ELEN'S DIARY

Peace And Security Reign In Old Family Homestead

"Now the day is over." And the week too, will presently join it in rest. "Let's be off to bed, Ellen," James proposes, unfastening his shoes. "It will soon be Sunday morning!"

He will go shortly. But just for a little while we shall linger here to look over the mementoes we have picked up in our pilgrimage along the week's ways. Intangible items these are, but nonetheless treasured. We think of the still mornings we came to, when before entering upon the affairs of our living, one could for a long moment possess one's soul in the peace and quiet obtaining.

"Great things come quietly," someone has said. Without fanfare... into a silence... sorrow, love, loss, birth, death... the moving happens: the summer tides that wash the warm sands, the winds that touch tenderly the springing shoots of the new grain... the swallows, over the blossoming of the harvest-lands, catching the old crimson tincture in the maple's quiet... the glory of the sunset flames... the purple shadows fall.

"Ellen, how would you like to go home?" James inquired this afternoon, when we were setting away the Sunday cake we had looted.

"Home!" we echoed... Two homes a farmhouse has: that where her childhood was spent, and the other to which Destiny brought her. And both are very dear.

"Yes, the work is done up for today. It's been in my mind to go," he smiled. So through the westerling sun, we came to the old farm of our people. And as always, found there a peace and security which kept us through those former happy days... We walked with James who "must see the stock" in an old field, followed the little brook that rippled by the orchard, saw "the lower brook" again, there where by a rustic bridge the cows from the neat fenced pastures always came — and still come — at will to drink; looked out on the nearby village, and the homes on the farms about, that had contributed a nice share to our recreation, found the school up on the rise, a saw home and kin and friends.

But, "Ellen," James calls from the bedroom, "have you no shame" writing there on into the Sabbath!"

So we must set the seal on this tale of the day, let another September week pass by, put by the mementoes we have gathered, store them away in the fastness of our hearts, what loveliness we can harvest! One declares that to come by these, one must only:

"Open your hands to God's goodness. Hold to your palms to the sun. That the light of His love through your fingers. May spread warmth when the daylight is done.

There is joy in the worship of living. There is life in the breath of song. To receive, you must open your fingers. There's no room in a fist overstrung...

Open your hands, find the treasures. That under your fingers are hid. Open your hands to God's goodness...

MR. AND MRS. ALAN BRADY

Couple Reside In Alberta Following Summer Nuptials

Trinity United Church, Charlottetown, was the scene of an August wedding when Bertha Gail Lavers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Lavers exchanged vows with Alan Albert Brady, son of Mrs. James A. Brady and the late Mr. Brady in a double ring ceremony performed by Rev. Gerald Wyer. The church was decorated with baskets of mixed flowers. The pews marked with lilies of the valley tied with white satin bows.

Rayston Muford was in charge of the wedding music and accompanied the soloist, Maids Rogerson who sang "The Lord's Prayer" before the ceremony, and "O Perfect Love" during the signing of the registers.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length bell shaped gown of white peau de soie with chapel train, fitted bodice with lace applique and long lily-pointed sleeves.

Her veil of tiered illusion was held by an organza flower head-dress, and she carried a cascade bouquet of pink and white roses with stephanotis.

The bride was attended by her sister, Leta Lavers as maid of honor with Donna Cameron and Judy Hipponer, cousin of the bride, as bridesmaids. They wore similar street length dresses of pink peau de soie with bell shaped skirts and matching lace jackets.

Their headpieces were pleated organza flower effects with tiny veils and they carried nosegays of pink and white carnations with baby's breath.

Roy Scantlebury was best man and read the congratulatory telegrams. The ushers were Stephen Connolly and Ronald Smith.

Brooke Brady was in charge of the guest book. The mother of the bride wore a blue lace over silk organza sheath, white cloche hat, white accessories and a corsage of white roses.

The bridegroom's mother chose a Cyprus gold silk full-skirted with matching tulle of draped tulle. Her corsage was Tallman roses.

A reception following the ceremony was held at Montgomery Hall where grace was offered by Mr. Wyer.

The toast to the bride was a proposal by Reginald Webb and responded to by the groom. Merill Smith acted as toastmaster. For a honeymoon trip to Banff and Jasper, the bride travelled in a pink suit, matching hat and white accessories. Her corsage was white roses. The young couple will reside in Edmonton, Alta., where the groom, a graduate of St. Dunstan's University, has accepted a position with the Hudson's Bay Company. The bride is on the staff of Edmonton General Hospital.

Out of town guests included Major and Mrs. J.M. Brady, Brooke, Andrea and Brenda Brady of Halifax; Mrs. Charles Lunnin and Mrs. Lionel Anderson of Saint John; Ruth Wright, Halifax; Mr. and Mrs. Judson Baker, Heather and Joan Riley of Trenton and Mrs. Holy of Vancouver.

Hospitals May Solve Shortage TORONTO (CP)—A new approach to solving the problem of the nurse shortage is under way in Toronto.

An experimental nursery has been set up in Riverdale Hospital here as an inducement to nurses with children to return to work. The nursery is open Tuesday, five days a week, and is staffed by six youngsters ranging from 3 1/2 months to 4 1/2 years.

While they waited away the hours in the 11-room nursery with building blocks, they were working in another section of the $6,500,000 building.

The hospital, which opened in June, 1963, has been plagued with a staff shortage. Fewer than half of the 900 beds are in use for this reason.

Noreen Coleman, director of the nursery, says the idea could spread to hospitals across the country if the Riverdale experiment succeeds.

The hospital charges $2.50 a day for each child with reduced rates for more than one child.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Arsenault, Kingston, who has been a patient in the P.E.I. Hospital for several weeks following surgery has left recently for further treatment in the Victoria General Hospital, Halifax.

Paul Winterholder left on return to his home in Connecticut, having spent three weeks visiting with relatives and friends in East Baltic, Red Point and Souris.

Miss Margaret McPherson, Miss Cheryl Birt, Souris spent several weeks on a visit to U.S.A. Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Webber left on return to their residence in Mount Vernon, Maine having spent two weeks at their summer residence in Red Point.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Roache and little daughter Paula and Mrs. Roache's mother Mrs. Mabel Williams left on return to their residence in Newton, Mass., having spent several days with Mrs. Williams' mother, Mrs. Wilfred MacLean, Kingboro.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Jones and three children, Ottawa are visiting with the latter's parents Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Stewart, Red Point.
