More Than The Bees Are Busy At This Season

"What would you do if a bee stung you?" Mack asked this morning, stopping by a moment to visit. "Just die!" we giggled. "Well look at this," he said pushing up a sleeve to disclose a colorful dot on a round young arm. "Got it a few minutes ago. . . Aw, it's nothing. It stung for a sec. But I put some damp clay on it and it's not sore now. You see I never noticed the bee. I guess it was busy and I was in the way!"

"They are busy now — gathering up the honey-sweets and the pollen from the blossoms. We're told they work 14 hours a day. And to make a pound of honey a bee will make 37000 trips averaging four and a half miles. They can go fast too — up to 20 miles an hour! They work all their lives. They never retire!"

"Busy!" I'll say! he commented. "Everyone's busy now" we offered with a smile. There was a mustering of young hands today to help Rob plant his seedling of potatoes. It proved at first to be an exacting operation for the younger fry with more than one anxious, "Now how does that please you Granddaddy?" in regard to the dropped sets to draw present to his rewarding smile. By noon the chore was laid and by dusk little more of Rob's cropping remained to be done.

At Alderlea the potato and rootland came in for a share of cultivation and the first of the week should see the close of the seed-time marked here.

"And what work then?" we asked James at the chore-time.

"To shape and use." Until Monday — — Diary — Goodnight. . .

"Life is not an idle chore. But iron dug from central bloom. And heated hot with burning fears. And dipt in baths of hissing tears. And battered with the shocks of doom."

"To shape and use." Until Monday — — Diary — Goodnight. . .

An Uncluttered Charm Marks New Model Homes

By ELEANOR ROSS
If you took a quick tour of a dozen model homes and model homes are breaking out all over in the suburbs—you'd come away with one lasting impression. That's the serene, uncluttered look of them.

Somehow it seems to indicate that, as our lives become more complicated, the world more tense, we yearn increasingly for simplified, restful places to which to return at days' end.

NO LESS LUXURY
Not that this trend implies less luxury, less beauty! On the contrary, many a model home is fabulous in its planning and its decorating.

What it does demonstrate is simply this: People today want a feeling of spaciousness, even in a small house. They want ease and convenience. They want a minimum of fussy doodads. They want the serenity of floors and walls and furnishings that can be kept fresh and inviting with simple care.

AT MODERATE COST
Of course you can spend plenty of money to achieve all this, but you can also use the same ingredients, so to speak, to create a charming home on a moderate budget. The over-stuffed, overdone look of the Victorian era—with a million and one pieces of little bric-a-brac, countless dust-catchers and curlicues, whatnots and little screens, beaded fringe—doesn't provide the restful atmosphere we seek today.

Clean and serene and easy to care for—that's what we're all aiming at. And certainly a house that is as easy to keep clean as

MR. AND MRS. E. B. FRANCIS AND ATTENDANTS

Pretty Wedding Held At Central Christian Church

Central Christian Church, Charlottetown was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday evening June 12th at 7.45 p.m. when Velma Mildred, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rayner, Tignish and Erroll Boyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Francis, Craupud were united in holy bonds of matrimony. Rev. M. D. Dunbar performed the double ring ceremony.

The church was beautifully decorated with apple blossoms and tulips in tall pedestals and baskets while the guest pews were marked with satin ribbons and sprigs of apple blossoms.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father to the strains of the Wedding March played by Allan Dunbar.

The bride looked very charming in a floor-length gown of nylon net over tulle with lace bodice and long sleeves coming to a point over the wrists, the neck of the gown was trimmed with seeded pearls. Her finger tip veil was held in place with a crown of seeded pearls and sequins. Her only ornament was pearl earrings, gift of the groom. She carried a cascade bouquet of red snapdragons and white mums.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Douglas Horne, sister of the bride, wore ballerina length dresses of yellow chrysalis over net and taffeta her headress was of yellow coronet with sequin trim and her accessories were white. She carried a nosegay of red snapdragons.

Misses Edith Johnston and Mary MacEwen, girl friends of the bride, wore ballerina length dresses of blue crystal over net and taffeta with headress of blue coronet with sequin trim and white gloves and shoes. They carried a nosegay of chrysanthemums.

The winsome little flower girl was Linda Rayner, sister of the bride. She wore a dress of pink nylon with matching headress and carried a nosegay of mixed flowers.

The groomsmen were Mr. Freddie Berrigan of Toronto, Ont., friend of the groom. The ring bear-

MARY HAWORTH

Step-Son Shows Resentment

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Recently I married the kindest man on earth, who was divorced from his first wife, a mental case. She had tried every trick to ruin him and his son. My husband was given custody of Dick, who is our greatest concern at present.

I have children by my first marriage and, before I married Bob, my teen-age child resented the idea of a step-father. But I was firm, kept things in the open and went ahead.

After the wedding, my older child shook Bob's hand, cried a little, then embraced him and said he was really glad about the whole thing and wished us much happiness. We were so pleased, as this was entirely his idea. Ever since he has been a jewel—really happy and at peace within himself.

SUFFERS FOR BOTH
However, Bob's son was just the opposite. Before our marriage, he seemed so elated at the prospect. But soon after we got home from our brief honeymoon he showed resentment, hatred and jealousy of the situation. He is very immature for his age, very wretched, and everything upsets him.

All this disturbs Bob, of course; and at first he jumped on me, accusing me of being jealous of Dick. But finally the truth came out, when Dick impetuously aired his jealousy by word of mouth in the presence of all.

I feel torn. I actually suffer for both father and son. I hate to see little fellow so hateful, stubborn and spiteful. I've tried to talk to him gently; tried to draw him out of his shell; but all my efforts are stonily rejected. I just don't know how to cope, nor does my poor husband. I have a new outburst or tale-bearing accusation by the boy only makes him feel worse.

DUAL PERSONALITY
The child is now writing nostalgic letters to his divorced mother, which is a slap in the face to his dad, who has "mothered" the boy since he was age five—catering to his every whim. The boy didn't like to play with other children—preferred just to hang around daddy—but he is doing better lately.

When he wants to be, he is such a bright charming little fellow, so helpful, sweet, affectionate and cooperative. But these phases of personality are now in eclipse; he seems to delight in being miserable, and making others so. How can we draw him out of his deception, misery and unhappiness?

W.S.
BOY IS ILL.
DEAR W.S.: It is nowadays generally recognized — although temporarily overlooked by you — that children may be emotionally ill. And this is probably the explanation of little Dick's uneven behavior — potentially helpful, sweet, affectionate and cooperative — and of a wretchedly anxious, suspicious jealous and hysterical.

You designate Dick's mother as a mental case, by which you mean that she seems predisposed to emotional imbalance, probably. It doesn't follow, necessarily, that Dick has "inherited" such a tendency. But the fact that he was an infant and child in the sphere of her influence, would naturally affect his "conditioned" reactions to all his experience.

Also, the father's habit of catering to Dick's every whim, back in the time that he was trying to "mother" the lad, would further deprive the lad of the "feel" of emotional stability—such as competent parents, in a good home atmosphere, traditionally supply, as a basic element in child training.

As for what to do now—you and Bob, as co-parents, must have specialist guidance in getting your bearings with Dick, and helping him to either overcome his illness, or learn to adapt to his trials, in a more constructive way.

Your present good intentions simply aren't sufficient to meet his sick needs. You wouldn't expect to get him through a siege of TB, or typhoid fever, say, without first-class specialist help—and no more can you handle this kind of illness "intuitively," and count on recovery.

In the city through which you write, there is a fine Family Service Agency, and my advice is to apply there for psychiatric leadership, in learning how to do right by Dick.

MacRae-Wall Wedding Solemnized At St. Mary's

St. Mary's Anglican Church, Summerside, was the scene of a pretty spring wedding on May 18, at 4.30 p.m. when Marjorie Jane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard K. Wall, New Annan, P.E.I., was united in marriage with Harold Alexander, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. MacRae, King Street, Summerside, with Ven. Archdeacon Harrison, D.D., the officiating clergyman. Edward Penwarden was the organist and the church choir sang "Lead Us, Heavenly Father, before the ceremony and "O Perfect Love" during the signing of the register. The church was decorated with potted mums, the guest pews marked with mayflowers, white daisies and ribbon.

Given in marriage by her godfather, Mr. Athol Cotton of Kensington, the bride looked charming in a floor-length gown of nylon net over satin with portrait neckline, trimmed with pearl and iridescent sequins; long sleeves coming to a point over the wrists; full skirt with lace inserts. Her headress was a nylon net tilla with iridescent sequin trim, rolled nylon tulle finger-tip veil. Her bouquet was a cascade of red sweetheart roses and carnations.

The bridesmaid, Miss Georgie MacInnis, wore a gown of turquoise floor-length nylon net over satin, with matching gloves and headress. She carried a nosegay of white carnations. The flower girl, Miss Sarah Blanchard, a cousin of the bride, was dressed in yellow nylon, a small half hat with ribbon tied under chin. Her flowers were a nosegay of yellow sweetheart roses.

The bride's mother was attired in a navy crepe dress with white and navy polka dot trim; white and navy accessories, and a corsage of pink carnations. The groom's mother wore a light blue dress with fleck, white accessories, and a corsage of pink carnations.

Mr. Earl MacKay was the best man. Bradford MacRae, brother of the groom, and Thane Mann ushered the guests.

The reception, with 40 guests in attendance, was held at Birch Hill Lodge. The bride's table was decorated with a tiered wedding cake with miniature bride and groom. For her travelling costume the bride chose a red, all-wool fleecy coat with black and white accessories, navy princess style dress, short sleeves, white round collar. The happy couple toured the Maritime times on their honeymoon. The groom, serving with the R.C.A.F., has been posted to Bagotville, Que., where the bride will join him.

MORNING SMILE

Little Tommy had a sore too, so his mother thought this a good opportunity to make him eat his cereal.

"Tommy," she said, "if you eat your oatmeal it will cure your toe."

Shortly afterward Tommy came in to his mother with a very distressed air.

"I ate my cereal," he said, "but my toe isn't any better. I guess the oat stuff went down the wrong leg."

LET'S EAT

Protect Your Family From Kitchen Mishaps

By IDA BAILEY ALLEN
Statistics just released show that more accidents occur in the home than on an outside job. And most accidents seem to happen in the kitchen.

It is only good sense to check your kitchen and cooking methods for safety.

To Restrict Falls: Avoid over-polishing floors; rugs that skid; worn holes in floor coverings. Do not leave floor mops, brooms or pails of water in the middle of the room.

To Prevent Burns and Scalds: Use oven mitts when placing food in or removing them from a hot oven. Use tongs when handling broiling or frying foods. Do not reach over foods on hot top-of-range heating units to reach back burners. Instead, turn them off.

Never place frying pans, pots or saucepans with handles jutting over the edge of the range. Children sometimes grab and tip them over and are badly scalded. If you use a low broiler, you might hit a jutting handle with your head as you stoop or squat to broil the food and suffer a bad burn.

Never put sharp knives in dish water until ready to wash. Always store them separately from other utensils. Keep knives sharp—they use a knife to cut or slice foods when the hands are wet or moist, for skids and cuts may result.

Never store detergents, cleaning powders, polishes and bleaches in a cupboard with foods, but by themselves. Otherwise, they may be added to the food by mistake.

If you wear glasses when working out of the kitchen wear them when cooking. Keep safe!
