

THE PREMIER IN MONTREAL.

Policy of the Government Set Forth.

The Tariff Question Discussed.

(From the Report of the Gazette.)

Upon his arrival in Montreal on Monday last, the Premier was presented with an address in French and English. Replied first in French, Sir John Thompson referred to the emotions which he naturally felt in finding himself in the presence of such a large gathering in this historical province of Quebec, the cradle of the Canadian nationality.

Continuing in English, Sir John said: "I am reminded of the criticisms, and I am afraid I would fall subject to it, which one of my friends in Parliament once made about one of the speakers of our House of Commons, who had for his mother tongue the language I speak, but who attempted to repeat the prayer of the Saviour in French. One of my colleagues asked one of the deputies from the province of Quebec—the gentleman to whom I refer—how our friend, the Speaker, got on with his French, and the answer was that perhaps the Almighty understood, but for his part he could not. (Laughter.) If I am to speak in your tongue, I must speak in the language which comes to the lips from the fullness of the heart, and for this great welcome, too, I am sure, for the convenience of the listeners, I thank you from the bottom of my heart. (Applause.)"

Ladies and gentlemen, I come before you to state the policy of the Liberal-Conservative Government of today without the sanction of a convention of the party. Let me tell you why. I do not need a convention, because we stand upon the old principles upon which the Liberal-Conservative party has been carried on in the past, and by which we think Canada has been made the great country she is today. You know that our opponents held a great convention in the city of Ottawa a little more than two months ago. Fifteen hundred men marched from the sea, as one of their speakers expressed it (laughter), marched from the sea upon Ottawa. They saw the buildings, they saw the offices, and they were unanimous in coming to one general resolution to put us out of office. (Laughter.) There were some other matters about which they agreed; there were many other matters, and very important matters on which they disagreed, and on which they, therefore, decided wisely to let alone; but there was no dissenting opinion as to the proposal that we should be put out and that they should be put in. One of them was shrewd enough to know that they had come so far and assembled in such numbers and the prospect was so good, they had better choose their seats in the House of Commons at once, and there was great applause, laughter and cheers. But a wiser man still came in with a suggestion, which chilled every heart in that assembly, and that was the proposal that they had better wait until they were elected. (Laughter.) They had great need of a convention because they were a party about to change their platform. They had done it very often before. We had seen them going to that country with even greater confidence than they expressed in Ottawa in convention, on other platforms altogether. They had declared for continental free trade. They then had a platform of commercial union, and only nine or ten months ago their leader declared that on unrestricted reciprocity they would live or die. Other things they might have changed, their minds about other things they might have been mistaken about, but certain and dead sure were they on the question of unrestricted reciprocity. (Laughter and cheers.) They fulfilled the old saying that there is nothing a man is so apt to be mistaken in as the thing which he is dead sure and before the year went round, and under wiser counsels, they framed a platform in which you do not see the name, unrestricted reciprocity. They have come to the conclusion to which their leader, as he said himself, has arrived, that that policy should be quietly dropped. But they needed a convention, and they have had one with such results as I have described.

STAND BY THE OLD PRINCIPLES.

We come before you tonight to declare that we stand by the principles on which the Conservative party has stood before the people for the last fifteen years. (Loud cheers.) You know that the policy was adopted at a time of great trial and anxiety in this country. It was adopted with hopes, with expectations, some of which I admit, have been unfulfilled; but, on the whole, it has done so well for Canada that even our opponents to-day began the deliberations of their convention by an eloquent description of how great Canada has become, and how great is the duty of any political party to conserve the greatness which Canada has achieved, and the greatness which Canada has yet to achieve. We admit that some of the hopes that we so earnestly respecting the results of that policy have not been entirely fulfilled. We admit that the circumstances of the country have greatly changed under the fostering care of the policy which we so established. We admit that changes in the character of the country have become necessary by those changed circumstances. Values have changed, the volume of commerce has greatly changed, the movement of population within our own country has made a difference, and for a hundred reasons

A COMPLETE AND CAREFUL REVISION OF THE TARIFF

has become necessary, and it has been adopted as part of the policy of the Government of which I have the honor to be the head. (Loud cheers.) Our opponents have this policy in common with us. But there is this distinction between us; they admit the greatness of the interests involved in any rearrangement of the tariff, so do we. They admit the necessity of changes in consequence of the altered circumstances of the country, so do we. But they propose to make that change, despite the magnitude of the interests involved, without any enquiry as to what those interests are, or as to what are to be the effects; while we have proposed to Parliament to make the necessary changes after most careful and minute enquiry into every interest to the country which can be reached by the search of ministers who are interested in those questions, which they have in charge. That practically is the difference between the two policies with respect to the tariff. We think, while we admit that our policy in the past has not done all we hoped for, that it has achieved very great results for Canada. (Loud cheers.) We think it has increased immensely the volume of Canadian trade both as regards our exports and imports. We think it has succeeded in a marvellous degree in developing the interests of Canada in every part of Canada and the interests of every class of the working community. We think it has been marvellously successful in establishing public works all over this country, which any enquiry in the world might be proud, and which have made Canada envied by other nations.

THE RACES AT SUMMERSIDE.

Further Particulars—Gracie Wilkes Breaks the Three-year-old Record.

In the three-year-old class the races at Summerside yesterday, four horses started, drawing positions as follows: Halifax, b. c. by Black Pilot, Gracie Wilkes, c. f. by Precceptor, Banker, ch. g. by Westshaw; Promoter, ch. c. by Precceptor. On the third score the word was given, with Banker, which acted very badly during the starting, off his feet. Gracie Wilkes took the pole at the turn and led the quarter mile, but was closely pressed by Promoter. The latter made a break at the second turn, but was quickly steadied away again by Steele, his driver, and the two horses came down to the half on very even terms. Banker ran pretty well all the way to the quarter, and eventually broke up Halifax, which also ran around the second turn; but Lee, his driver, caught him before the wire, and he and Banker went close together around the turn. The interest of the spectators was centered, however, in the leading horses, which were neck and neck during the back stretch and around the turn. Just after rounding the turn, Promoter, in trying to pass Gracie, went off his feet, but soon caught again, and down the homestretch he was a great contest. Gracie Wilkes, however, by a length at the wire, never having lifted her nose. Halifax and Banker were just inside the distance flag and made a gallant struggle for third place; but Halifax got there first and secured the position. Time, 2:35.

THE RACES AT SUMMERSIDE.

The second heat of the three-year-old was started on the seventh score, and was another fine race between Gracie Wilkes and Promoter. Halifax broke at the turn and was passed by Banker, but soon showed that he had too much speed for the chestnut colt. At the quarter Gracie made her first skip, but it did not amount to anything and Promoter did not get the pole, which Steele tried hard to secure. At the third turn Promoter broke and lost some advantage, but at the three-quarter post they were almost even terms, and a very pretty struggle took place. The filly was too speedy however, and again Promoter went off his feet. Gracie Wilkes coming in a winner by several lengths in the fast time of 2:33, thereby lowering the record of the Maritime Provinces for 3-year-olds three-quarters of a second. The filly finished a very good third, although he had done some running, and Banker should have been distanced but was given fourth place.

The third heat of the three-year-old class was captured by Halifax, with Promoter second, Gracie Wilkes third and Banker fourth. Promoter captured the next three positions in order, but was again overtaken by Halifax, who finished a very good third, although he had done some running, and Banker should have been distanced but was given fourth place.

THE RACES AT SUMMERSIDE.

The first heat of the four-year-old, which was the last race on the programme, was sandwiched in with the race for 3-year-olds. The positions were given as follows: John Stanley, b. g. by Dean Swift, 1944; b. f. by Black Pilot, 2304; Harry Almont, b. g. by Banker; Egmont, b. g. by All Right. On the word being given, John Stanley took the pole at the first turn and led easily, being evidently not driven out to her clip. She was closely followed by Egmont, which finished a close second, but had not speed enough for the black filly. Harry Almont was a considerable distance behind the leading horses and John Stanley was only just inside the flag. Time 2:44.

THE RACES AT SUMMERSIDE.

The other two heats, trotted were also captured by John Stanley, who thus won the race. Summaries. Stake No. 1, foals of 1889. Lout S, b. f. by Black Pilot, 2304; Geo. E. THE RACES AT SUMMERSIDE.

The management at Summerside are to be congratulated on the orderly manner in which the races were conducted, very different we learn, from what took place at Tignish the preceding day. Gentlemen who were present at Tignish assert that it was the most disorderly and disgraceful meeting ever held on the island. The drivers thought nothing of going up to the stands and openly abusing them in scurrilous language, and the judges seemed to have little or no idea of the duties imposed on them. The fact that judges would admit that one horse should have a heat and then give it to another one, because it was getting late, will have a detrimental effect upon racing in that vicinity. Disorderly and improper conduct at races is an injury to all associations, and if such conduct is allowed, the respectable tracks should take action to refuse admission to drivers who so far forget what is due to the public, whether the misbehavior is on an association track or not.

THE RACES AT SUMMERSIDE.

We have to thank the managers of the Summerside track, W. A. Brennan, Esq., and his staff, for many courtesies given. THE EXAMINER'S representative.

The Finest Sealskins for Years.

Rails for the Government Railways.

OTTAWA, Sept. 15.

Mr. Marvin, of Victoria, owner of several vessels engaged in sealing, was here today. Mr. Marvin says that the skins taken this year are the finest that have come under his observation for some years past. The Superintendent of Railways and Canada has awarded a contract for steel rails for the Intercolonial Railway to the amount of 2,500 tons, to Hutchins, of Montreal. A similar quantity for the same road is awarded to Charles Cassel, of Montreal. A contract for 1,000 tons for the P. E. Island Railway has been awarded to W. H. Saunt, of England.

A Heavy Suit.

Judge Weatherlie has entered an action in the Supreme Court at Halifax against the Dominion Coal Company. In his statement of claim the plaintiff demands the specific performance of an alleged contract to purchase from the plaintiff certain coal areas, and damages for neglect to perform said contract. He also claims that he has suffered damage by the wrongful issue to Mr. Whitney and his nominees of $12,500,000 of what purports to be fully paid-up stock, for which stock the company did not receive value. He also charges the defendants with fraud and misrepresentation, and asks for an accounting.

A Terrible Mortality.

Of 9000 pilgrims that left here and other parts in May last for Mecca, only half have returned, the others having fallen victims to cholera. The survivors tell terrible tales of suffering. On June 21st, 100,000 pilgrims were gathered on the sacred mount to hear a solemn address prior to proceeding for Mecca. Many were starving. The mount was strewn with the corpses of victims of the pestilence, among whom were lying hundreds of dying wretches.

Bombardment of Rio Janeiro.
