, did she feel that she had courage enough to describe what had taken place.

"I hope that we have seen the last of him," said Mrs. Neville, severely. "It was a great impertinence, after so short an acquaintance."

Audine gave a little shiver. "His satyr-like face haunts me," she said.

The Czar of Russia lately came into the possession of a picture in the following way: Under the patronage of the Empress a charity bazaar had been organized at St. Petersburg. One morning the school children were allowed to visit the bazaar, and each of them was presented with a ticket for the raffling. A little daughter of one of the poorest families of the town won a splendid picture by a French artist. The Czar, who had already expressed great admiration for this picture, before leaving the building inquired who had won it. When he found it was in the possession of a poor child, he offered to buy it from her for £800. This money is to be invested as a dowry for the little girl.

Weak Women

In the spring suffer more severely that at any other season. Scott's Sarsaparilla would soon make them healthy, strong, active and vigorous. A weak, debilitated, played out, run down, suffering and complaining woman can build herself up so that her friends will hardly know her. Her sprightly carriage, cheery laugh and snappy conversation will make her welcomed, admired and appreciated wherever she goes.

MADE STRONG

by Scott's Sarsaparilla, the blotches and pimples cleared from her complexion, that tired feeling gone, no longer nervous, irritable and cross grained, she becomes a real new woman.

"I was so run down that I could not attend to my work," writes Miss M. J. Gould, Lloydtown, Ont. Mr. W. S. Bond, our storekeeper, recommended Scott's Sarsaparilla. I tried it. One bottle cured me and I am again strong and vigorous, wholly made so

THE LEAN AND SLIPPERED.—An old gentleman who lives near Parrsboro, and who will be 94 years of age if he lives till May 20th, walked two miles to a candy pull last Tuesday night. When the dance was in progress, grandfather forgot his age and asked for the floor to be cleared. He danced the Highland fling without an error. He then waltzed with several of the prettiest girls at the party and went home with one of them at daylight in the morning.—Ex.

A Forty-Year Old Grievance Removed.

Tore His Flesh in Agony.

"I was troubled with blind itching piles for 20 years; was unable to work and tore my flesh in agony. United States and Canadian doctors failed to relieve. Chase's Ointment was a God-send. I am a better man than in 20 years, and am able to work every day." Philip Wallace, blacksmith, Iroquois, Ont. Chase's Ointment cures piles, eczema, and irritant diseases. All druggists, 60c. per box.

Bad Blood Between Them.

The ever slaving farmer's wife, her delicate sister in the city, suffer more than they care to tell. The dark rings round the eyes, headaches, dizziness, palpitation or rheumatic twinges, betoken a run-down system. The blood is poor, and is a bar to enjoyment of life. Scott's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, strengthens and vitalizes the system, and speedily restores the bloom of health to the cheeks. It cures when all others fail.

NO HOME WITHOUT IT.

Miller's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil should be emblazoned in letters of gold upon the altar of every household. It saves life when every other means for the cure of consumption or lung troubles fail. For many years Cod Liver Oil was held in disfavor on account of its unpleasant taste, and the inferior quality of the preparations. Miller's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil revived its use because it is pleasant to take and gives immediate results in creating new blood, and thus giving sufferers the strength to overcome the fire enemy. It is the great life saver of the age. Miller's Emulsion is the great nerve strengthener and blood maker, and cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Scrofula and all Lung affections. In big bottles, 50c. and $1, at all drug stores.

The Swiss Government made a profit of about $1,000,000 last year on the monopoly in spirits.

A NEW CLUB.

Name Suggested for a New Social Organization in London.

LONDON (Special) April 27—It has been facetiously suggested that a new social club in progress of organization in this city should be entitled "The Dodd's Kidney Pill Club" as the present members are all enthusiastic advocates of that remedy and in common with many other citizens declare that in all cases of kidney trouble no other agent has been found so completely effective. Most Londoners have at their fingers ends the particulars of the many marvellous cures through the use of this specific. In every drugstore in the city the medicine is kept in large quantities and warmly recommended.

The Rarest Virtue.

Charity is not only the chiefest of Christian virtues, it is the rarest. This is suggested by Paul, when he says that a man who has eloquence and knowledge, who has generosity and faith, who is self-sacrificing and devoted, may come short of the highest standard of Christian charity. We see the truth of this on every side. There are men who are open-handed and large-hearted, who have the missionary spirit, and who die for their religious convictions, who yet seem actually incapable of judging with charity those who differ with them in opinion or in practice, or who are distasteful to them personally. They are rigid in their views of right, and critical of any departure from the path of rectitude; but they never speak with loving estimate of those who are wrong in their beliefs or wrong in their doings. They even seem to think that the severity of their judgments is an evidence of their uprightness. And of all forms of evil, uncharitableness in others has least tolerance in the minds of many of us. Even those who serve Christ, and who would die for Christ, cannot always be Christlike in their charitable estimate of their fellows.

A Questionable Fee.

A criminal lawyer in Chicago, who is noted for his facility in acquitting any prisoner in whose defence he may be employed, without much regard to the character of the evidence, is in great demand, particularly among those who feel that their cases may be precarious. He received a letter the other day from a prisoner in the county jail. It recited that the writer had been arrested for horse-stealing, and was indicted at the last session of the Grand Jury. It declared that the writer had little hope of acquittal unless good talent could be enlisted in his behalf, and he begged the lawyer addressed to take the case. Then came the pathetic part of the letter. "I have no money," the writer said, "to pay for legal services, and very little property. But the horse is a good family driving horse; it can do a mile in 2.36, and is gentle enough for any lady to use. I'll give you the horse if you'll take the case." The lawyer is still undecided.—Troy Times.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.
