Police Herd Teen-Agers From Town

By JACK GREAVES
HASTINGS (Reuters) — Britain's last summer holiday week and faded away Monday after another outbreak of teenage violence centred in this holiday resort on the southeast coast of England.

After two days of clashes between police and gangs of rowdies, police finally rounded up one of the groups and marched them out of town.

In an attempt to end further fights between the fancy-dressed Mods and leather-clad Rockers who invaded the town Sunday, police decided to run the Mods out of town.

Meanwhile the road death toll for the August bank holiday rose to 63 for the three days of the weekend—an increase of 13 over the final total last year.

An estimated 200,000 cars were expected back in London by Monday night creating a monster traffic jam.

SECOND AIRLIFT NEEDED

Hastings police, reinforced on a second airlift from London, fought a running battle keeping the Mods moving along the roads.

In beach sands, slippers, boots and pointed-ox shoes led to a second airlift from London Wednesday and the Devon Castle replica at Dunleigh Thursday before returning to Scotland.

An officer said they would not allow back hair in ones and sweaters to retrieve their motor scooters.

Earlier Monday, the bodies of two youths were found, one in Hastings and one in the resort of Margate. There was speculation whether their deaths might be connected with the gas attack.

cently reinforced its measures to ensure collection in districts near the Alberta border.

The subject of government contracts and preferential bias has given premiers cause for concern in recent months.

The body was washed up on the beach in the morning. Police said they had no evidence of foul play.

The other youth was in a large party of teen-agers. He fell over a 30-foot cliff to a concrete promenade below. Police believed it was an accident.

The teen-age misbehavior was the third major outbreak of hoodlaming at seaside resorts this year.

The feather, presented by Chief John Wakelag of the Odawa, is the highest honor the tribe can bestow.

At the presentation ceremony, which Mr. Pearson attended in full ceremonial dress, two members of one family were killed Monday night in a highway accident only a few hundred feet from their home near this Annapolis Valley community.

Wilfrid Crosep, 58, of near Paradise and his son, Ivan, 22, were killed when the car in which they were driving went out of control and hit a tree.

Mr. Crosep was killed instantly. His son died on admission to hospital at Middleton.

Another son, Frank, 15, received facial injuries in the crash.

Mr. Crosep is survived by his wife and sons Frank and Warren. Ivan Crosep, 19, lives in Alberta with the RCAF, is recovering from his wife.

MEET TODAY Quebec MPs Unhappy Over Surplus Debate

OTTAWA (CP)—Quebec Conservative MPs met Tuesday to discuss governing concern with their party's exhaustive examination of government spending authority for August and September.

One of the 10-man group said most of them are unhappy with the drawn-out supply debate, which began a week ago Monday, because it is delaying consideration of the government's maple-leaf flag resolution.

They want the flag issue to come to a head before the session taken within the Conservative party to present a more attractive vote-getting image in French Canada.

The Quebec objections are reported to be reached serious that several of the Quebec MPs are preparing to disavow formally to the party's national leadership.

Balcer (PC—Trois-Rivières), leader of the Quebec Conservatives, returned Monday from a visit to his home during which he intended to seek a way out of the growing split in the party.

He met some of his Quebec colleagues informally here Monday but no decisions were taken pending the return of other Quebec Conservatives who spent the weekend at their homes.

Key issues facing the Quebec Conservatives are reported to be:

1. Whether they should publicly disavow the party's tactics in the Commons, or make a fresh attempt within the party to let the flag issue come to a head in the Commons so each of the Conservative MPs can vote as he wishes.

2. Whether the Quebec wing can come to some understanding with the national Conservative organization on policy going into the next election campaign, or break away and seek

Defenies Any Filibuster

OTTAWA (CP)—Party leaders tried to negotiate their way out of a parliamentary impasse on the Commons floor Monday, tiding up with indications there would be a summit conference between Prime Minister Pearson and Opposition Leader Diefenbaker.

As the Commons debated for the sixth straight day the government's request for leaving spending a authority, NDP Leader Douglas proposed "a compromise" aimed at flag debate—the underlying reason what he called the current Conservative Filibuster.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, denying there is any filibuster, attacked the government's request for leaving spending a authority, NDP Leader Douglas proposed "a compromise" aimed at flag debate—the underlying reason what he called the current Conservative Filibuster.

However, he offered to meet Prime Minister Pearson "at the moment" to discuss Mr. Douglas' compromise proposal which would involve postponing a referendum on the flag until after a summer recess.

External Affairs Minister Martin, acting as mediator until Mr. Pearson returned Monday night from a visit to the province of Quebec, said Diefenbaker's contribution to the destruction of Parliament by following the present debating tactics.

MARTIN AGREES
Mr. Martin agreed to bring Mr. Douglas' "worthy suggestion" to Mr. Pearson's attention, promising careful consideration of it. He indicated doubts the Conservatives would agree by saying Conservative House Leader Gordon Churchill had already turned it down.

Mr. Douglas suggested that the government and the Conservative opposition each make concessions and agree on the following timetable:

1. A quick vote on a Conservative amendment to the government's resolution for a maple leaf flag. The amendment calls for a national referendum on the whole flag issue.

2. Passage of legislation giving the provinces a larger share of personal income tax.

3. A quick vote on a Conservative amendment to the government's resolution for a maple leaf flag. The amendment calls for a national referendum on the whole flag issue.

Move To Drop Dominion' Is Lost In Commons Vote

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons by a voice vote Monday tossed out a Liberal backbench attempt to amend the constitution changing the "Dominion of Canada" to "the federal republic of Canada."

Auguste Choquette (La Motte), who earlier in the session had sponsored a motion to delete references to the "Dominion of Canada" in the constitution, said that in his opinion the word "Dominion" is a misnomer for Canada and that the province of Quebec now is officially calling itself a state.

When Mr. Choquette's bill was called for first reading — usually a formally printed bill to be introduced and printed — it was defeated by a vote of 107 to 102. Conservative MPs shouted demands for an explanation.

Mr. Choquette said the government had decided that a referendum to that province, the whole and so he proposed replacing "dominion" with "federal state" wherever it appeared in the BNA Act.

Gordon Churchill (PC — Winnipeg South Centre), Conservative House leader, said he would assure that Mr. Choquette's oral explanation of the bill was complete.

Speaker Allan Macnaughton put the motion to introduce the bill on the floor. Mr. Churchill asked for a voice vote. There was a chorus of "noys" and "no" uttering of support in the chamber.

Speaker Macnaughton ruled the motion lost.

October Conference Key On Portable Pension Plan

By BOB TRIMBEE
JASPER, Alta. (CP) — Canada's provincial premiers agreed Monday to organize a national conference of pension experts to study methods of implementing greater portability of private pension plans.

At the same time Premier Leasage of Quebec said he would lead a constitutional study of provincial sales taxes.

Premier Roberts of Ontario said he has offered to host the pension study at Toronto in early October. No date for the meeting was announced.

"I want to emphasize first this has nothing to do with the proposed Canada Pension Plan," Mr. Roberts said. "It will only affect pensions of businesses and industries."

He said in an interview that Ontario has legislation which will come into effect Jan. 1, 1965, to allow portable private pension plans in industries in the province.

The aim is to make it possible for Canadians to work any number of jobs and take the pension benefits with them.

The conference here will also survey local preference bidding on government contracts, transfer of responsibility of Indians to the provinces from the federal government, creation of new jobs for employable persons on relief and regional planning to university services. It concludes Tuesday.

ARRIVE IN MONCTON Cattle Herd Heading For Nfld.

MONCTON — A herd of 800 cattle, destined for the Flying V ranch near Marytown, N.S., arrived at Canadian National Railways Moncton hump yard Monday afternoon en route to Newfoundland from Saskatchewan.

The herd, one of the largest ever shipped by rail within Canada in recent years, will be transferred in the Moncton yard while they wait to start the sea voyage to Newfoundland. The 150 cattle per trip will be accommodated on the CN ships which will ferry the cattle between North Sydney and Port Aux Basques.

Tuesday morning the cattle will be unloaded from their cars into fields leased by the owners near the humpy yard. The 150 were taken when they arrived in Moncton and will be shipped to Newfoundland Thursday morning.

This shipment, plus another smaller herd, will form the nucleus of a "breeding herd" which will be used to increase the production of beef cattle in Newfoundland. At present the province imports almost all of its beef from the mainland.

After arriving in Port Aux Basques the cattle will be taken by the CNR to Gables and then headed overland by cowboys on horseback to the ranch which is located 110 miles south west of the cattle's final destination.

The cattle, mostly purebred heifers valued at an estimated $200,000 on the hoof, are being shipped by Harold Lees of Kings Bay, Sask., a prairie cattleman who also is the major stockholder in the Newfoundland Ranching Co. Mr. Lees selected the cattle this year from various Saskatchewan ranches.

The company had planned to ship 200 imports from Kibbey to the ranch last spring, but ice conditions off the Newfoundland coast delayed the shipment and the owners decided to wait until now. Mr. Lees first sent cattle to the ranch in December when 100 head went by rail, ship and trail.
