DEATH ON

Continued from page 1. ness houses of Bourke and Son and Co., then John R. Bourke, Norton, Bros. and afterwards Norton and Fennell. The firm of Fennell and Chandler was formed in 1892, and the firm name was continued by Mr. Chandler after he took over the business on his own account. Under his management it became one of the best known hardware establishments in the Province. Mr. Chandler was a son of Mr. Edward Chandler, Southport, and Mrs. Chandler, the former Miss Jane Crawford, a direct descendant of the famous Scottish hero William Wallace. As an ardent horseman he was widely known for his importation from California of the famous trotter, Lusty Frisco. He was a firm believer in trotters and showed little patience with the pacers. All the horses which he subsequently owned and helped train were trotters. Among the better known locally was the Island-bred Lusticia. Mr. Chandler also owned the famous Maritime sire, Captain Jackson. A Liberal in politics, he had unsuccessfully contested several Provincial elections in Queen's County where he sought the seat as a representative from Fort Augustus in the Third District. Born in Southport, he received his early education at the village school there before moving to the city with his family. He then began his business career with a course at a business school here and entered the hardware world where he remained for the balance of his life. Mr. Chandler was a member of the Central Christian Church and was active for many years in the Church's activities. He was born in 1873 and would have been 89 had he lived until January 24 of next year. Surviving are his wife, the former Miss Celia Shaw, and two sons, Lieut. Col. R. C. Chandler and Mr. Clifford Chandler, both of this city. The funeral will be held this afternoon at 2.30 from the Cutcliffe Funeral Home with interment at Sherwood Cemetery.

Christmas Services At Summerside

Yesterday in Summerside the churches observed Christmas Sunday with appropriate music. At the First Baptist Church the music at the morning service included the anthems "Christmas Day" by Gounod and "That Glorious Song" by Louise Stairs with special parts taken by Mrs. Clarence Mercer, Miss Beth Harper and Mrs. J. Garth Toombs. Mr. James Peach was organist and the minister, Rev. W. A. Harper, gave an inspiring talk on "Christmas Within". In the evening a candle lighting service was presented by the C. G. I. T. under the direction of the leader, Mrs. A. H. Lamont. Those with speaking parts were Elizabeth Strong, Joyce Jenkins, Shirley Morrison and the candle-lighters were Joan Smith, Kathleen Morrison and Hope Jenkins. In the morning at Trinity United Church the anthem "Christmas Awake" by Maunder was sung by the choir with Miss Mary Gellard, organist and Mrs. L. M. Callbeck and Mr. Gordon MacDonnell soloists. The minister, Rev. C. D. Matheson, gave a thought-provoking sermon on "The Name Of Jesus". The music of the evening service was the cantata "Petit Noel" presented by the Junior Choir with Herbert Crockett as organist and Mr. Ralph Emory as director. The vocal soloists were, Helen Tuestis, Wilburta McFarlane, Janice Inman, Audrey Wood, Roberta Clark, Birdie and Ruth Cairns. A duet was rendered by Roberta MacFarlane and Roberta Clark. At the morning service of the Church of the Nazarene, Rev. David Morrison based his remarks on "The Angels Message" with a continuation of the subject at the evening worship. Appropriate Christmas hymns were sung at both services. Miss Edna Lewis was the organist. Rev. J. Donald MacKay of the Presbyterian Church gave a prophetic sermon based on the text "In the beginning God" the Junior Girls Choir, under the direction of Mr. Thomas Hall with Mrs. Cleve Whelan organist, sang four Christmas carols previous to the regular morning service. The anthems "The First Christmas Morn" and "Christians Awake" were rendered by the choir with Mr. Hall soloist. In the evening a candlelight service was held opening with carols sung by the Junior Girls Choir. The anthems were "A Star Was His Cradle" and "There's A Song In The Air". Rev. W. J. Weale of the Church of Christ read the scripture story which was interspersed with the following vocal selections: "We Three Kings Of The Orient Are", "The First Noel", "The Silent Night", "Away In A Manger" and "The First Noel". The vocal solo "Down From His Glory" was rendered by the minister with Miss Evelyn MacLure as organist. At the evening service the boys and girls of the Sunday School presented a play on the birth of Christ. The music at the service was based on "The Perfect Gift" found in the text St. John 3:16. At St. Paul's Church the regular Sunday Masses were celebrated and on Christmas eve midnight mass will be celebrated.

Financial Crisis Is Major Problem Facing Churchill

By Alan Harvey (Canadian Press Staff Writer) LONDON, Dec. 23 - (CP) - The return to power of Winston Churchill's Conservative Party provided the decisive event of Britain's political year in 1951. It marked the end of the first epoch of Socialist majority rule and set new minds to work on another crisis in the country's financial fortunes. In the Oct. 25 general election, the Conservatives gained a majority over all other parties of nearly 20 seats in the House of Commons compared with a single-figure majority for Labor in the pre-election parliament. The Conservative margin was smaller than many observers had expected but the first weeks of the new parliament suggested it would prove enough for effective government, thus ending the melancholy deadlock between the two big parties which had existed since the stalemate election Feb. 23, 1950. Churchill, Prime Minister for the first time by the votes of the people, was summoned by parliament to be wartime premier-moved swiftly to name a new cabinet in which Anthony Eden as foreign secretary was No. 2 man. A novel feature of the 16-member cabinet was the appointment to important co-ordinating posts of non-party men such as Lord Ismay, Lord Cherwell and Lord Leathers. Dubbed "Overlords" Lord Woolton, Lord Reading and Lord De La Warr were other prominent peers in the government and promptly won the popular title of "overlords". Labor, in opposition for the first time since its 1945 victory at the polls, criticized the new Conservative cabinet as representing "government of the people, for big business, by the lords". Two Conservatives, who broadly dominated British politics in the years between the two world wars, came back to power at a time of financial crisis. At the opening of the 40th parliament, Nov. 8, Churchill promised a "full and frank" statement on economic difficulties he described as worse than those encountered in the devaluation crisis of 1949 and in many ways worse than those of the convertibility crisis of 1947. Next afternoon the 11-day-old Conservative administration announced drastic measures of austerity to ease the drain on her gold and dollar reserves—a reduction by nearly $1,000,000,000 in overseas spending, a curtailment of new building and strategic stockpiling, and fiscal steps to make money dearer for borrowers at home. These were described as "first-aid" measures pending other plans for halting inflation which the government promised it would try to work out during a two-month adjournment of parliament, starting early in December. Richard Butler, Chancellor of the Exchequer, grimly said that unless Britain quickly stops living beyond her means her people would find themselves "bankrupt, idle and hungry". On The Spot It was an ironic situation for the Conservatives. Churchill, who had long campaigned on a cry of "set the people free", found himself obliged as Prime Minister to continue and occasionally to extend the Socialist apparatus of control and restriction. The Socialists charged the new government with breaking its election pledges. They said the Tories had promised red meat and then cut off Christmas food bonuses. The government replied that the Socialists had left such a mess there was no other course. One Conservative member said the country had averted financial catastrophe under the Labor Government by only a "hair's breadth". The Socialists under former Prime Minister Clement Attlee, awarded the Order of Merit during the year, appeared generally to be biding their time in opposition. Although defeated in the October election, they had polled more votes than any other single party. Some supporters expressed hope their enforced absence from office would provide a breathing space in which to work out political theories replacing those which time and experience of political power had shown to be unworkable or inefficient. There were two other decisive events for British socialism in

Believe Russians Could Be Held At The Rhine

(What happens if war comes? Two Associated Press correspondents inside Germany put this question to Western commanders. Here is their summary of the military position as told to Daniel De Luce, who covered the Second World War from the Polish conquest to the Nazi collapse, and George Boulwood, former lieutenant-colonel who fought and was wounded with the British forces in the Normandy landings.) (By Daniel De Luce and George Boulwood) WITH ALLIED FORCES IN GERMANY, Dec. 23 - (AP)—If Russia suddenly attacks, Allied commanders believe they are strong enough now to hold on the Rhine. A year ago, the prospect was a heading retreat to the Pyrenees and the Brittany peninsula. The idea that most of Europe would have to be lost to Russia before it could be saved is now out of date. A massive buildup of Allied ground forces in Germany has been carried through in 1951. Troop strength has more than doubled. The United States had only 40,000 combat effectives here at the start of the year. Now there are 200,000. Britain has well over 100,000. Weakness In Air In the months immediately ahead, the big Western weakness in Germany is not the ground but in the air. The Russians have more and better planes here. In ground combat capability, the Allies have reached parity with the Soviet army group in East Germany for the first time since 1945. This was possibly because no fresh divisions were sent by the Kremlin to Gen. Vasily Chuikov. However, some of his old divisions, which were 70 per cent of their size on paper, have been increased to 75 per cent. The 14 strong Allied divisions in West Germany are considered a match in size and firepower for the 22 Soviet infantry and armored divisions opposite them. The Allies have more men in secret police chiefs. It is corroborated by reports from Europeans who escaped from Communist slave camps. The basic paper, which the exiles consider the most criminal, was signed by General Serov, the deputy minister for U. S. S. R. state security, Jan. 21, 1941, at Dzerzhinski Plaza 2, Moscow. The seven-chapter document tells Middle European Communists how to get rid of people in other political parties. The big weapon was, and is, deportations of people from their homeland to remote regions of the Soviet Union, usually to slave camps. The pattern for deportation seems to be the same, as it spread from one country to another—from the Baltics, down through Poland, Czechoslovakia and the Balkans. Letters and reports from escapees say the family to be snatched is taken in early-morning hours to a railroad station, and locked in cattle cars. They travel for as much as six weeks, and go for days without food. Refinement of Cruelty The refinement of cruelty lies in the original Serov orders found by the Lithuanians. He said, "In view of the fact that a large number of deportees must be arrested and placed in special cars... it is necessary to execute the deportation without informing them of the separation confronting them." Serov goes on to order, "The moving of the entire family to the station should be done in one vehicle, and only at the station should the head of the family be placed separately from his family in a railway car." Papers found in Estonia listed the sort of people the Communists should deport. They included: Owners of factories, business men, owners of real estate and large farms, ship owners, members of the former aristocracy, top government workers, army officers, down to "non-com." police men, Zionists, free masons, persons in the diplomatic service, people whose relatives lived in foreign countries.

Five Naval Ratings Die In Accident

TRURO, N. S., Dec. 23—(CP)—A brutal highway accident has taken the lives of five young navy men and brought Christmas sadness to widely-separated Canadian homes. An inquest began here Saturday into the deaths of the five ratings, killed when their coupe smashed head-on into a truck near Steviacke, on the main Halifax artery. The inquest was adjourned to Jan. 4 after three witnesses gave evidence. Two of the witnesses were navy men who identified the dead and the third was Dr. Seymour MacKenzie Jr. of Truro, who said all the men died from fractures of the skull. Dead are: OS Gordon David Ryan, 18, Vancouver; OS Jack Michael, 21, Rossland, B. C.; AB Fred Allen Peters, 21, Grand Falls, N.B.; Brockville Willette MacLaren, 19, whose widow is stationed with the 3650 W. A. F. Squadron at Sampson Air Base, Quebec, N. Secret Orders Reveal Soviet Deportation Plans

By Sigrid Arne WASHINGTON, Dec. 23 - (AP) - Exiled Democratic leaders from Iron Curtain countries say they have uncovered secret Communist orders that show Moscow planned to get rid of groups of Middle European people even before the Second World War started. The papers are published under the title "Human Freedom Is Being Crushed" by the Central and Eastern European Conference. The conference, a group of once-pacifist political leaders from Middle Europe who opened a Washington office, have a grapevine into the silence behind the Iron Curtain. It includes men from Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland, Rumania and Yugoslavia.

Orders To Secret Police

This story of the Communist plan to wipe out sections of Middle Europe populations is revealed by Soviet orders typed on Moscow stationery, and intended only for secret police chiefs. The orders were good throughout the year, it closed with declining prices for both eggs and poultry meat. The lower prices in the main are due to surpluses of the product over immediate consumptive requirements. There has always been a period throughout the poultry season when a surplus existed with declining prices. This year is no different than others. "There is no doubt", Mr. Nash states, "that there will be a greater production of eggs in Canada in 1952 than in 1951 but it is believed that if all producers, hatcherymen, and dealers face up to the task of providing a market for any surplus product which accumulates, 1952 will again be a profitable one for those engaged in the production of poultry products."

Profitable Year For Poultry Products

The year 1951 proved a profitable one for those engaged in the production of poultry products, reports Mr. F. M. Nash. Prices were good and a ready market was at hand for the product. In a way, it was a record year. Baby chick sales increased 20 per cent, egg production 6 per cent and poultry meat 25 per cent over 1950. It is true feed prices advanced but not the same extent as poultry products. Feed prices were up 4 per cent over 1950 but egg prices advanced 26 per cent and poultry meat 8 to 12 per cent. The average price paid for eggs, basis Grade A Large, was 51c per dozen, an advance of 11c over 1950. The average price paid for poultry meats was higher, being 34c for live chicken and 27c for fowl, an advance of two and three cents respectively over last year. Although prices for poultry pro-
