SELECTIONS

A LEANING TOWER.

Syracuse Rejoices In One That Is Causing a Fierce Strife.

The leaning tower of Pisa has a prototype in America. It is more than 200 feet high and at the base is two-thirds that number of feet in circumference. At present it is 13 inches out of plumb and during a heavy storm sways back and forth like a willow wand, says a correspondent of the Philadelphia Times.

This remarkable structure is built on the grounds of E. C. Stearns & Co. according to a system invented by Sanford E. Loring, an architect of Syracuse, where the tower is located. By his system heavy timbers are braced continuously and connected by iron shoulder plates, which take the place of the skeleton steel construction. The brick on the outside is merely a veneer and not a supporting wall in any sense of the term. The tower is unprotected and has to take the force of every gale that blows.

It is just now the cause of a fierce strife in Syracuse because the people declare that it is an imminent source of danger and liable to fall at any moment. Architect Loring, however, says that if it was 13 feet out of plumb, instead of 13 inches, it would still be as safe as a church and that people might walk about, under and around it all day and be in no more danger than in the Mammoth cave. The Syracuse common council avers that the tower is a public menace, and the architect in reply holds that it is perfectly intact and safe and that it will stand any strain likely to come in the future.

The Stearns tower has only become of the leaning variety at a comparatively recent date. The circumstance that brought it into prominence in this role was a hurricane, or, as some call it, a tornado. In any event, it was a tremendous wind, the fiercest and the fastest which even the oldest inhabitant of Syracuse ever heard of. The wind came from the southeast, striking the tower upon the faces. In its velocity immense trees were torn up by the roots, the roofs of great buildings were twisted off and torn away as if they had been of half inch plank. Buildings in their entirety were lifted up and smashed into kindling wood, but though the big tower swayed from side to side as if understanding that it was made to bend and not break it did not fall.

On the top of this tall tower is a water tank, and this tank contained at the time of the storm its normal contents—10,000 gallons of water. When the storm was over and the sunlight shone again, hardly a gallon of water had been lost from the tank so far as appearances indicated. The tower, however, showed the effect of the terrific blow. Before the storm happened the structure had been as straight as a British grenadier, but now it was found it had been twisted upon its axis and bent over so that it leaned in as great a degree as the famous tower of Pisa.

There are one or two breaches in the walls, and some of the window sashes are in a woefully dilapidated condition, but otherwise it seems to be in very good shape indeed. The space between the third and fourth stories and the sixth and seventh seems to have suffered from the storm the most severely. The sole fact that saved the tower from demolition was the peculiarity of the structure, which is curiously arranged iron work. The brick wall that seems to form the structure is, as stated, simply veneer, and the holes that the storm rent through it indicate forcibly what would have been the fate of the structure had the brick entered into its composition more largely. As it is, it is the strangest specimen of what clever architectural work will stand, and before the common council and the Stearns people are through with the war it is making it all promises to become one of those legal fights that will go down into history as events in which every one is interested.

Wolves In France.

The commission of the French budget has allotted 10,000 francs to be employed toward the extermination of wolves during the coming year. In 1883 this service cost the government 104,450 francs; in 1895 it cost 17,700. Since 1882 the government has paid out in wolf bounties sums varying from 50 to 200 francs, a total of 595,920 francs. This sum represents the killing of about 5,000 wolves. Concerning this item in the budget for 1897, a French paper says: "Evidently there would no longer be any wolves in France if they were not recruited from Germany and Italy, for, with the exception of the wolves of the Spanish Pyrenees, the animals are harmless enough and will run at the flash of a lantern. England has freed herself from wolves, but France always has some, for they pass readily over the frontiers, and if ever Hungary and Russia should run short they would still come from Turkestan, where they abound."

Whittier's Estate.

Says the Boston Transcript: "Mrs. S. T. Pickard, niece of the poet Whittier, is in Amesbury caring for the poet's estate. The Whittier portraits and a portion of the furnishings have been removed to the Pickards' home, where they will be cared for. Before removing anything the location of portraits, pictures and furniture was carefully indexed for the benefit of any changes which may be made whereby the home may become permanently a Whittier memorial, so that they can be restored as in Mr. Whittier's days of occupancy. The library has not been disturbed, only replaced as the books were catalogued, and will remain in its every detail as the poet left it."

Will It Be Success or Failure?

Your Decision Means Life or Death.

Paine's Celery Compound Guarantees New Life and Long Years.

The Use of Medicines That Have No Record or Reputation is Foolish and Suicidal.

You must choose between success or failure—health and misery — suffering brother or sister. Your decision or verdict means either life or death.

Paine's Celery Compound guarantees freedom from disease; it gives to the sick one health, strength and long years of life. The use of medicines that have no reputation or record to commend them means prolonged agony and death. The wise and prudent make use of Paine's Celery Compound; the foolish experiment with anything that is suggested to them.

Paine's Celery Compound is the world's grand life-boat that has so successfully rescued tens of thousands from the storms and tempests of ravaging disease. Will you, while struggling in the billows of suffering, trust the life-saving and life-giving powers of Paine's Celery Compound? Be assured it is able to rescue those who are in the most desperate straits and will land them safely on the solid rock of health.

Paine's Celery Compound has done a mighty work for your friends and neighbors in past times; its work goes on every day successfully and triumphantly, spreading joy and gladness everywhere.

Edison as a boy began the chemical and electrical experiments which have made his name famous.

The Housemaid.

A comely, tidy maid, gowned in blue and white in the morning and black and white at night, if imbued with your cordial warmth and consideration for others, will learn to be a sort of expression of the spirit of the house. The way in which she widely opens the door, as if hoping the guest will enter, will be a vicarious welcome. A door barely opened, threatening to close, as if there was a suspicion that the overcoats were unsafe, is not an uncommon piece of bad manners, and a servant with discretion enough to show you the respect to allow you to enter if you desire, or if an old friend, or "a cousin from the country," to make you comfortable, to take your wraps, stir the fire and offer you a cup of tea, is a jewel only to be found where the atmosphere is full of cordial friendliness. Such a one at dinner absolutely appeals to you to partake by her deft handling of the dishes and gives by her bright watchfulness of your likes and dislikes a sense of personal care which is comically gratifying.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Teapot.

A terrible mistake of housekeepers is to leave the coffeepot and teapot on the back of the stove to steep all day. It is a fruitful source of dyspepsia and indigestion. Never set tea aside unless in a glass jar or pitcher for iced tea. Heated over, it is simply vile. Coffee, if you must economize that way, should be poured off into a bowl or pitcher and covered closely. Over the grounds pour a cupful of boiling water, shake and let simmer three minutes, then pour into the bowl and throw the grounds away and wash and dry the coffeepot. This will insure you sweet coffee. To make the coffee, grind fine the necessary amount, pour the liquid saved carefully into the pot, so as not to stir up the grounds. In a teacup mix a tablespoonful of coffee to each person, "and one for the pot," with half the white of an egg. When the liquid is boiling, dash the coffee in, stirring briskly for a moment. Fill the pot with boiling water—measured, mind you, one cup for each—and set to steep gently for five minutes.—Washington Star.

What to Do With a Tough Hen.

Sometimes a "green" housekeeper buys a tough hen unawares, and then she tears her hair because it is not fit to eat when baked. Dress fowl and hang it up over night to freeze. Put to boil in hot water as soon as the fire is made and keep it boiling for three hours. If in hard water, put a pinch of soda as large as a butter bean in the water. Do not salt. Two hours before dinner lift from the water; dress and stuff as though it had not been cooked at all; lard it with nice sweet bacon or fat pork, and bake in a medium oven, basting often. The hen will be tender as spring chicken. The water in which it was boiled will make delicious soup, with bits of chicken shredded in it, for the second day, and makes delicious stock for hashed chicken or toast.

The Foot Box.

The fashionable woman now cares for her feet as carefully as for her hands, and a foot box is as necessary to her as a manicure set. The box is a good sized one, and contains everything required for the well being of both shoes and feet. For the former there are various kinds of dressing fluids for taking stains out of satin, brushes for removing dust, spools of silk and waxed shoe thread, a cobbler's needle, thimble and scissors, quantities of laces of all colors and assorted buttons, while for the pedal extremities themselves there are provided instruments for amateur surgical treatment, soaps, salves and bandages, the last being intended principally for the correction of disfigurements caused by long use of shoes that do not fit.

Bags In Household Use.

Bags are a hobby with some women. They delight in all kinds for many different purposes. One of this class had a bag hung near her desk for receipted bills, which she looks over in December and puts away, the bag being large enough to hold a year's bills. She claims the stout linen bag is preferable to box or drawer in desk. Putting away summer stockings is an art in this same woman's case. "It is such a comfort," she says, "to find them ready for use in the spring," so instead of being thrown in a pile into some drawer or trunk, they are mended, rolled up in pairs and put away in chintz bags, each member of the family having one of these bags hung up in the dark corner of his chamber cupboard.

WORN BY WOMEN.

In spite of comment on its incongruity, fur, chiffon, lace, cloth and velvet are mixed up in the most heterogeneous fashion.

Among the elegant novelties are Eton jackets of fur. One of the most stylish of these is made of Persian lamb. It has sleeves and flaring collar.

Short jackets, with cutaway fronts, are popular and, because of the open space from collar to waist line, fashion is demanding an enormous quantity of lace in jabots, cascades and loopings

The variety in vests is something amazing. Every waist with an open front seems to have one of these additions in some unusual style. Thick puffs of lace, with straps either of velvet, silk, embroidery or even leather, are seen.

A stylish dress is of black satin. The skirt is cut plainly and has a narrow quilling of silk just under the edge. The waist has a perfectly plain front of solid embroidery. The sides and back are close fitting. There are fitted sleeves, with cape ruffle lined with a silk like that at the edge of the skirt.

A cloth costume has a tailor made skirt and a waist of velvet the color of the cloth. The wide folded belt and Eton jacket are of cloth, with fitted sleeves, over which fall long, looped puffs which cover the sleeves from the shoulders to elbows. The close velvet collar has an edging of white satin.

A charming dress for a girl is made of black velvet. The skirt is plain. The waist has bolero fronts over a silk vest. The collar is high and slightly rolled out from the throat. The sleeves have large puffs at the shoulders. A belt of embroidery crosses the front from the edges of the cutaway jacket.—New York Ledger.

HUMOR

A BIG BRASS BAND.

Comedian Crane Thought Its Members Would Never Cease Coming.

Comedian William H. Crane says that the greatest brass band that this country ever knew was an organization in Ottumwa, Ia., many years ago.

"I've heard Gilmore and Sousa and all the rest," said Mr. Crane recently, "but their bands couldn't be compared with that prairie aggregation for a moment.

"In my theatrical salad days—when I was much younger than I am now—I was trying to pilot a company of Thespian bright lights throughout the western provinces. Business was bad, and our treasury was low. At Ottumwa the theater orchestra had some sort of a grievance against the management and demanded pay in advance. The theater refused, and our organization was not financially in a position to discount the future for a single moment. So I started out to find some sort of music, if possible, to tide us over. I finally succeeded in getting the Ottumwa brass band to agree to play three selections in front of the theater before the performance in return for free admission to the show.

"The band showed up on time, carried out its part of the contract and went into the theater. I was on the door that night, and by and by I was struck by the fact that the Ottumwa brass band must be one of the most remarkable musical organizations in the country. Every minute or two somebody would come up to the door with a brass horn under his arm, wave it at me and sail on into the theater without a word. After I had passed in 50 or 60 musicians in this way I began to grow a trifle suspicious and stopped an old granger who was carrying in a big tuba.

"'Excuse me, sir,' I remarked, 'but do you play in the band?'

"'Nope,' he answered.

"'What are you doing with that horn, then?' I asked.

"'I'm goin to go in on it if I can,' he replied candidly.

"'Whose is it?' I inquired.

"'Blamed if I know,' he said. 'A feller outside there gave it to me and said I could get in with it.'

"I left the door and stepped inside the theater just in time to see one of the band boys drop another horn out of a window into the hands of somebody outside in the alley.

"As nearly as I can calculate, the Ottumwa brass band that night must have had more members than Gilmore or Sousa ever directed at one time."—Chicago Times-Herald.

A Maine Receipt.

A story comes from a town not 1,000 miles from Bar Harbor, Me., that equals the celebrated note story of Hans and Fritz. It runs as follows: Dan and Mose, neither of whom was noted for his erudition, were partners in an enterprise which is needless to specify. One morning Mr. Blank called to settle a small bill that was due them and after paying asked for a receipt. Mose retired to the privacy of his office and after a long wait returned with the following: "We've got our pay. Me and Dan."—Boston Herald.

Sour

Stomach, sometimes called waterbrash, and burning pain, distress, nausea, dyspepsia, are cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. This it accomplishes because with its wonderful power as a blood purifier, Hood's Sarsaparilla gently tones and strengthens the stomach and digestive organs, invigorates the liver, creates an appetite, gives refreshing sleep, and raises the health tone. In cases of dyspepsia and indigestion it seems to have "a magic touch."

"For over 12 years I suffered from sour with severe pains across my shoulders, and great distress. I had violent nausea which would leave me very weak and faint, difficult to get my breath. These spells came oftener and more severe. I did not receive any lasting benefit from physicians, but found such happy effects from a trial of Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I took several bottles and mean to always keep it in the house. I am now able to do all my own work, which for six years I have been unable to do. My husband and son have also been greatly benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla—for pains in the back, and after the grip. I gladly recommend this grand blood medicine." MRS. PETER BURRY, Leominster, Mass.
