Put Both Eye Glasses And Drugs In Medical Expenses

OTTAWA (CP)—Costs of eye glasses and drugs bought under prescription are being added to the list of medical expenses which may be deducted from taxable income when Canadians fill out income tax returns next spring.

Also added as deductible medical expenses, in Finance Minister Fleming's budget Tuesday night, are costs of artificial eyes, laboratory or other diagnostic services, and ambulance trips to and from hospital.

The change will apply only to such expenditures made starting today.

However there has been no change in the present stipulation that allows deduction only of medical expenses exceeding three per cent of net income—the income before other deductions.

RETAIN OPTION
Canadians still will have the option of claiming a flat $100 deduction for medical costs and charitable givings combined.

In the past, deductible medical costs have been restricted mainly to doctors' and dentists' bills and hospital charges. A handful of special medicines also have been in the deductible class.

Mr. Fleming, when in opposition, had argued for removal of the three-per-cent floor on allowable medical deductions or, alternatively, a widening of the expenses that could be claimed.
