Opening lead—king of clubs. This hand comes from a rubber bridge game. It offers an interesting example of good dummy play. South won the club lead and saw he could make the slam provided the spade or diamond finesse, whichever he first attempted, were successful.

Both finesses being equal in merit, he decided to give up the diamond finesse because there was a chance the queen of diamonds might fall on the first, second, or third lead of the suit. So after drawing two trumps, he cashed the A-K of diamonds and ruffed the deuce. The queen did not fall, and the slam now appeared to depend only on the location of the king of spades. But declarer still was not inclined to build all his hopes on East's having been dealt the king of spades. He saw a chance to win by deception what might be lost by relying on a finesse. He entered dummy with a trump and ruffed the jack of diamonds. Now he led the jack of clubs (not the six), giving all the appearance of a man who had no more clubs and was looking for a ruff-discard.

West found it hard to believe that South would waste the jack if he had a low club left, and fearful of leading a club which might give declarer a ruff and discard, returned a spade. So South made the slam.

If West had returned a club instead, South would have gone down. The deceptive play off. True it is that declarer played the hand throughout in the most approved style, including the opportunity he gave West to make a mistake. But we think West was in error nevertheless. He had the contract surely beaten by returning a club. Even if this did give declarer a ruff-discard the slam was sure to fall.

South had shown up with exactly six hearts and two diamonds. If he actually had only two clubs, then he must have dealt three spades. A ruff-discard would therefore still leave him a spade loser. Hence, the club return was indicated.

New Booklet Explains Some Instalment Buying Aspects

MONTREAL (CP)—About one family in every five in Canada uses instalment credit to buy durable goods such as automobiles, furniture, stoves and other household equipment. And yet many don't realize what it's all about—how finance companies work or how they figure out their charges.

To explain some of these points the Federated Council of Sales Finance Companies has published a free booklet answering major questions dealing with sales financing.

It tells how sales financing started in Canada in 1919 largely to provide a new financing service to meet a growing demand for automobiles, a demand that was dipping into a limited cash market.

FOLLOW PAY SYSTEM
 "Basically, we buy in instalment because we are paid in instalments," says the booklet. "We received our annual salaries piecemeal in weekly or monthly payments and so we buy the more expensive, durable items we require in the same way. This is both logical and economically sound."

Sales finance companies, about 150 in Canada, handle about one quarter of the total consumer credit outstanding in this country.

One study, believed to be representative, showed that of every 100 persons using instalment credit, about 50 were skilled or semi-skilled workers; 14 were clerical personnel; 13 proprietors or managers; six professional men, six either farmers, fishermen or lumbermen, five salesmen and four members of the armed services.

The finance charge is composed of:
 1. Interest, which is the cost of the money for the period used, and
 2. Service charge, which covers the cost to both the dealer and the sales finance company of extending the service.

Within a broad framework, charges vary from six to 10 per cent a year on an amount to be repaid in equal monthly instalments, and upwards of 10 per cent on certain low-balance items.

The booklet offers eight simple rules for the buying public in making an instalment purchase:
 1. Select a reliable place to make your purchase, a retailer who handles his time payment business through a reliable time payment plan sponsor.
 2. Buy a good product that will give complete satisfaction.

NOTE SERVICE COSTS
 3. When you compare prices of merchandise, also compare credit prices to which service charges have been added.
 4. Never sign a blank contract.
 5. Pay as large a down payment as you can and pay out the balance as soon as you conveniently can.
 6. Do not have too much of your monthly income tied up in instalment obligations.
 7. Do not have too many instalment purchases going at the same time.
 8. If you are buying an automobile, make sure you have the proper insurance.

Beaverbrook Will Head UNB Appeal

FREDERICTON (CP)—President Colin B. Mackay of the University of New Brunswick announced today that publisher Lord Beaverbrook will serve as honorary chairman of the university's forthcoming nation-wide appeal for $3,200,000. K. C. Irving of Saint John, N.B. president of the Irving Oil Company, will be national chairman. Dr. Mackay said the New Brunswick government has agreed to match public donations on a dollar-for-dollar basis. "Present classroom, laboratory and residence facilities are inadequate for the increased numbers of students we have had to accommodate during the past three years," Dr. Mackay said. "The current campaign is intended to alleviate this problem as well as to provide for the even larger enrolments expected in the years to come."
