A Long Career.

SIXTY YEARS IN ACTIVE JOURNALISM.

On Tuesday last, the 29th inst., Alexander Lawson, of the Yarmouth Herald, entered upon his sixtieth year of active journalism. The Boston Globe, of Monday, published a cut of the veteran editor, and an appreciative sketch, in the course of which it says:
 "To have been at one time the youngest and to be now the oldest newspaper man in the Maritime Provinces, if not in Canada, is the unique distinction of Alexander Lawson, the veteran editor and proprietor of the Yarmouth Herald, who is just about to celebrate the 59th anniversary of his paper's founding. Mr. Lawson was born in Scotland, but came to Nova Scotia when a boy and settled in Pictou, the great coal mining centre of the province. In 1833, at the age of 19, he found himself in Yarmouth, and since then became famous as one of the greatest shipping ports of the world, and while waiting was induced by some of the public-spirited Yarmouthians to remain and start another paper. This he did, issuing the first number of the Herald, with the aid of Richard Huntington, on Aug. 9, 1833. Since that time, with the exception of a slight break during the forties, caused by ill-health, Mr. Lawson has maintained his proprietorship of the paper, and has edited nearly every line that has been published in it during that long period. It is a remarkable fact, also, that there are living in Yarmouth today three men who have taken the paper constantly during the entire 59 years. These are 'constant readers' surely.
 Mr. Lawson modestly declines any particular credit for what he may have done in pursuance of his duty as a journalist, but he has certainly earned the universal respect of an age, and will be remembered by the people of Nova Scotia at large. He has done much to elevate the tone of journalism in the province, and has the proud satisfaction of knowing that not one paragraph has ever appeared in his paper to which the most feline could object. His career, too, has been temperate with a great transition period in Nova Scotia's history, much of which has had an important bearing on the interests of our own country. In 1833, when the Herald was started, there were only 10 counties in Nova Scotia, where now there are 18. There were only one store on the now bustling Main street of Yarmouth, and there was not a single church bell or church organ in the place. There was no steam communication either by land or water, and only weekly stage communication with the outside world. It was not until 1840 that the first steamship came to the coast! Indeed, there were only two short railroads in the United States then—one in New York and the other in South Carolina. All the prominent Yarmouth business men of that day have died, and a new generation and life has sprung up. Yarmouth was not a free port in those days, and all custom appointments were made in England. In fact, the people of the province were allowed to do hardly anything themselves, except think.

The Pinkertons.

The Pinkerton Detective Agency has been brought into such notoriety of late by the Homestead troubles that particulars of the formation and work of that now famous service are of interest. It was organized in 1850 by the late Allan Pinkerton in Chicago, as a body of private police or watchmen. Railways, mining and coal companies, iron works, and all sorts of corporations engaged its services. The Pinkerton Police Patrol and the National Detective Agency are under the same control, and practically form one great organization. The former has for years furnished the chief police protection for Manhattan Beach, Coney Island, the Illinois State Fair, and many great race courses, parks, etc.
 Its objects are, of course, intended to work for the welfare of proprietors and capitalists, and, in carrying out these aims, it frequently comes into collision with organized labor in various shapes. Hence the bitter feeling aroused amongst working-men, especially by the recent publication of a Pinkerton circular outlining the aims and history of the association, which was sent not long since to all the large concerns in the United States. The following extract will afford a clear insight into the principles of the organization:
 "At this time, when there is so much dissatisfaction among the laboring classes and secret labor societies are organizing throughout the United States, we suggest whether it would not be well for railroad companies and other corporations, as well as individuals who are extensive employers of labor, to keep a close watch for designing men among their own employees, who, in the interest of secret labor societies, are inducing their employees to join these organizations and eventually to cause a strike. It is frequently the case that by taking a matter of this kind in hand in time and discovering the ringleaders and dealing promptly with them, serious trouble may be avoided in the future."
 Corporations and individuals, desirous of ascertaining the feelings of their employees, and whether they are likely to engage in societies, are advised in this document to obtain the services of Pinkerton's detectives. It can easily be imagined, therefore, how bitter would be the hostility between such a body and the laborers whom it was used to crush or coerce. And we can hardly wonder, whilst deeply regretting their cruelty of action, that the strikers at Homestead have allowed their bitterness of feeling to get the better of their manliness and common sense.
 But, in the opinion of the Empire, the law will probably intervene, as is now being demanded, and declare such an organization illegal. Of course the employers have a right to look after their interests as well as the workmen, but they certainly should not be allowed to use private bodies of armed detectives to control and watch their employees, and it is a wonder, with all the boasted freedom of American institutions, that such a practice has been so long tolerated there. In Canada or any other country under British laws, the attempt to use a private armed force outside of the regular authorities would at once be put down with a high hand.

"They thought I must die."
"THE STRONGEST STATEMENTS COULD NOT TELL HALF IT HAS DONE FOR ME."
Hereditary Liver Trouble,
ENLARGEMENT OF THE LIVER,
 Diagnosed by the best Physicians, CURED.
 GENTS—My father died of Consumption of the Liver, many in my family have died with the same disease, and a large part of the time for the past two years I have been very sick, no appetite, bowels alternating between Constipation and Diarrhoea, pains all over my body, and severe pains all through my Liver. So nervous I could not sleep, and my Physician said I had Enlargement of the Liver.
 The day before I commenced the use of SKODA'S REMEDIES, I had two different Physicians call upon me. People thought I must die. I had distorted so much and taken so many different kinds of patent medicines, without any benefit, that when SKODA'S DISCOVERY was brought away to me, I threw it away as a humbug, and thought it was a waste of money.
 Soon I commenced to gain my appetite increased; from being weak, and feeble I began to get stronger; my bowels assumed a natural condition; sweet and refreshing sleep came to me at night; I began to increase rapidly in flesh.
 I have now taken less than a full course (six bottles) of SKODA'S DISCOVERY, and I feel as well as I have ever felt. The strongest statement I could make would not tell half your wonderful remedies have done for me.
 Respectfully yours,
 ROCKLAND, ME. Mrs. P. H. Lane.

Lady Henry Somerset has just completed arrangements for starting a new women's paper, to be called the White Ribbon. She herself will act as editor-in-chief, but will have the assistance of an experienced journalist. The aim of the new periodical will be to deal with women's work in every form, at home and abroad, and with such outside topics as temperance, the hours of labor, and thrift, in the relation to the weaker sex.
 The capital of the venture is to be £10,000.
 The original of the London correspondent of the Birmingham Post, and there are already ample signs that it will be raised with ease.

 English Paper.

A sad blow has fallen upon the English Presbyterian mission in Formosa, through the sudden removal of one of its most promising medical missionaries, Dr. Gavin Russell, intelligence of whose early death has just been received by telegraph. Dr. Russell was sent out to Formosa only four years ago, at the expense of the late Rev. W. R. Harbour, M. A., Bonksaid. Mr. Harbour felt so deeply interested in Dr. Russell's work that he bequeathed the sum of £10,000 to perpetuate it,
 the interest to go to Dr. Russell's support, and after him to any successor who might be appointed to the same field. Dr. Russell's work, which was carried on at Tsa-sia, a distance of five days' travel from Tai-wan-foo,
 the headquarters of the mission, was most successful, upwards of three thousand patients being treated by him annually. His services were so highly appreciated by the Formosans that he was frequently asked to visit at the homes of the gentry.
