Top Producers Awarded Prizes

Substantial increases in production of practically all processing crops are planned for the coming season by the P.E.I. Frosted Foods Limited plant at Sherwood, it has been learned from George Wright, manager. Prizes were presented to top producers at a recent series of meetings when growers were informed on production goals for 1966.

Jack Cutcliffe of the research station at Charlottetown brought the growers up to date on his experimental work on fertility and variety trials with processing crops.

Andrew B. MacRae, Minister of Agriculture at one meeting explained to the growers the basis on which assistance for the 1965 crop failures would be paid. A complete study of the growing instructions and production guides for the various crops was led by Mr. Wright, who presided at the meetings.

The meeting concluded with a delicious meal served by the office staff and wives of company officials under the direction of Mrs. Winnifred Hewitt, production supervisor for the company.

The company has also been conducting a series of bi-weekly meetings for its cole crop growers in the form of a vegetable growers' short course throughout the winter months. This course, which has been recognized in a national trade magazine will conclude early in May.

"Dispute such progress," he said, "I remain convinced that when our human image and personality changes mankind from what we know of it today, portraits will continue to be painted."

He concluded that great portrait painters and sculptors will be with us through eternity, superior to all mechanical devices, superior to ourselves and in every way irreplaceable.

Liberal Leader Issues Statement

Liberal Leader Alex Campbell yesterday said he was very much concerned about the present labour situation on Prince Edward Island.

In a statement issued Thursday afternoon, Mr. Campbell said, "The Liberal Party shares a particular sympathy with the wage earner who is today justly protesting the starvation wages upon which he is expected to live and maintain a family."

"Perhaps these are people who believe that the minimum wage of $1.10 per hour is sufficient to maintain a family but the unfortunate fact is that $44 a week for a 40 hour week reduces the working family man to an undesirable level of hardship and poverty."

The government's claim that Prince Edward Island has entered a new era of prosperity and enjoys a "booming economy" is not supported by the actual position of our labor force," he said.

"There are many people, men and women, who today are earning much less than the minimum wage—for example some employees at the processing plants are receiving as little as 65 cents per hour, or 82¢ per week.

"We cannot afford to be complacent about the protest marches—labor should receive higher wages and in return management should expect greater efficiency and productivity, but unless management and labor get together immediately with good will on both sides, and proper arbitration, both sides and the community will suffer as a result of the work stoppage and delay."

"Time is therefore of the essence of this dispute and the government through the department of labor should immediately set up the machinery to invite both sides to a bargaining table in hope that a friendly and happy solution can be reached to the problems of management, labor and manpower training which are involved in this situation."

"If the government fails to set up the machinery to provide for such meetings and the protests continue then the Liberal Party, if elected, will offer its full efforts in bringing both sides together for the purpose of settling the matter," he concluded.

Confederation Director Discusses Portrait Skills

Portrait painting, if it is to be of excellent quality, is a combination of integrity, psychological identity and mastery of technique, said Moncrieff Williamson, director of the Confederation Centre Gallery, at a public lecture on portraiture in painting last night entitled People And Their Setting.

In listing the skills a portrait painter should have at his command, Mr. Williamson mentioned that a knowledge of anatomy is the first essential, because exterior forms can be created only through knowledge of structure. The painter must be sufficiently skilled at the painting of textures. His ability to suggest the qualities of silk, wool, satin and other material such as linen, will give the spectator what is called a tactile response, he said.

Mr. Williamson said he liked to think of a good portrait as being an insatiable reader and seeker after knowledge. Ideally, and given time, he said, a portrait painter should read widely in those subjects which are of concern to the sitter.

of wealthy emerald-encrusted windows and felt that the portraitist had let you down; that he had not attended to the maximum 'to thine own self be true', and that what he shows us is a watered down, woolly version of reality. To disguise a sitter's true character is a deceit which a truly great portraitist is incapable of practicing.

He suggested that sometimes the self portrait is the result of lack of models, or the artist's need for change of subject. "Seldom do we find in self-portraits any deep concern with self-analysis."

"Portraits of artists by other artists are often the most surprising documents of all. A painter sometimes paints another painter in a particular manner because he knows that he is communicating only with each other."

"I feel that the painter or sculptor has it over the photographer every time because in the final split second of operation, the camera is still a mechanical device," he said.

CREATIVE PORTRAIT

"One of the world's truly creative portrait photographers is Karsh of Ottawa. Karsh has recorded in a television interview how he captured for us the image of Churchillian fury by snatching a cigar from Churchill's mouth."

Mr. Williamson suggested that in this world of scientific brilliance, is it not possible for us to imagine the day when the camera will be replaced by an electronic device worked by remote control through a computer; a computer in this instance which will shuffle digits and reveal to the camera the sitter's character and direct the correct moment of exposure.

DRIVING CHARGE BRINGS REMAND

MacLaughlin, city, was fined $11 and costs or five days; Reginald Cecil MacKenzie, city, was fined $10 and costs or five days; Bernard Allison MacDonald, city, was fined $11 and costs or five days; and Alfred Wellington MacNeill, city, was fined $11 and costs or five days.

PREMIER EXPRESSES REGRET

Premier Walter R. Shaw said yesterday morning that he very deeply regretted that the visit of their Excellencies Governor General and Madame Vanier had to be postponed as announced Wednesday evening by Lt. Governor, the Honorable W.J. MacDonald.

"The Vice-Regal visit," the premier said, "was indeed shaping up to be one of our more memorable occasions for the Province in that the proposed visit was to be the final one before His Excellency retires. It is to be sincerely hoped that His Excellency will find it convenient to arrange his itinerary to visit the province at a later date."

"In the meantime I trust that St. Dunstan's University will be able to adjust their program and perhaps arrange for a special convocation as was held in 1964 for the six Eastern Premiers."

FIRE DAMAGES TRACTOR-TRUCK

A tractor-truck from MacKay Construction Limited of Charlottetown was considerably damaged yesterday when it caught fire while en route from Charlottetown to Brooklyn.

Manager Sterling MacKay last night reported that the vehicle was hauling a bulldozer on a float when the driver stopped on the road between Orwell Cove and Kinross to check the engine oil. Reports indicated that when the driver, a Mr. Peters from Charlottetown, turned the ignition off the gas tank caught fire from the engine backfire and flames burnt the tires off as well as damaged the cab.

The Vernon River fire brigade responded to a call but Mr. MacKay said there wasn't much that could be done in this type of an emergency.
