

ELLEN'S DIARY

A Green Wind Blew

It was "a green wind" that wandered sunnily about the farm today, one bearing to us that surety of which a poet has written.

Green winds continue, and soon there will be a full maturity of blossoms and leaves—the circle fully turned, our eyes shall see.

The beauty Mother Nature's eyes conceive.

We saw it bless the delicate green lace of the unfolding birch—pines in the lawn-trees, having come up after touching the rose-petals of the old maples which provide a pretty background now for the gray-gabled mill in the valley.

Exquisite scent this wind carried, in a fine distillation of season—ever so familiar that one loses her eyes, she would still know that meadows were green, earth fresh-stirred, that moss and needed nooks and corners of woodlands were warming, and that some where about a farmer was burning heaps of brush.

Some chore of cleaning-up to get that subtle aroma of spruce in to the mixture.

"This, I'd say, is the first nice afternoon this spring," James remarked from across the yard. We were then on the back verandah, entering there to watch the flight of a red-winged blackbird among the trees in the orchard. The "lashing" he wears lend a certain charm and distinction to this bird which sets him above his unimbered kin.

"Not busy are you Ellen?" James asked, "not baking bread?"

"I put down an armful of boards in a piggery-door. There was a lameth in his voice, a blitheness of tone we find no trace of on occasions."

"I suggest to him that we should take what he terms some wild-goose chase" of out for pleasure, away from the farm. As a moth to the flame it drew us near. "I just thought you might lend me a hand at this," he added. "Oh I guess I can't finish this afternoon anyway. And after supper there's the chores."

"You see, I'm making a new partition here," he said leading the way indoors to a sty in nec of repair.

Do we have an idea that pigs, by and large, are noisy creatures, of untidy habits and homely What a false notion! How quiet it was there, and serene. Every momma-pig, as closed enjoyed an enviable siesta, family cuddled close by in content; some piglets slept, others dozed, an eye opened to regard us roughly in passing. Their straw beds were clean, and how attractive all were.

Then what an enjoyable time we spent with James at the carpentry, done for the most part in the sunny out of doors. We helped measure and saw the new boards, (James reminding us, "Put both hands to the saw, Ellen!") fetching the undertaking until it was finish, the afternoon gone. And then? Then we gathered up the chips to heat the kettle for our brewing of tea.

Today? It was the warm, beautiful day on which "a green wind" blew.

Until tomorrow — — — Diary— Goodnight....

MORNING SMILE

An old man drove up to a filling station in a dilapidated old car.

"Give me a dollar's worth of gas, Henry," he said.

"Why don't you fill her up, Dave?" the attendant said.

"Wa-a! Henry," he replied. "I'm afraid she might not run that far."

HOUSEHOLD HINT

A quart berry basket will hold one dozen eggs and takes up little room in the refrigerator. Keep eggs covered.

SIGN TAX AGREEMENT

OTTAWA (CP)—An agreement between Canada and West Germany for avoidance of double taxation was concluded Monday, the external affairs department announced. The agreement provides generally that each country retains the right to tax income leaving that country while undertaking a grant relief from taxation on income on which a tax has already been imposed in the other country.

PHYSIOTHERAPIST

Miss Edythe MacRae, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard MacRae, Verdon, graduated on May 30, from McGill University with a diploma in Physiotherapy. Edythe attended Prince of Wales College for three years before entering McGill University in 1954. During the summer months, she will intern at the Colonel Belcher Hospital, Calgary and on her return to Charlottetown will join the staff of the Orthopedic Centre.

MacLeod-MacKinnon

A pretty spring wedding was solemnized at S. Andrews Manse, Montague, when Rev. D.A. Campbell united in marriage Miss Mary Ethel MacKinnon of Church Road and Mr. Lorne MacLeod, Lorne Valley. The bride looked attractive in a powder blue suit with white and navy accessories. She was attended by Miss Norma MacLeod of Charlottetown, while Mr. Kenneth MacLeod acted in the capacity of groomsmen.

Following a honeymoon spent motoring through the Maritimes, the happy couple are residing in Lorne Valley where they have the best wishes of a host of friends.

Solved my IRREGULARITY problem

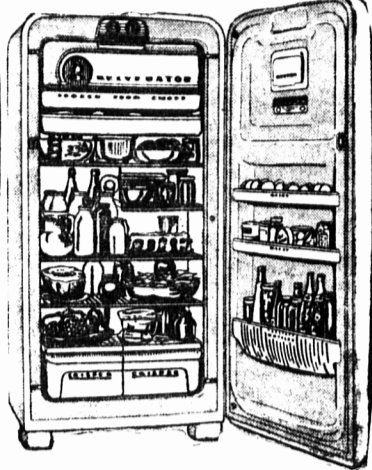

Writes M. Brunelle, Windsor, Ont., "Since 1941 I've eaten Kellogg's All-Bran every day. I'm grateful for the way it keeps me regular. By adding hot tea or coffee, milk and sugar it becomes a flavorful hot cereal."

Good-tasting Kellogg's All-Bran has helped millions. Why not you? All-Bran corrects the common cause of constipation: lack of bulk in the diet. Try a bowl a day. About half a cup supplies all the natural laxative bulk you need daily. Kellogg's—the original ready-to-eat whole bran. Nutritious and inexpensive. For gentle, natural regularity.
