Event-Filled Schedule In Busy Holiday Week

"Christmas is almost here and I'm not half ready," can be heard in many homes throughout the land.

"In that case, I suggest, Madame, that the ladies relax for 15 minutes, take a pad and their ball point pen and make a list of everything they have to do," observed the Chef.

From Half To Wearables
"It would be a better-seller list, Chef," I said, "with hair-dos, shopping for gifts, foods and cleaning Christmas tree marketing special costumes for the children to wear at church festivities, and a hundred other items all mixed together. However, your idea is a good one. Let each homemaker write down what is yet to be done. Then the unnecessary items can be crossed out, and the list re-organized, so several related things can be accomplished at one time."

"Tres bien, Madame. That will take away that stop-and-go feeling that is so disturbing."
"Monday, I suggest wrapping and labelling all gifts, and then marketing for foods to last through Thursday," continued.
"Cook a few planned-diners ahead to refrigerate or freeze."
"Tuesday, make ready to use the special table linen, silverware and glasses, needed for Christmas dinner. Do any special cleaning. Christmas Day is coming closer every minute but don't try to do everything at once. Keep pleasant, and you will find the family will willingly cooperate."

"Wednesday and Thursday, finish 'fixing up' the house. Shop for food for the long weekend."
"Friday, prepare the foods for the Christmas Dinner as far as possible. Decorate the house trim the tree and enjoy a pleasant Christmas Eve."

QUICK-FIX DINNER FOR TOMORROW
Waldorf Saladettes
Toasted Party Rye
Corned Beef and Cabbage
With Potatoes,
Carrots and Green Beans
3-Way-Pep-Up Sauce
(see Chef)
Blueberry Gingerbread Squares
With Whipped Cream Cheese
Coffee, Tea, or Milk
Note: The convenience foods we are suggesting may include canned corned beef, canned white potatoes, frozen carrots, frozen green beans, gingerbread mix, and canned blueberries.
Measurements level; recipes for 6 to 8

CORNED BEEF AND CABBAGE WITH OTHER VEGETABLES
1 (10 1/2 oz.) pkg. frozen carrots.
1 (10 1/2 oz.) pkg. frozen green beans
1 (16 to 17 oz.) can white potatoes
2 tsp. instant minced onion
2 (12 oz.) cans corned beef, refrigerated
1 1/2 lb. green cabbage, preferably Savoy
1 tsp. salt
For garnish:
12 parsley sprigs and
6 halved cherry tomatoes
On bottom of deep heavy 3-qt. kettle, put frozen carrots and frozen green beans. Add salt and boiling water, as directed on pkg. Boil 5 min. Drain and add potatoes. Add instant onion.
Turn out corned beef from cans, cut contents of each can into slices and place them on top of cooking vegetables. Over this, lay the cabbage out in 8 wedges. Dust with salt. Cover and simmer-broil 25 min., when cabbage should be tender and corned beef well-heated.
To serve, border a warm platter with wedges of cabbage. Arrange corned beef slices overlapping in center. Around these, arrange potatoes and spoonfuls of remaining vegetables. Garnish: parsley sprigs and cherry tomatoes. Pass 3-Way-Pep-Up Sauce.

BLUEBERRY GINGERBREAD SQUARES
1 pkg. gingerbread mix
1 tsp. vegetable oil
1 (1 lb.) can blueberries
1 tsp. flour
Trun contents of pkg. of gingerbread mix into 2-qt. bowl together with ingredients as given in pkg. directions. Stir in oil.
Drain canned blueberries thoroughly (save liquid to serve on pancakes). With fork, gently stir flour into blueberries and fold into gingerbread batter. Transfer to oiled 7" x 11" baking pan. Bake 30 min. in mod. oven 375 degrees F.
Set aside until almost cool. Sift over confectioner's sugar, if desired; cut in squares. Serve with butter or whipped cream cheese.

THE CHEF'S 3-WAY PEP-UP SAUCE
This might be called an "instant" sauce. Just mix together
1/2 tsp. mild table-mustard,
1/2 tsp. tomato catsup, and
1/2 tsp. mayonnaise. Et. voila!

of remaining vegetables. Garnish: parsley sprigs and cherry tomatoes. Pass 3-Way-Pep-Up Sauce.

MARY HAWORTH

Tattooed Widower Wonders If Practice Is Forbidden

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a widower somewhat past middle age, one of your faithful readers. Last summer, while vacationing in the Orient I was tattooed: An emblem on my right forearm.

I had always wanted to be tattooed; and I understand that many upperclass Englishmen are being tattooed of recent years. But to shorten the story old friends are criticizing me.

Is it so bad? Is tattooing forbidden? Are tattooed persons denied Christian burial? "Are tattoo marks considered 'graven images' at heathen significance? Please write something on the subject? N. Y.

DEAR N.Y.: For background information on the moral aspects, if any, of tattooing, I have turned to a church specialist in canon law.

This authority, though mildly skeptical of the seriousness of your inquiry, says in effect that human beings are morally obliged to show respect for the dignity of persons, a principle which includes showing due respect for the human body. And, the having oneself tattooed is not adding to the dignity of the body.

But as to whether tattoo marks are to be construed as graven images having heathen implications, the churchman says the answer to that would depend upon the individual's purpose in the given case.

For example, is one having himself tattooed supposedly as a charm against danger? What imagery is he choosing, in the emblem inked into his skin? and why?

Motivation is the key consideration, it seems. If the tattooing is obtained not for superficial reasons, but simply as reflecting a vague urge toward manliness, it isn't really harmful, morally speaking, from the orthodox Christian viewpoint. He further remarks, however, that if consulted beforehand, he certainly would counsel against going tattooed. But he didn't say that tattooing is "forbidden" by church rule, or that tattooed persons are denied Christian burial.

So I take it that, according to his unspoken inventory, you are figuratively, a "brand saved from the burning" by virtue of your harmless motivation. In short, you aren't earmarked with Satan's insignia, via the tattoo, per se.

But why don't you talk the whole thing over with a top quality confessor, endowed with wisdom, erudition and a sense of proportion. I think you really need that kind of hearing, to restore composure to your uneasy conscience. M.H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: What do you do when, after 30 years of happy marriage, your husband tells you he has been seeing a girl, but is sorry now doesn't know why he is doing, and never will see her again. He says "I am not at fault."

I want to forgive and forget; but my inner self won't let me forget. How do I go about it? The situation is driving me crazy. Please advise. E.B.

DEAR E. B.: There are no quickie remedies for well nigh mortal injuries. Infidelity in marriage instantly drives a wedge between the traitor and the spouse betrayed, even if the latter is unaware. The wedge has to do with the traitor's defensive sense of guilt.

In time, the traitor may repent, may wish to atone and eradicate the estrangement felt in his spirit. Hence he may confess to the spouse, aiming blindly thus to restore closeness. In general, the net effect is only to burden the spouse with the suffering you report.

What to do? Your dilemma calls for analytically oriented pastoral counselling help, to bring you into conscious cooperation with God's healing graces powerfully present in the church's restorative sacraments.

By that route, and by no other that I know of, you may be instrumental in totally transforming your marriage for the better, so that mistakes of the past will have lost all power to hurt. M.H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Guardian.
