Canadian, U.S. Relations Present Financial Puzzle

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

Canadian - American financial relations continue to present puzzles to the business and financial world faster than it can solve them.

No sooner is the threatening edge taken off one proposal than another takes on a dangerous look.

This was the case last week with President Kennedy's proposed new taxes on purchases of foreign securities by Americans.

Conferences between Ottawa and Washington brought announcement at the week's beginning that the taxes would not apply to new Canadian issues. This was greeted with a general sigh of relief, accompanied by a feeling that we could live with the tax on transactions on existing securities.

But in a letter to Finance Minister Gordon, released Friday, Eric Kierans, president of the Montreal Stock Exchange, said the tax on such transactions is "potentially catastrophic for Canada."

CAN'T TELL BY PAST

Mr. Kierans's argument, in brief, is that you can't judge the importance of such transactions between Canada and the United States by their past net balance.

He says that under the proposed U.S. taxes the tendency will be for transactions favoring Canada's balance-of - payments position to dry up and for those detrimental to our position to continue or increase.

As a result, he forecasts "worsening of our balance-of-payments considerably, exerting downward pressure on our stock markets and exchange rates and upward pressure on interest rates."

If the recent developments have puzzled the experts they have been downright bewilder ing to the layman.

MAKES PROPOSALS

For instance, Mr. Gordon proposed measures to reduce American Investment in Canada and, even where the proposals were considered impracticable and abandoned, they were generally regarded as aimed in the right direction.

Then President Kennedy proposed measures to reduce American Investment in Canada and his action was regarded here as akin to disaster.

So, the layman may ask, why was Gordon's aim good and Kennedy's proposals bad, from the Canadian point of view?

The answer, in brief, is that while Mr. Gordon aimed at a reduction in our reliance on American capital he certainly didn't want it shut off in any sharp fashion.

His chief immediate aim, rather than any great reduction in American investment, apparently was to stop Americans from taking over control of individual Canadian companies; and his longer-term aim was to increase Canadian ownership in Canadian subsidiaries of American companies; and in general to step up Canadian investment.

President Kennedy's proposals, on the other hand, in their original form, threatened to dry up quickly the United States as a source for Canadian borrowing; and at least it would have had the effect of making such borrowing more expensive, with the probable result of raising interest rates in Canada also.

The Kennedy proposals stih apparently will dry up much of American day-to-day trading of Canadian stock exchanges and in Mr. Kierans view, still pack "potential catastrophe" for Canada.

Apropos of the present situation, the Bank of Montreal, in its current business review, sees underlying soundness in the economies of both Canada and the United States,

Model Changes Lighten Demand For Car Steel

CLEVELAND (AP)—Now that the big three automakers are starting model changeovers, construction will be the mainstay of the steel market over the next few weeks, the magazine Steel says.

Appliance manufacturing, machinery and railway car building will provide valuable support and help offset seasonal losses in such markets as agricultural equipment, the metalworking weekly adds.

"Some mills think orders have already reached their low point; others say demand won't hit bottom for a few more weeks.

"Most observers are convinced that the market won't improve materially until the vacation season ends and automakers start turning out their 1964 models—events that are three or four weeks away."

Ingot production this week will be less than the estimated output of 1,845,000 tons last week, the magazine says. Operations are close to 60 per cent of unofficial capacity.

The magazine believes that August will be a month of declining steel production as shrinking backlogs, intensified competition and renewed emphasis on quick deliveries.

"Users will trim their stocks by about 550,000 tons—the margin by which their August consumption exceeded it at 6,250,000 tons) will exceed shipments from U.S. and foreign suppliers."

Steel's price composite on No. 1 heavy melting grade of steelmaking scrap held at $25.67 a gross ton last week. The composite on finished steel also was unchanged at $150.92 a net ton.

N.Y. Stocks Take Loss Third Week

NEW YORK (AP)—A cautious stock market, plagued by various economic doubts, took its third straight loss last week on the lightest trading of the year.

It was a moderate loss and the market still remained reasonably high in view of its tremendous recovery from the 1962 lows and the frequently-heard comment in Wall Street that a "correction" of that rise was necessary before a further substantial advance could be mounted.

Dow Jones industrial average fell 4.51 to 689.38.

Fear of a possible U.S.-wide railway strike once more dominated the stock market atmosphere early in the week. When the strike threat was temporarily averted, the market rallied briefly Thursday morning but clipped away its gains before the close.

As the week ended, stocks firmed in extremely dull trading. Oils drew consistent investment demand throughout the week and there was selective demand for other blue chips as well as some faster-moving specialties. Over-all, however, the market was still groping for fundamental support.

AVERAGE DOWN

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks declined 1.9 to 264.8.

The week's volume of 16,234,431 shares compared with 17,298,140 the previous week and was the lowest since the week ending Oct. 13, 1962, when turnover was 11,822,758 shares.

The stock market plunged sharply on Monday, declined more moderately on Tuesday, then scored a small gain on Wednesday—its first rise in 11 sessions. The early rally fizzled Thursday and stocks ended mixed. The Friday session provided a late rise, producing a small gain.

Most-active issues on the New York Stock Exchange were Chrysler, unchanged at 59¼ on 697,900 shares and Studebaker, up ⅝ at 6¾.

Most-active issues on the American exchange were Data Control Systems, off 3⅜ at 23¼ on 373,000 shares and Canadian Javelin, off 1½ at 14¼.

46 Injured In Collapse Of Footbridge

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. (AP)—Forty-six persons were injured Saturday when a footbridge over a river at a golf course collapsed.

Eighty persons toppled 18 feet into the Clinton River at the Hillcrest Country Club as spectators and golfers at the Women's Wolverine Open tournament crowded across the 200-foot-long, wooden - planked suspension bridge.

Six of the injured, including golf professional Jo Anne Prentice of Birmingham, Ala., still were in hospital Sunday. Although some suffered broken bones, none was listed as in serious condition.

A mooring snapped and all four of the bridge's four steel cables let loose at once. The bridge swayed crazily under its heavy load just before it plunged into four to six feet of water.

Because of the bridge collapse, Saturday's tournament round was cancelled.

One of the leaders in the $8,000 tournament, Miss Prentice won't be playing any more golf for a week or 10 days, a doctor said. She was shaken up and complained of abdominal pains and suffered cuts and bruises.

Immigration Minister Seen Effective Cabinet Member

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—Whenever a legalistic storm cloud appears on the horizon for the government of Prime Minister Pearson, a smiling, well-built, quiet-spoken man with a flair for precision in the language of the law is likely to be not far away.

He moves in quickly and with a few jottings of his pen often comes up with a solution which seems to fit the difficulty and smooth the way over another legal hurdle for the government.

This practitioner of the fine art of legal draftsmanship is, of course, a lawyer. He is also a former civil servant, a fledgling politician with a long Liberal background and a cabinet minister.

Citizenship Minister Guy Favreau, 46, has emerged in the Pearson cabinet as a little-known but highly-effective minister whose talent as a parliamentarian has been only barely tested, but whose talents as a government handy-man in the House of Commons is coming to be recognized.

Mr. Favreau, a native of Montreal and son of a senior executive assistant in the provincial Liberal government of the late Adelard Godbout, joined the federal civil service in 1952 on the staff of the restrictive trade practices commission.

RETURNS TO PRACTICE

By 1960, he had risen to be an assistant deputy minister of justice, one of the top legal authorities in the federal government service. Then he quit to go into private law practice in Montreal. It was reported that he was dissatisfied at that time working for the Conservative government of the day.

A few months before this year's general election he decided to enter politics and was elected in the Montreal riding of Papineau.

Now a member of the cabinet, he has emerged as the government's legal Johnny-on-the-spot. When crucial government bills are going through the House of Commons, he is usually found sitting beside the sponsoring Finance Minister Gordon or State Secretary Pickersgill.

When opposition amendments are moved, or opposition suggestions made for amendment, it is Mr. Favreau who gives them a quick glance and advises the sponsoring minister.

Last week, Mr. Favreau's name came to the fore again as one of the government's six ministerial delegates to the federal provincial conference on pensions and municipal loans. These were subjects only loosely related to his department's responsibility.

But it was clear that when it came down to the hard bargaining between the federal government and the provincial leaders behind the closed doors of the conference room, it would be Guy Favreau who would be drafting the legal phraseology.

MPS, SENATORS

though at present senators do not have the tax-free privilege of their $2,000 expense allowances.

New provision is also being made to pay a member's actual expenses of telegraph and telephone communications. The Senate and House of Commons will establish their own rules for paying the bills.

The parliamentarians will also receive free air travel passes. They now have railway passes and have free postage privileges during parliamentary sessions.

Tabled in addition to Prime Minister Pearson's resolutions on members' pay was a resolution sponsored by Justice Minister Chevrier to raise judge's salaries and create a string of new judgeships to carry the growing burden of court work. Judges of the Supreme Court of Canada now receive $22,500, and the chief justice $27,500. Superior Court judges are paid $16,900, and chief justices in the provinces $18,500. County and district court judges receive $10,500.

The amount of the increases for judges was not spelled out.

The new judicial positions being created are:

Eight in the Quebec Superior Court, two in the Nova Scotia Supreme Court, one in the New Brunswick Court of Queen's Bench, one in the B.C. Appeal Court, one in the B.C. Supreme Court, one in the Saskatchewan Court of Queen's Bench, one in the Alberta Supreme Court appeal section, and one in the Newfoundland Supreme Court.

An additional chief justice will be appointed for Nova Scotia so that province's Supreme Court can be divided between trial and appeal sections. Wartime federal finance minister James L. Ilsley now is chief justice of Nova Scotia.

TEEN-AGERS RIOT

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho (AP) -Police broke up milling mobs of teen-agers with tear gas and fire hoses late Saturday night in this north Idaho city. About 40 youths were arrested for disorderly conduct and kept overnight in the city jail. Officers said most had been drinking. Beefed-up squads of state and city police and sheriff's officers moved fast to prevent a repetition of the rioting which broke out two straight years on the eve of the final day of the Diamond Cup unlimited hydroplane races on Lake Coeur d'Alene.

ACTRESS ADMITS FORGING PRESCRIPTION

Actress Marie McDonald is escorted to a waiting automobile in Van Nuys, Calif., Saturday after pleading guilty to a charge of forging prescriptions for the pain-killing drug Percodan. The drug is described as dangerous and possibly habit forming, but not an opiate. The actress will be sentenced Aug. 23.
