THE PIRATE.

By Sir Walter Scott.

CHAPTER XI.

Mordaunt had sometimes observed his father's marked dislike to the female sex, but had never before heard him give vent to it in terms so determined and precise. He replied that the daughters of Magnus Troil were no more to him than any other females in the islands; "they were even of less importance," he said, "for they had broken off their friendship with him without assigning any cause."

"And you go to seek the renewal of it?" answered his father. "Silly moth, that hast once escaped the taper without singeing thy wings, are you not contented with safe obscurity of these wilds, but must hasten back to the flame, which is sure at length to consume thee? But why should I waste arguments in deterring thee from thy inevitable fate! Go where thy destiny calls thee."

On the succeeding day, which was the eve of the great festival, Mordaunt set forth on his road to Burgh-Westra, pondering alternately on the injunctions of Norma—the ominous words of his father—and the inauspicious auguries of Swertha and the Ranzelman of Jarlsbof—and not without experiencing that gloom with which so many concurring circumstances of ill omen combined to oppress his mind.

"It bodes me but a cold reception at Burgh-Westra," said he; "but my stay shall be the shorter. I will but find out whether they have been deceived by this sedating stranger, or whether they have acted out of pure caprice of temper and love of change of company. If the first be the case, I will vindicate my character, and let Captain Cleveland look to himself;—if the latter, why, then, good-night to Burgh-Westra and all its inmates."

As he mentally meditated this last alternative, hurt pride, and a return of fondness for those to whom he supposed he was bidding farewell for ever, brought a tear into his eyes, which he dashed off hastily and indignantly, as, mending his pace, he continued on his journey.

The weather was now serene and undisturbed. Mordaunt made his way with an ease that formed a striking contrast to the difficulties which he encountered when he last travelled the same route; yet there was a less pleasing subject for comparison within his own mind.

"My breast," he said to himself, "was then against the wind, but my heart within was serene and happy. I would I had now the same careless feelings, were they to be bought by battling with the severest storm that ever blew across these lonely hills."

With such thoughts he arrived about noon at Harfa, the habitation, as the reader may remember, of the ingenious Mr. Yellowley. Our traveller had, upon the present occasion, taken care to be quite independent of the niggardly hospitality of this mansion, which was now become infamous on that account through the whole island, by bringing with him, in a small knapsack, such provisions as might have sufficed for a longer journey. In courtesy, however, or rather, perhaps, to get rid of his own disquieting thoughts, Mordaunt did not fail to call at the mansion, which he found in singular commotion. Triptolemus himself, invested with a pair of large jack-boots, went clattering up and down stairs, screaming out questions to his sister and his serving-woman Tronda, who replied with shriller and more complicated screeches. At length Mrs. Baby herself made her appearance, her venerable person enuded with what was then called a Joseph, an ample garment, which had once been green, but now betwixt stains and patches, had become like the vestiture of the patriarch whose name it bore—a garment of divers colors. A steeple-crowned hat, the purchase of some long-past moment, in which vanity had got the better of avarice, with a feather which had stood as much wind and rain as if it had been part of a seaman's waring, made up her equipment, save that in her hand she held a silver-mounted whip of antique fashion. This attire, as well as the appearance of Mrs. Barbara Yellowley, seemed to bespeak that she was prepared to take a journey, and cared not, as the saying goes, who knew that such was her determination.

She was the first that observed Mordaunt on his arrival, and she greeted him with a degree of mingled emotion. "Be good to us!" she exclaimed, "if here is not the canty culliant that wears you thing about his neck, and that snapped up our goose as light as if it had been a sand-lavrock!" The admiration of the gold chain, which had formerly made so deep an impression on her mind, was marked in the first part of her speech, the recollection of the untimely fate of the smoked goose was commemorated in the second clause. "I will lay the burden of my life," she instantly added, "that he is ganging our gate."

"I am bound for Burgh-Westra, Mrs. Yellowley," said Mordaunt.

"And blithe will we be of your company," she added—"it's early day to eat; but if you liked a barley scone and a drink of bland-nathless, it is ill travelling on a full stomach, besides quelling your appetite for the feast that is hiding you this day; for all sort of prodigality there will doubtless be."

Mordaunt produced his own stores, and, explaining that he did not love to be burdensome to them on this second occasion, invited them to partake of the provisions he had to offer. Poor Triptolemus, who seldom saw half so good a dinner as his guest's luncheon, threw himself upon the good cheer, like Sancho on the scum of Canacho's kettle, and even the lady herself could not resist the temptation, and "with something like a sense of shame," she had let the fire out," she said, "for it was a pity wasting fuel in so cold a country, and so she had not thought of getting any thing ready, as they were to set out so soon; and so she could not but say, that the young gentleman's nacket looked very good; and besides, she had some curiosity to see whether the folks in that country cured their beef in the same way they did in the north of Scotland." Under which combined considerations, Dame Baby made a hearty experiment on the refreshments which thus unexpectedly presented themselves.

The Manitoba Census.

(Monetary Times.)

Some interesting facts may be gathered from the census returns of the province of Manitoba for 1886, as, for example, that of the population only 3,319 belong to the commercial class, while 22,882 appertain to the agricultural. There are 2,224 in the domestic class, and 3,715 in the industrial and only 1,858 in the professional. The total number of industrial establishments in the province is 545, which employ 22,208 hands; capital invested $3,411,133; value of products, $5,399,466. Of these the chief are flour and grist mills, 37 in number, value of products, over two millions; foundries and boiler shops, carriage making establishments, planing mills, saddle and harness shops, saw-mills (40) turning out $350,000 worth of lumber per annum; planing mills (4) with $102,000 product; sash and blind factories, product $158,000; tin and sheet iron shops, tanneries, only three; one woollen mill, a linseed oil mill, 42 lime kilns, seven breweries, turning out $231,000 worth of beer per annum; three creameries and ten cheese factories, furriers' shops, which turn out $87,000 worth of goods, &c., &c.

There are more than seventeen thousand (17,571) occupiers of land and of these more than 16,000 are owners; occupiers of 80 acres and under, 1,429; of 81 acres to 160—7,856; 161 acres to 320—7,151; of 321 acres to 640—917. There are over 200 persons who occupy over 640 acres each.

Total of lands occupied, 4,171,224 acres; and of lands cultivated, 752,571. Acres broken in fall of 1885 and spring of 1886, 182,440; acres seeded in that year, 593,991.

We understand the following to be the product of the year, in the province, of furs and pelts, viz.:—Beaver, 1,127; bear, 350; fisher, 79; fox, 2,582; lynx, 1,117; marten, 214; mink, 5,365; muskrat, 36,084; otter, 204; skunk, 2,989; wild cat, 105; wolf, 631; wolverine, 34; cariboo, 86; deer, antelope, etc., 238; moose, 155; other furs and pelts, 1,029.

There are 28,406 Presbyterians among the population, 23,306 English Churchmen, 14,651 Roman Catholics, 14,648 Methodists, 3,296 Baptists.

Liability of Husband for Debts of Wife.

The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania has rendered a decision of interest concerning the liability of husbands for debts of wives. The case was one in which it appeared that a furniture dealer had sold goods to a wife after the husband had notified him not to sell her goods on his credit. The court before which the case was tried held that the jury was competent to decide whether the husband had not, by his conduct, ratified the action of his wife, and thus rendered himself liable, and judgment was given for the plaintiff. The Supreme Court reversed the decision of the court below, holding that it was error to leave the question mentioned to the jury to decide, that more acquiescence on the part of the husband was not sufficient to overcome the force of positive notice not to give the credit, that the husband was under no obligation to return the goods or to notify the dealer that he might remove them, and that mere acquiescence in the delivery of the goods to the wife did not amount to acquiescence in a delivery to himself.

Give Them a Chance!

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, croup, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend upon this for certain.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain; and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind.
