Drivers Wonder If Their Wives Shovelling Snow

By JACK BRAYLEY

Canadian Press Staff Writer
ABU SUWEIR Egypt (CP)—The irritating isolation and frustrating restrictive life of a United Nations Emergency Force Canadian has been demonstrated to his reporter when he got the only glamor bonus of a slick operation tour—a peak at half a dozen Arab girls as they prepared for a swim.

And the big six-wheeler I was riding as super-cargo didn't even slow down, so precisely smooth and on schedule, has the mechanical Canadian routine of UNEF support become.

"I'll stop," explained Pte. Bob Burtleigh of Toronto and British Columbia, with a rueful grin, "the convoy will run into us—we gotta press on."

QUICK GLANCE
He gave the girls an appreciative glance and then smiled into his rear vision mirror to watch the reaction of the following driver.

We were on a "grocery run" with a mixture of exotic food and spices for Indians and Indonesians. I was along to report a day in the life of a representative Canadian soldier with section three of "B" platoon of the service corps.

The troops accepted me with good humor and got a kick out of showing me everything from making a bed so it would pass inspection and slinging pack supplies to introducing me to their families by way of photographs.

And finally they taught me a lesson in UNEF relations by hitching a trailer so the beef wouldn't have to ride with the mutton and thus offend religious susceptibilities.

THREE-MAN CREW
I joined the section at dusk and in candlelight—a generator provides the electricity for certain periods only—and was introduced to my crew: Cpl. R. R. (Dick) Dickson, 30, of Lorneville and Northlake, N.B. Pte. Dad Burtleigh, 35, and Pte. Walle Drebit, 26, of Winnipeg and Petawawa.

I took the fourth bed in their neatly kept desert tent which sits on a tile foundation to keep down sand dust and which is white on the outside to reflect sun and heat and dark red inside to discourage persistent flies.

Reville is at 6 a.m. but Canadian support troops haven't anything as regimental as a bugler and our tent, for instance, depended on the quiet ring of a leather-encased travelling clock.

GOOD BREAKFAST
We walked about 300 yards to the mess hall for breakfast—choice of pancakes and syrup or bacon and eggs, with coffee, bread and butter and fruit juice.

By 7 a.m. we were in the cab of the "duce-and-a-half" with our instructions from L. Cpl. Allan Johnson of Moose Jaw, Sask., the dispatcher. He consulted a chart and told us when we needed the next oil change and inspection where to collect our load and where we were going.

The transport sergeant—Alex Jones of London and Warton, Ont., gave us a close scrutiny and we were on our way to the supply depot.

HAPPY RECIPIENTS
Our convoy headed for an Indian paratroop battalion stationed about 100 miles away. They were located in an old battered railway station and were glad to see the assortment we brought ranging from cabbage, cauliflower and fruit to butter, eggs and meat.

On the drive home through the hot sun and peeled down to our shirts, we talked again of home. The drivers wondered if their wives were shovelling snow. "I wouldn't mind even that just to be home," said the corporal.

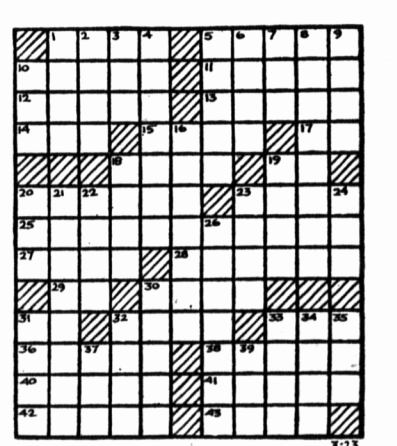

We arrived back at this base in time for a supper of beef stew, potatoes and cheese with fruit cocktail and a cinnamon roll. Then to the crowded recreation hall for movies.

LATER STATUS

Manchester, England, a thriving settlement in Roman times, was not officially created a city until 1853.
