Ducks.

Ducks are not favorites on farms, for the reason that so many believe they must have running water or a pond in order to do well. In many places where the ducks are kept they are inferior mongrels, not likely to be profitable, and they are very destructive. Ducks do not scratch up the garden, but if a vessel of water is left where they may get at it, they will soon scatter it and make a mess of it. If it is muddy weather and they can have access to the walks and porches about the residence, they will soon make you wish there wasn't a duck on top of the earth.

If ducks are to be kept on the farm at all, it is worth while to have the best. They cost but little more in the first place and the profits will be much more satisfactory. Pekins seem to be the leading variety and they are very good for feathers which is something that is seldom ever taken into consideration where ducks are kept incidentally. Ducks will produce their proper quota of fertile eggs on solid food alone although their natural food is vegetables. They will not and do not object to a little animal food in the shape of fish, frogs, pollywogs, etc., found at the brook, or in puddles and swales, where flags and other similar vegetation grows. It is not generally known by farmers that the duck unlike the hen, has no crop—the passage duct leading from the throat direct to the gizzard is very small compared to the size of the bird. This is the reason it does not thrive on hard food alone. There is no place for the hard food to go through the softening stage as is the case with birds having a crop.

Ducks have a very foolish way of dropping their eggs in the water, and following a brook or river into neighboring farms; unless they have suitable quarters and regular attention, they will give a great deal of trouble in this way. Notwithstanding the general dislike to ducks by farmers they have a great many qualities to recommend them on all farms. It matures early and duckling is a very good addition to any repast.

They are good feeders, hence their growth is rapid, and if the time it takes to get them ready for market is considered, they consume no more than other fowls. If ducks are properly managed they get their full growth in four months and may be marketed in August.—Wisconsin Farmer.

A Sailor's Test for Fresh Eggs.

When a British ship drops her anchor in a foreign port she is immediately surrounded by a noisy host of natives in little canoes laden with all the delicacies the climate affords. Fresh bread, butter, eggs and fruit—all very tempting fare to poor Jack, after months of salt meat and hard biscuit. However, the native is not so simple in manners as in costume, and it requires all Jack's wits to enable him to guard against the tricks of these dealers. In the very hot climates eggs will not keep long fresh, and as the test applied to them by the steward of a great sailing vessel affords rather an interesting experiment I will describe it.

He selected three eggs from the basket, placed them end to end on the table then grasping the outside eggs, one in each hand, he pressed their ends against the ends of the centre egg, and raised it between them off the table. While thus suspended, the centre egg of its own accord revolved, as it were on its own axis. It was laid aside as fresh, and another tested till the basket was emptied. He said that unless the egg was fresh it would not make the curious movement which I have tried to describe. It is an interesting experiment, and can easily be tried, but when performed by our steward it was both comic and picturesque. The solemn Oriental, with his ringed ears and toes, the snowy, or yellow brown eggs, and our burly broad shouldered steward, with his jolly English face, made up a picture not to be forgotten.—A. O. WILL I SUICIDE?

While There's Life and Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure There's Hope. I had suffered so many years from catarrh that I don't know that I will ever get it out of my remembrance. One day, when I took one of the endless prescriptions given me by the medical man to a druggist, I asked him bluntly, "Will this cure me, or will it not? Or will it be like the rest?" I was nearly desperate, I can tell you. The druggist said—"No, nothing can cure catarrh. I have it myself until I often think of suicide. I take opium usually to sleep it off." I took the prescription away unfiled and went home, thinking of what the druggist had said about suicide, and I was utterly disheartened. I have that prescription yet. One day my deliverance came. A lady told me she had suffered just as I had, and was nearly insane, and that a remedy known as Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure had actually cured her. I had read a lot about Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure, but I felt toward it as I did toward other medicines; had no faith. I tried it as a last resort. I used two boxes of Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure, and found it a complete cure. MRS. M. V. ROSE, Holloway, Ont. Price 25 cents, blower included.
