

The Daily Examiner

SEPTEMBER 19, 1884.

Editorial Notes.

The Eastern Chronicle is glad to observe a growing disposition among the young men of Nova Scotia, to devote themselves to farming.

Sir Hector Langevin has, we are told, returned to Ottawa, full of enthusiasm about the northwest of Canada. He made a thorough investigation into the grievances of settlers, and considers some changes necessary to give full development to the country. He found the people generally well satisfied with the government, and declares that they take no stock in Blake.

An English correspondent comments on the weakness of the armament of the English fleet as compared with that of the French squadron. The French, he says, can fire eight guns to the English one, and their crews number ten to two of the English. England, he concludes, whose interests in China are 80 per cent. of all foreign possessions there, is the only power not making preparations to defend its property in the event of war.

The Hamilton Spectator has made a thorough investigation into the industries and trades of that city and thus sums up the result of its researches:—

1. More working people are employed in this city than at any former time.
2. Wages average higher than at any former time.
3. Prices of ordinary household supplies are lower than at any former time.
4. Duties on imported goods are lower than they were under the so-called revenue tariff. The following is a comparison between 1878 and 1883:—

	Imports.	Duty.	Rate.
1878.	$1,522,557	$834,752.88	$18.45
1883.	5,225,631	875,782.43	16.75

A movement is on foot for the establishment of a telephone system for this city. Mr. Rob Angus, of the firm of DesBrisay & Angus, is interesting himself in the matter, as it will to a certain extent, serve the purpose of a fire alarm telegraph. Of course it will not be as good as a regular fire alarm system, but will be better than none. For instance, Mr. W., who has a telephone, discovers a fire in his section, which (say) is at the Railway Station. He calls central office who at once gives the word to the engineer and Police Station that there is a fire near Railway Station—and so in any part of the city. It is intended to have central office open day and night, so that an alarm can be given any time in a few seconds which it would take a person a good deal of time to carry. A doctor can be called; the police can be notified of the tramp's appearance; enquiries as regards mails will be furnished, or, in fact, hundreds of steps will be saved to any one having an instrument. A good many have already subscribed, and any one wishing to take an instrument can make arrangements with Mr. Angus. It is also intended, if the company get enough encouragement, to connect the city with Summerside, Souris, and other points of the Island.

The members of the British Association who took part in the excursion to the Rocky Mountains arrived safely at the summit on Thursday night. An address of welcome was presented to the visitors at Calgary, in his reply to which Sir Richard Temple said:

"You have mentioned the wonderful work of nature in yonder peaks, but we think more wonderful still is the enterprise, energy and civilization that has, in a marvellously short time, spread over this part of the country. We have seen prairie turned into paradise. Everywhere we have been we met with the sturdy work of British hands. We have been much struck with the farming and produce. We have seen land marked out in lots, the fields scratched, then ploughed. We have seen the rich harvest standing, seen it reaped by your matchless agricultural machinery. We have seen the fine cattle in your ranches, and admire the excellent breed of horses there, and now we see the grand mountain tops of the Rockies. We congratulate you on your rich country, on the development already accomplished, and especially on the produce of the land. Your town, have struck us as wonders, their grain elevators, their lively stables, and other fine houses. Our object in coming among you is not to spy the nakedness of the land, but to see its great richness of which we shall tell our friends when we return. Among us we have men representing almost every class of science, and we shall be glad, each from our own point of view, to tell the people in England of your great country, and not only tillers of the soil will be attracted to come out here, but skilled engineers, artisans, and mechanics. We beg to convey to you our warmest, cordial, and most brotherly sentiments."

Referring to the proposed banquet in honor of the fortieth anniversary of the entry of Sir John McDonald into public life The Week, of Toronto, says:

Sir John's public career, long when measured by an individual life, short when compared with the life of a nation, has outlasted one form of Government which, forty years ago, was thought to contain elements of permanency. On his first appearance in the Legislature of Upper Canada, the legislative union was in its infancy; he witnessed, in succession, the full vigor of its manhood, its decline, decrepitude and death. Dreams of a federal union of all the provinces had before been indulged in; but that they would ever be more than dreams no one seriously believed in the year 1884. Responsible Government was in its tentative stage; and there was much friction in the working of the new machinery. Only ten years elapsed before Sir John Macdonald could be said to have matured sufficiently to have become, if not the peer of anyone in the Legislature, a conspicuous second, in debating power and knowledge of public business. The time was to come when his supremacy would be so complete as to command general consent. But more than to his power as a debater, or his knowledge of public business, Sir John owes his success to his skill in the management of men. In the natural course of things, the days of his decline cannot be far off, if signs of their coming have not already shown themselves. But in that art of the politician's arts, the management of men, he still retains pre-eminence. During his official career, he has often been able to repair the waste of party strength by attracting aid from the ranks of former opponents; and to this extraordinary resource his unusually long command of a parliamentary majority is in a large measure due. To sudden surprises in legislation he has been opposed; but he has not attempted a vain resistance to a well-matured conviction shared by a large majority of the population."

The British Drink Bill.

MR. WILLIAM HOYLE contemplates that the nation spent for intoxicating liquors:

In 1860	$434,488,415
In 1870	640,719,315
In 1876	736,443,800

Or, in only three years, $1,811,651,530
The items for 1880 are as follows:

Beer	$379,408,365
British spirits	142,274,430
Foreign do.	59,865,070
Wine	71,435,519
British wines, &c., estimated	7,500,000

Or, in one single year, $611,496,375
In 1880 the figures of the British National Debt, stood:

Funded debt (sterling)	£710,476,359
Unfunded do.	27,344,900
	£737,821,259

Or, say $3,639,106,295.
Now, if we multiply the British drink bill of 1880 by six, to find the amount drank in six years, we shall find that the figures exceed the whole national debt of Great Britain. Who will not enlist then with those who would destroy this hydra-headed monster of the 19th century? The fabled monster of the peloponnesus grew a new head, whenever it lost one,—so does the liquor traffic; but as there was a Hercules to extinguish the fabled monster of Lake Leona, so may one arise to save the world from this real monster "drink," that devours ten thousand of our brothers every year, and incontinently cries for more.

RETSGAB.

The English Artillery Team.

BANQUET IN MONTREAL.

ON Monday last, the officers of the English Artillery Team fed at the Windsor Hotel, and the non-commissioned officers and men at the Richelieu. In response to the toast "Our Guests," Lieut. Colonel Ray, Commander of the team, said:—"General Middleton, Mr. Mayor and brother officers: I make no apology for addressing you as brother officers, because I feel that, although two or three thousand miles separate us, we are so. We serve the same Queen (hear, hear); we love the same country, and we are branches of the same army, (Applause.) The whole of Her Majesty's army are volunteers; some may be called regulars, and are so, but nevertheless, they are volunteers. If men are wanted in the time of need, who are called for?—why, the volunteers (Applause.) Gentlemen, as volunteers we came out to you in Canada to compete in friendly contest for the prizes which have been offered by your association and by Her Majesty the Queen. I say upon another occasion, if we have been successful, that I hoped—but now I know—that we shall not forfeit your friendship (hear, hear), and nothing can impress this more upon us than the way in which you have received us to-night. (Applause.) I will not detain you, gentlemen, with a long speech, for two excellent reasons—one that I am not able to make one, and another because I am sure that you would much rather that I should not (Cries of "Go on, go on!") but I must say this before I sit down that I cannot find words to express how completely we are overwhelmed by the reception that we have met with on all hands. We know that we should be well received, because the detachments that have come to Sherbrooke, have, I trust, been well received (hear, hear), but we had no idea of the friendly, I may say the affectionate greeting that awaited us. From the moment that we set foot upon your hospitable shores until this moment, when we are standing before you returning thanks for the toast which has been so ably proposed and so enthusiastically received, there has been nothing but friendliness in your greetings, and before we go back we shall consider ourselves Canadians. (Loud applause.) I am perfectly certain that our visit will, at any rate, have one good result, and that is that the vast ocean which separates us from our homes—for I believe that every Canadian looks upon England as his home—will be bridged over to a certain extent by the first visit of volunteer artillerymen of England to your shores. (Applause.) It is my firm conviction that when the time arrives again for a detachment of artillery to come over to this country, the difficulty will be not to select who shall form it, but to decide who, if necessary, shall be excluded from coming, as I am certain that large numbers will send in their names to form that detachment. (Applause.) When we go back and tell them how we have been received, and what a jolly good time we have had, and the friends we have met. I am perfectly certain that the number of candidates to form the detachment will be so numerous as to give some difficulty to the Association in selecting the team. (Applause.) Gentlemen, I will not detain you any further, but I will close with this remark, that, although we take back to England the cup which Her Majesty has presented, we trust, I may say that we know we shall leave behind an increased feeling of love towards that Queen who has sent it, and of friendship towards the English team, which has been so successful. (Loud applause.)"

THE ARTILLERY TEAM

The Militia and Firemen's Demonstration

AND THE CITIZENS' DINNER.

A Pleasant and Successful Affair.

The militiamen and the firemen of the city made their demonstration, in honor of the returned artillerymen, last evening. The weather was fine, the only drawback being that the night was rather dark, and the torches rather too few to enable the citizens to see the procession to advantage. The procession formed at the Drill Shed shortly after 8 o'clock, in the following order:—

- Band 82nd Battalion,
- No. 1 Battery City Artillery,
- No. 2 Battery City Artillery,
- Charlottetown Engineer Corps.
- No. 3 Co., 82nd Battalion,
- The Quebec Team, in four branches,
- City Cornet Band,
- Firemen,
- Citizens.

The firemen marched through the principal streets to the Rankin House. The streets were full of people; some of the more enthusiastic used fireworks for good purpose; and all invited to give the men who did their duty well at Quebec a hearty welcome home.

The dinner at the Rankin House was substantial and exceedingly pleasant; and the cold water in which the toasts were drunk was of the very best quality that could be obtained. The guests of the evening were—

- Major Irving,
- Lieutenant Longworth,
- Sergeant McKinnon,
- Heartz,
- Corporal Matheson,
- Down,
- Music,
- Moore,
- Connolly,
- Gunner Rufus McDonald,
- Ronald McDonald,
- Aitken,
- Scantlebury,
- Bell,
- Dover,
- Chaisson,
- Finlayson,
- Jenkins,
- Long,
- Boswell,
- Hasper.

There were also present ex-Governor Haviland (in the Chair) Charles Palmer, Esq., (Vice Chairman) His Worship the Mayor, Hon. Senator Carvell, Hon. W. W. Sullivan, Hon. Neil McLeod, Hon. D. Laird, L. H. Davies, M. P., Dr. Jenkins, M. P., P. Blake, M. P., D. C. Martin, M. P., P. A. O. Morson, R. R. Fitzgerald, James Fagan, M. W. Murphy, Arch. McNeill, John F. Robertson, Charles A. Hyndman, H. W. Mutch, Esqrs., Lt. Col. Beer, Lt. Col. Freeland M. J. Pollard, Capt. S. F. Moore, Lt. McDougall, Lt. Horne, Capt. Stewart, Sgt. Allan, Capt. Hickey, Silsby Engine; Engineer Rowe, do; Capt. Beer, Tremont Engine; Capt. White, Hook and Ladder Company; and about sixty militia men and firemen.

After the loyal toasts had been honored—the toast to His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor having been enthusiastically received—the chairman proposed the toast of the evening, and expressed the pleasure and gratification it afforded him to assist in this demonstration in honor of Major Irving and the men by whom he was accompanied at the artillery competition in Quebec. That they, coming from a small and isolated Province, and laboring under many disadvantages, as compared with the militia-men of the Upper Provinces and of Great Britain, had succeeded in obtaining a first place among the competitors was to him a matter of surprise and great satisfaction. Mr. Haviland remembered with pride the successes of our volunteers in the olden time—referred particularly to the remarkable triumph of Major Pollard at Sussex Vale, and expressed his pleasure at having the fact demonstrated that the men of little Prince Edward Island are still able to maintain their prestige in the friendly contests of this peaceful time, and to take a front rank among the militiamen of the Dominion and the Empire.

Major Irving in responding to the toast said he felt that the demonstration was perhaps a greater honor than the Quebec team deserved. However this might be, it was very pleasing to see such a tangible evidence of the close comradeship and sympathy that exists between the citizens of Charlottetown and the Militiamen. The expression of appreciation given by the firemen was especially gratifying. There is much in common between the two forces. Those who make good firemen will, as a rule, make good militiamen and brave soldiers. Major Irving narrated briefly the principal facts connected with the competition; and said that considering the want of practice in shooting with big guns, and their total unacquaintance with the grounds and the breechloaders used, he thought the shooting of the P. E. Island team remarkably good. The conduct of the team, during the whole time they were away from home, was, he said, soldier-like and highly commendable.

"The Army, Navy, and Militia," proposed by the Chairman, was responded to by Lt. Col. Freeland and Lt. Col. Beer. Both gentlemen expressed the pleasure felt at the interest shown by the citizens in the triumph of the Quebec Team, and trusted that greater interest would be awakened in the militia, they said, depends to a large extent upon a favorable public opinion. Lt. Col. Beer said he hoped the Dominion Government would, in the future, be more liberal to the militia-men of the Island than they have been in the past.

"The Dominion Parliament" was proposed by Charles Palmer in a lengthy speech and responded to by L. H. Davies, M. P., and Dr. Jenkins, M. P.

"The Local Legislature," proposed by the chairman, and responded to by Hon. W. W. Sullivan.

"The Mayor and City Council," proposed by Charles Palmer, Esq., and responded to by Thomas Morris, Esq.

"The Press," proposed by A. McNeill,

Esq., and responded to by Hon. David Laird and Mr. W. L. Cotton.

"Major Pollard and the old volunteers," proposed by A. McNeill and responded to by the Mayor.

"The Ottawa Rifle team," proposed by Hon. David Laird, drew fourth a neat response from Sergt. Matthew Allan, the P. E. Island member of the Wimbledon Team.

Several other volunteers toasts were honored, and the party broke up about half past nine.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Sir,—I would like to ask through you whether last night's demonstration was in honor of the Fire Brigade, or in honor of our worthy volunteers? Why did the Fire Brigade keep behind and monopolize all the light for themselves and Worth's band? Are not our volunteers and Galbraith's band, (who has served our town for so many years), as worthy of prominence as the before mentioned parties? At a short distance, the volunteers could not be distinguished from a rabble; and further, Galbraith's military band had no chance at all owing to their being no light in front. Some of the Fire Brigade should have stationed themselves at regular intervals on either side of the volunteers to give them a chance to show themselves; for it was they the people wished to see. I remain, Yours truly,

JUSTICE.

Western Notes.
(From the Pioneer.)

Mr. Samuel Newson, a respected resident of Cape Traverse, died last week at an advanced age, much and deservedly regretted. "Mark the perfect and upright man, for behold his end is peace."

Last week, Rev. W. Thomas, minister of the Episcopal Church, arrived from England after a very stormy passage. Mr. Thomas is accompanied by his two daughters, and the party will likely remain on the Island for some time. They are delighted with the climate here, and say that, so far as they have experienced it, it is very similar to that of old England.

We are always pleased to chronicle the success of Islanders who by energy and perseverance push themselves to the front. In this connection we may refer to Captain Cyrus Orr, formerly of French River, New London, who last week returned to his home on the Pacific Coast after paying his Island friends a visit. Capt. Orr left home 12 years ago and after prospecting in California, went to British Columbia and is now master of a fine steamer on Puget Sound. He is in receipt of a handsome salary and judging from his appearance, has easy times. It may not be out of place to remark that the purser on board his steamer is a son of Rev. Henry Ward Beecher.
