STRICT ATTENTION

to Business, Honesty and Square Dealing, and paying Cash every time, is what has placed to the front of all competitors, in CLOTHING, HATS, &c.

He does not advertize to sell goods at cost, but he guarantees to sell from 10 to 25 per cent less than those who do advertize to sell at cost.

He does not try to deceive the people by making a big blow and offering paltry rewards, but tries to do things right and has the goods to back him up in what he advertizes.

He has now about 6,500 HATS and $4,000 worth of CLOTHING, which he guarantees to sell from 10 to 25 per cent less than any house in the trade. A lot of this Clothing was bought less than half price, and will be sold less than half price.

He does not ask the people to believe his advertisement until they see his prices; he knows then they will believe, and knows that the goods and prices back him up every time.

All goods freely shown, or sent to any part of the town.

Please don't forget to call.

"As Others See Us."

(Correspondence Montreal Gazette.)

On Thursday, the 22nd July, at 5 p. m., the good ship Bonavista, Capt. D. Anderson commanding, left Montreal with thirty-seven cabin passengers. The weather was fine and cool for the season, and the time was pleasantly filled until we reached Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, which we did about 5 o'clock on Sunday afternoon.
Here many of the passengers landed. Some went to the Rankin House, others to the Osborne and more to the Revere, and all were soon fixed for the night, and the good ship with those bound for Pictou and Newfoundland, with whom we parted with regret, were left on board. The portion of the cargo intended for the Island was discharged after midnight, and about daylight the Bonavista was off for Pictou. Charlottetown does not impress the traveller landing on a Sunday evening as a very busy or enterprising city. The houses look old, at least those seen from the landing. They are mostly shingled instead of clapboarded, and the number of brick and stone dwellings seem in a very large minority. Most of the passengers are bound for the watering places on the north side of the Island.
So far as we can learn there are three places contesting fairly for the palm in popular favor. These are generally reached either from Charlottetown or Summerside, the point where the Miramichi lands her passengers for Prince Edward Island by train to Hunter River. The first is Tra-calle beach, on which there is a very good hotel, but this year it is not by any means full, indeed the number of visitors may be counted at this time on the fingers of one's hands. The second in order, travelling east, is Brackley Point. Here the accommodation for visitors is confined to one or two farm houses. The place is very popular and the number of visitors is limited only by the available accommodation, Shaw's being quite full all the season, and last, but by no means the least, is the Seaside Hotel, Rustico, kept by Mr. Newson, and accommodating forty or fifty guests, and the facilities are all too limited for the increasing popularity of the place. The house is pleasantly situated on a rising ground overlooking a bay. There is a long pier running out from the foot of the bank, where the hotel stands. There is a covered platform where the delightful and invigorating sea breezes may be enjoyed, and boats are available for reaching the bathing.
There is also a bowling alley attached to the hotel. The beach on the island opposite the hotel is sand and the facilities for bathing safe and in every way enjoyable. The distance is rather a drawback, but to young people the row over to the island and the scamper across it are not unenjoyable. The guests at the hotel are made up in large part of people who have been going to Rustico for years, and this fact adds much to the home feeling of comfort, and tends greatly to add to the attractions of the place. What Rustico would be without the bard and professor, the captain, the doctors and others, is hard to conceive.
The house is well kept, scrupulously clean, the table very fair, and the efforts of Mrs.
Newson to contribute to the comfort of guests unceasing. A record of one day may not prove uninteresting, as showing how time is spent at the seaside. Breakfast at 8 and 9.30, a bell is rung and all flock to the bowling alley. Here two fair captains select sides and a contest is entered on, the several players being criticized with much warmth, and if sometimes a little severely, always given and received with great good nature and much merriment.
The game over and the result announced, the bell again rings, and the boats are taken for the island. This occupies the time until dinner. The afternoon is given up to rambles, drives, and sauntering, some of the more energetic returning to the bowling alley. Tea at 6, and the evening is spent with music, cards, readings and other amusements. At 11 the lights are put out in the drawing room. There is no liquor sold in the house, and for a family the objections to hotel life are all absent.

A Ghastly Struggle.

A despatch from Louisville, Ky., says:— Samuel Reedy was fortunate enough to win considerable money on the recent election and a large amount of it was paid to him on the night of the 11th. On his way home and when near old western cemetery, at Sixteenth and Jefferson streets, he was met by two men who told him ghoul had opened one of the large vaults and desecrated it.
Reedy was induced to go in and inspect the vault. When they reached the west end of the cemetery Reedy saw that a vault was standing open and from it came a damp, mouldy odor. He entered with his guides and felt for some matches with which to make a light, when he was seized from behind and the muzzle of a pistol pressed to his ear. A cool, low voice informed him that he must give up his money or have his brains blown out. Reedy was for a moment paralyzed with fear and a cold sweat broke out on his brow. A hand was placed in his pocket to relieve him of any money he might have, and this action aroused him.
Feeling that the pistol had moved away from his head, he began to struggle with the would-be robbers. Over and over the floor the struggling men rolled, and everything in the interior of the vault was upset in the scuffle, and an unearthly racket was raised. The noise attracted passers by, and on their approach the would-be felons suddenly decamped, leaving Reedy on the floor of the vault exhausted, but still in possession of his money.

About Advertising.

If you can arouse curiosity by an advertisement it is a great point gained. The fair sex don't hold all the curiosity in the world.

A thing worth doing is worth doing well.
A thing worth advertising is worth advertising well. A newspaper worth advertising in once is worth making a contract with.

It is a mistaken notion that a fine store in an eligible location, surrounded by attractive signs, is a superior advertisement; for the experience of the most enterprising merchants is that it pays better to spend less in rent and more in advertising.

The enterprising advertiser proves that he understands how to buy, because in advertising he knows how to sell.

Bread is the staff of human life, and advertising is the staff of business.

A simple card may profitably stand years without change, but a sensational advertisement should be changed as often as you can get the printer to do it.

A heavy advertisement once is more than quadrupled in value by a card, published for a few months later, giving your address.

You can't eat enough in a week to last you a year, and you can't advertise on that plan either.

Now is the time to think about advertising, and reflection should be followed by judicious action.

To make a man realize an idea as you realize it, it is what is necessary to make him understand his needs. Advertisements should aim to place a matter so clearly before the public that they see it as clearly as the advertiser does.

Enterprising people are beginning to learn the value of advertising the year around. The persistency of those who are not intimidated by the cry of "dull times," but keep their names ever before the public, will surely place them on the right side in the end.

He Still Made a Profit.

A sailor, having purchased some medicine of a well known druggist demanded the price.

"Why," said the druggist, "I cannot think of charging you less than seven and sixpence."

"Well, I'll tell you what," replied the sailor, "take off the odd and I'll pay you the even."

"Well," returned the druggist, "I've won't quarrel about trifles."

The sailor laid down sixpence, and was walking off when the druggist reminded him of his mistake.

"No mistake at all, sir. Six is even and seven is odd all the world over. So I wish you a very good day."

"Get you gone," said the druggist. "I have made fourpence out of you anyhow!"

Early on Wednesday morning a sharp shock of earthquake was felt at Ste. Marguerite, Ste. Adèle and Ste. Anne. A farm was blown down and other lighter buildings slightly damaged. The shocks lasted about six minutes. A violent wind and hail storm followed.
